MONARCHIST PLOT FOR REVOLUTION IN GERMANY DISCOVERED

SAMUEL O'FALLON DIES AT HOME IN OREGON, MISSOURI

House Speaker and Supreme Court Candidate Succumbs to Ailments Incident to Influenza.

OREGON, Mo., July 8.—Samuel F. O'Fallon, speaker of the State House of Representatives in the 1919 and 1921 sessions, and a candidate for the Republican nomination for Judge of the State Supreme Court, died at his home here today of a complication of diseases, following influenza. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon.

His death ends the contest for the Republican nominations for the Supreme Court Judgeships, in Division No. 2 of the court. Two nominations are to be made for Division No. 2, and there were three candidates, Judge Edward Higbee, Francis M. Hayward of Kansas City, and O'Fallon. The nominations now will go to Judge Higbee and Hayward, as the filing time for candidates has closed.

Recently Endorsed.

St. Louis Republican lawyers, in the poll on judicial candidates, conducted by the Bar Association, recently indorsed Judge Higbee and O'Fallon for the nominations for the Supreme Court, Division No. 2.

O'Fallon was a farmer and stock raiser, as well as a lawyer. He was a native of Minnesota, and had lived in Missouri since 1870. He was Prosecuting Attorney and Probate Judge of Holt County, and served as a confidential inspector for the Secretary of the Interior, making inquiries for the department in timber and land fraud and oil lease cases in several states.

Was Roosevelt Appointee.

He was appointed by President Roosevelt as an inspector of Indian schools, and served five years in this work. He was a member of the Thirty-ninth, Fortieth, Forty-second, Fiftieth and Fifty-first General Assemblies, and Speaker of the last two. He served twice on Statute Revision Committees.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 8.—Gov. Hyde announced, on learning of Speaker O'Fallon's death, that he would name a committee of three members of the House and three members if the Senate to attend the funeral.

60 PASSENGERS MISS BOAT WHEN IT SAILS AN HOUR EARLY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 8.—More than 60 second-class passengers of the giant liner, Majestic, were left behind when she sailed an hour ahead of schedule today to take advantage of the high tide.

The advanced sailing had been widely advertised, but many of her passengers apparently did not read the ads and arrived at the pier just as she was casting off. Those left behind were taken by the steamer Zeland, which sailed at noon, but will arrive three or four days later than the Majestic.

Thirty-six of them refused to sail on the smaller boat, however, and declared they would sue the White Star Line.

The Majestic carried 2038 passengers. About 5000 persons sailed on other ships today.

BERLIN, July 8.—Germany not only faces economic and financial disaster, but armed revolution. On the heels of the announcement today that Chancellor Wirth will ask for a moratorium on the reparation payments, a monarchist plot of even greater proportions than was previously suspected, and coming very near the persons of the ex-Kaiser and the Crown Prince, has been disclosed.

The Deutsche Volkische group of the Deutsche Nationale Volkspartei," which has constantly advocated the Kaiser's restoration and is known to be in continuous touch with Doorn and Weiringen, where he and others of his family are in exile, was caught red-handed preparing arms and ammunition caches in the region about Madgeburg and about Hamburg. The "murder bund" responsible for Foreign Minister Walter Rathenau's death is also involved.

Would Restore Hohenzollerns.

That all the Deutsche Volkische group knew or approved of the assassination plans is extremely unlikely, but that all were prepared for a counter revolutionary move to restore the Hohenzollerns is borne out by the large quantities of arms found, which evidently comprise but a small portion of those hidden.

About Madgeburg were found 600 rifles, 16 machine guns and several large cases of automatics and hand grenades. There was sufficient ammunition for several weeks' fighting. It is also known that there are other caches not yet discovered.

In the Hamburg region were found hundreds of rifles, cases of automatics and hand grenades and enough field gray uniforms and steel helmets to outfit a regiment.

All these discoveries were made as a result of the activity of local Republicans in districts like East Prussia, Silesia and Bavaria.

It is impossible at this time to uncover all the ramifications of the plot because state officials themselves protect the conspirators.

There are not enough contraband arms, it is believed, to cope with the Reichswehr, if the Reichswehr remained faithful to the republic, but with the simultaneous arming of monarchists in various sections it was hoped that local garrisons could be won over.

Many Revolts Planned.

The purpose, it is said, was not to attempt another Kapp Putsch, but to surround Berlin and central industrial Germany with a ring of monarchist revolts.

In Madgeburg there has been arrested as one of the chief conspirators Maj. Schaefer, chairman of the Madgeburg branch of the Deutsche Nationale Volkspartei. At the same time a cache of arms was found in a stable at his home. They had been placed behind the walls and covered with straw. Another cache was found in a shed at the home of Herr Drenckmann of the Deutsche Na-

TOMB OF ALEXANDER I VACANT WHEN OPENED BY SOVIET AUTHORITIES

Czar Was Said to Have Entered Monastery When Death Was Announced.

Special Cable to the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1922.)

REVAL, July 8.

ONE of the strange tales told by Russians for almost a century has represented Alexander I as having left the throne to become a monk. Officially he died in 1825 at the age of 48, and was buried in the Oupenski Cathedral with full ceremony.

Rumors came from the vincinity of Taganrog, however, that one Father Theodor Kousnitch (or Fomich), known for his piety, closely resembled Alexander, and was treated with utmost respect by the imperial authorities until his death in 1870. Prince Volkansky, a Russian historian, wrote a book telling of the last days of this monk and saying he was really Alexander.

Nobody was ever able to verify this tale. Now, however, the soviet authorities have proved that Alexander was not buried in the Oupenski Cathedral. In the search for jewels the tombs of the Czars have been opened and in that of Alexander no body was found.

In his later years Alexander disagreed with many of the traditions of his house and became a mystic. Before he disappeared he spent most of his time in prayer.

The bolsheviki are incidentally reported to have opened the grave of Paul the First and taken from it the huge diamond cross of the Order of Knights of Malta, which was laid on his breast when he was buried. Paul was Grand Master of the order.

TAFT HIGHLY PLEASED WITH RESULTS OF TRIP ABROAD

"One of Most Delightful Episodes of My Life," He Says Before Sailing.

By the Associated Press.

LIVERPOOL, July 8.—Chief Justice Taft and Mrs. Taft sailed for the United States today on the steamer Canopic. They occupied the bridal suite, which was elaborately decorated with flowers.

Taft told interviewers that his visit to London was "one of the most delightful episodes of my life." He said it was somewhat difficult to say how much of value will result of his investigation of English judicial procedure.

"It is solely a question of application in differing conditions," he continued.

The Lord Mayor and Mayoress of Liverpool and several Aldermen and postoffice officials were in the crowd which gathered to bid the Chief Justice and his wife farewell.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., July 8.—All property, real and personal belonging to Richard Croker, former Tammany leader, is bequeathed to his widow, Bula R. C. Croker, in the last will filed here today. The will, dated at Glencairn, Sandyford, County Dublin, and written in the handwriting of Joe J. McDonald of 116 High street, Dublin, one of the two witnesses signing the will, is dated at Glencairn, Dublin, Oct. 12, 1919.

Preparations are being made to contest the will, according to Attorney J. T. G. Crawford, of Jacksonville, who represents Richard Croker Jr., and the heirs of the estate.

The Will and Codicil.

The will reads as follows:

I, Richard Croker, of Glencairn, Sandyford County, Dublin, declare this to be my last will. I hereby revoke all previous wills made by me. I hereby bequeath and devise to my dear wife, Bula R. C. Croker, all the property, real and personal which I may die possessed of or over which I may have any power of appointment absolutely. I hereby appoint my said wife, Bula R. C. Croker to be the sole executrix of this, my will.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto signed my name this twelfth day of October, 1919.

(Signed)
RICHARD CROKER.

The witnesses were: Joe J. McDonald, 116 High street, Dublin, and Thomas J. Fleming, 13 Langford Terrace, Monkstown.

A codicil to the will in the handwriting of Croker and dated at Glencairn, Nov. 15, 1919, as follows:

"My dear Bula: I am writing this note for you to keep and in case you should surive me I wish you would give my daughter, Florence, £10,000. She is the only one of my surviving children who has ever shown any gratitude to me.

(Signed)
RICHARD CROKER."

The property owned by Richard Croker in Palm Beach County, Fla., including a magnificent winter estate, the Wigman, is valued at $800,000. Croker had disposed of much property in the last few years, the value of which is said to have run up to $2,000,000.

The Four Heirs.

The legal actions were taken simultaneously with the filing of the will this morning before County Judge C. E. Chillingworth. One, a petition that the will be probated as "early as possible" was filed by J. B. McDonald, local real estate man and a personal friend of Croker. Another, an order that the heirs be notified of the filing of the will, was filed by E. J. L'Engle, attorney for Richard Croker Jr. The last action, the notice to the heirs of the filing, was issued by Judge Chillingworth and copies mailed to the four heirs. The heirs are, Richard Croker Jr., of Portchester, N. Y.; Howard Croker, Cedarhurst, L. I.; Ethel C. White, Cedarhurst, and Florence C. Morris, of Bedding, England.

According to the petition for the probation of the will Croker was a citizen of Florida, and a resident of Palm Beach County, making it obligatory that the filing and contesting of the will be done here.

TROOPS ORDERED TO CLINTON, ILL., AFTER SHOOTING

Guardsmen Sent to City After Killing of Striking Railway Shopman's Son by I. C. Guard.

SLAYER SPIRITED OUT OF TOWN

Crowd of Strikers Persuaded to Give Up Arms After Rushing to Hardware Stores for Weapons.

By the Associated Press.

ROCKFORD, Ill., July 8.—Acting Gov. Sterling issued the following statement late this afternoon:

"On appeals from Sheriff J. W. Pearsons and State's Attorney Smith of Dewitt County, that further rioting is threatened at Clinton tonight, infantry companies at Champaign and Paxton have been ordered to proceed immediately to Clinton for the protection of life and property and preservation of law and order."

By the Associated Press.

CLINTON, Ill., July 8.—The first trouble here in the railroad shopmen's strike occurred today when a guard employed by the Illinois Central Railroad Co. shot and killed James Fitzgerald, a 12-year-old boy, wounded his father, James Fitzgerald Sr., a striker, by shooting him through the leg, and wounded a passerby, Elmer Hankinson. The latter was shot through both legs.

It is said the trouble started when the guard told a number of strike sympathizers to keep off the right-of-way, declaring he would "shoot the first man who stepped over the dead line." The elder Fitzgerald, it is claimed, stepped over, whipped out a pistol and invited the guard to "begin shooting."

The boy died shortly after being wounded. He was shot through the right lung. The father and Hankinson were taken to the hospital here for treatment.

Strikers Gather Near Shops.

Early tonight about 600 strikers and strike sympathizers were collected near the Illinois Central shops and trouble was expected. This afternoon they stormed downtown stores in attempts to purchase firearms. Policemen and deputy sheriffs were inside the stores trying to keep the men out but their efforts were virtually futile. Sheriff J. W. Parsons sent a telegram to Lieutenant-Governor Sterling at Rockford, Ill., asking for troops.

The railroad guard who fired the shots that killed Fitzgerald, wounded his father and Hankinson, was arrested by Sheriff Persons late this afternoon. The Sheriff and two of his deputies immediately drove him out of the county and had not returned to Clinton up to 7 o'clock tonight. All those men working at the Clinton shops have deserted their jobs and the guards stationed at the shops have fled.

The Clinton shops of the Illinois Central employed about 500 men before the strike and 400 of these walked out July 1. No strike breakers were imported by the roads, it is said, and outside of the hundred men or so who remained at work only a few "drifters" came in to augment their forces. Between 70 and 75 guards were stationed about the shops.

Early in the morning the strikers started congregating about the railroad yards and shops, and by noon virtually the entire body had gathered in the yards.

Stories of Trouble Differ.

Stories of how the trouble started vary. The strikers declare the guards started it and the guards claim the strikers were the first to fight.

Several eye-witnesses to the shooting stated that about 1 o'clock this afternoon the strikers became uneasy and someone threw several stones ath the guards. One of the guards told the strikers to keep off the right-of-way, declaring he would "shoot the first man who stepped

Hyde Issues Statement on Guard Orders

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 8.

"THE National Guard has been ordered into the armories," said Governor Hyde in a statement tonight. "The guard has not been ordered into the field." "It will not be ordered into active service unless lawlessness makes that order necessary. It will be held in the armories ready for instant service.

"The responsibility for the order into service, when made, and all that may follow, must rest upon those who started the trouble. Once called into action, the troops will stay to the end."

Governor Hyde said he had received many telegrams from railroad companies which anticipated attacks against their property, asking that the State use all its authority to protect them in their efforts to keep trains in operation.

"I earnestly hope that labor will fulfill its promises and maintain law and order," the Governor's statement, issued with the mobilization order said.

U. S. MARSHALS GUARDING C. & A. SHOPS AT SLATER

Officers Stationed There to Prevent Interference With Interstate Commerce by Strikers.

By the Associated Press.

SLATER, Mo., July 8.—Deputy United States Marshals guarded the Chicago & Alton shops here tonight under command of I. K. Parshall, United States Marshal for the Western District of Missouri.

Marshall Parshall explained to city officers and newspaper men that he had come here under telegraphic instructions from the Department of Justice in Washington and that his orders were to prevent infraction of Federal laws. Interference with interstate commerce or mails would not be tolerated, Parshall said.

After talking to Mayor Thomas J. Gauldin of Slater and the City Marshal, B. B. Butts, Marshal Parshall conferred with leaders of striking shopmen, including Leo F. Winkle, chairman of the Federated Shops Crafts here. The union men and the city officials assured him, Parshall said, that there would be no outbreaks. The conference with the union men was held in the trainmaster's office of the Chicago & Alton Railroad here today. J. L. Marquette, division superintendent of the road, was present, Parshall said.

Parshall said that a request was made of him by railroad officials to escort these men to the shops, but that he declined to do so, telling the superintendent of the road that was his business and no part of the duties of the Federal deputies. Deputy United States Marshals were stationed around the shops and were patrolling the station platform and the tracks between the station and shops.

STATE OF INSURRECTION AND LAWLESSNESS IS DECLARED TO EXIST

Troop Call for 9 A. M. Today Made After Conference With Railroad Officers

HYDE ASSURES RAILROADS PROTECTION FOR EMPLOYES

Injunction Issued by Federal Court at Chicago Against Picketing of Aurora Shops of C. B. & Q.—Signalmen Withhold Order for Walkout With Shopmen.

By Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., July 8.—The entire National Guard of Missouri, 4021 men and officers will be mobilized and held ready for instant service at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, by order of Gov. A. M. Hyde.

Adjutant General William A. Raupp, acting at the executive's order, called out the troops tonight "upon information that a state of lawlessness and insurrection exists within the borders of the State."

The announcement of the call for troops was made after a conference between Governor Hyde, Adjutant General Raupp and representatives of five railroad companies operating throughout the state.

Simultaneously with the announcement of this troop order, the Governor made a formal statement, in which he assured the railroad officials of protection of their employes during the strike of the railroad shopmen.

"Every man has a right to quit work," the Governor's statement read, "whenever he sees fit, and every man has a right to work whenever he wants, as guaranteed under the Constitution of the State and national Government. That is the law as it stands today, and it is the duty of the officials to maintain this law." He would favor neither side, the statement added.

Adjutant-General Raupp, who yesterday returned from Slater, where he investigated strike conditions at the shops of the Chicago & Alton Railroad, asserted in commenting on the troop order that he had received information "that a state of lawlessness existed within the State" and the order sending the national guard units to Kentucky for a two-weeks' encampment was cancelled. The men are to hold themselves, in uniform, around their armories for instant service.

The railroads whose representatives appealed to the Governor for protection of their employes are: the Missouri Pacific, the Chicago & Alton, the Missouri-Kansas-Texas, the Kansas City Southern and the Santa Fe.

Officers of these railroads assured the Governor they would not attempt to run their trains or operate their shops without protection of the employes, and intimated that if given this protection, they would probably reopen the shops closed by lack of labor and protection next Monday.

138th Infantry and Battery A Get Orders to Assemble Today

A preparatory order from Adjutant-General Raupp to have the First Missouri Regiment (138th Infantry), National Guard, ready for mobilization on short notice for possible duty in connection with the strike of railroad shopmen in Missouri, was received in St. Louis by Col. C. S. Thornton, commander of the regiment. Col. Thornton said he would have assembly some time today.

The order came following an announcement by Gov. Hyde that he had decided to mobilize all the State troops, consisting of approximately 4000 officers and men. The First Regiment has about 1000 officers and men available at this time, Col. Thornton said, and consists of nine rifle companies, three machine gun companies, one howitzer company, a service company, a headquarters company and a sanitary detachment.

A similar order for the mobilization of Battery A was received by Capt. Leon R. Sanford, who began preparations for the assembly of the unit, beginning at 9 o'clock this morning. Battery A consists of machine guns, automatic rifles and 75 millimeter French guns. Capt. Sanford said it becomes the duty of every member of the battery to report at once for duty. It has 95 enlisted men and five officers.

Picketing of the local railroad yards where shopmen were employed continues active and while there has been some slugging of individual workers at work in the shops, there has been no general disorder.

Freight and passenger traffic has been moving without delay or serious interruption. President Miller of the Terminal Railroad Association announced last evening that there was an increase in the volume of traffic through the St. Louis gateway for the week ending yesterday, over the record of the corresponding week of last year. This announce-

The City Circulation of the Daily POST-DISPATCH alone approximately Equals that of the Daily Globe-Democrat and the Times Combined, and Exceeds that of the Daily Star and the Times Combined by approximately 40,000 ment followed an analysis of the reports dealing with all classes of traffic, and the record is pointed to as having been made despite the shopmen's strike, which was a week old at 10 a. m. yesterday.

Injunction Against Picketing Issued by U. S. Court at Chicago

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 8.—The calling out of troops in Illinois, the assembling of soldiers in half a dozen other states and the intervention of the Federal courts in the nation-wide strike of railroad shopmen marked the close of the eighth day of the walkout tonight.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad tonight obtained a Federal injunction here restraining picketing at the Aurora shops, while earlier in the day an injunction was issued at New Orleans restraining strikers from interfering with trains on the Southern Pacific. At Council Bluffs, Ia., the Burlington obtained a temporary restraining order directed against striking shopmen in southern Iowa.

Department of Justice officials at Washington, are investigating reports that strike disorders were interferring with the mails.

Troops Ordered to Clinton.

Lieut.-Gov. Sterling of Illinois tonight ordered troops to Clinton, where an outbreak was threatened following a clash between Illinois Central guards and strike sympathizers in which the 12-year-old son of a striker was killed, and the father and another man were injured.

One bright ray appeared through the threatening strike clouds tonight when D. W. Helt, president of the Brotherhood of Signalmen, announced that he would withhold strike orders to 14,000 signal men pending the preparation and submission of a program to the United States Railroad Labor Board.

Helt's announcement was made following an all-day conference with W. L. McMenemim, labor member of the board have intervened to stop an addition to the strikers' ranks, walkout of 400,000 maintenance of way men having been prevented in this manner a few days ago.

Ultimatum Expires Tomorrow.

Many roads are preparing to open their shops the first of the week when the ultimatum to strikers to return or lose their seniority rights expires. Some carriers have applied for troops to protect employes and property in this move.

Efforts for an immediate settlement of the strike apparently stood still today. Following the statemen yesterday of Chairman Ben W. Hooper of the Labor Board that the board had no power to mediate so long as the men remained on strike, Jewell today reiterated his assertions that the first move toward peace must come from the railroads or the Labor Board.

Four passenger trains entering Memphis on the Missouri Pacific Railroad were annulled today and a number of freight trains on other lines will be taken out of service early next week as the result of the strike of railroad shops crafts here, it was announced in Memphis by railroad officials.

The reason given by the Missouri Pacific for annulling the four trains was a scarcity of coal and a desire to conserve motive power. The trains cut from the service are the daily Hot Springs, Ark., local and the Ferriday, La., locals.

Injunction Against Picketing.

An injunction against the picketing of the Burlington shops at Aurora by striking shopmen was granted tonight by Federal Judge George Carpenter. It was expected that other roads entering Chicago would file petitions for similar action immediately.

The plea for the injunction was presented by B. I. Scott, legal adviser for the road, and asked that the strikers be restrained from picketing, intimidating workers and destroying property.

Judge Carpenter was the only Federal Judge in the city and he could not be reached until late in the afternoon. He appeared in his chambers shortly before 6 o'clock, coming in directly from his golf club, where he received the notification that the plea was to be filed.

Attorney Scott informed Judge Carpenter that the railway had issued an ultimatum to the striking employes, warning them that unless they returned to work Monday they would lose their seniority rights.

"How many men want to go back to work?" the Judge asked.

"At least 250 out of 1200 will return to work if they can be protected," Scott replied. "The strikers have threatened to establish a cordon around the shops and have intimated that those who try to return in order to protect their seniority rights will be dealt with roughly."

Burlington's Plea.

The railroad attorney then cited three principal contentions on which, he said, the bill was based as follows:

"That the strikers have violated the order of the Labor Moard.

"That they have interfered with United States mails.

"And that they have interfered with interstate commerce."

"You do not understand that labor has a right to organize and strike, do you?" questioned the Judge.

"No; we do not, and we are not asking to have them enjoined from striking," Scott said. "We are asking for an injunction against an illegal act."

"So far as I can make out, your bill does not enjoin the strikers or the right of labor to organize, but asks that an illegal act be enjoined. Is that correct?" asked the Judge.

"That is exactly what we ask," was the reply, and the temporary injunction was then signed by the Judge. Hearing on a permanent injunction was set for July 18.

All traffic on the Chicago & Alton in and out of Bloomington has ceased due to the failure of local authoities to furnish adequate protection to the few men remaining at work in the shops here, according to an announcement made today by W. G. Bierd, president of the road. The road has notified the Sheriff of McLean County and the Adjutant-General of the State that unless protection for the workers is furnished by next Monday, the Chicago & Alton will undertake to reopen the shops under its own guards.

The strikers, he said, virtually took possession of the shops last night, firing many shots, and afterward advancing on the road's passenger station, where oilers and inspectors were driven from their work and one foreman was badly beaten up, according to Bierd.

"KATY" TRAINS WAIT FOR PROTECTION; 42 DISCONTINUED

The Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway will not attempt to operate 42 local trains which it has discontinued in the four States in which the road runs, until the State Governments give definite assurance that employes will be adequately protected. The trains were discontinued because it was found to be physically impossible to keep the necessary locomotives in condition, and for fear of interference with employes who might attempt to get them out.

Eight of the trains were operated in Missouri, 12 in Oklahoma and 22 in Texas, while some of these ran in Kansas, too. The only St. Louis trains affected are No. 9, which left here at 4 a. m. for Sedalia, Mo., and No. 10, the returning run, which arrived at 3:50 p. m. These trains will operate between St. Louis and New Franklin, which is 40 miles east of Sedalia, because the Sedalia roundhouse has been temporarily closed.

Joseph M. Bryson, general counsel for the receiver of the road, said that a general injunction against interferance of any sort with the operation of the road, issued when the receivership was ordered, is still effective.

Striking "Katy" shopmen will be paid off for June at the Baden shops tomorrow. Striking employes of the Terminal Railroad will get their pay at the treasurer's office, 114 Union Station, between 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. tomorrow.

The Missouri Pacific Railroad has announced in advertisements that it will discontinue two of its chief trains between St. Louis and Kansas City, temporarily, beginning Tuesday. This step is attributed by the road to a shortage of coal brought about by the miners' strike.

Train No. 15, which leaves for Kansas City at 2:02 p. m. daily, and train No 16, the returning run, which arrives from Kansas City at 5:20 p m. daily, will be discontinued.

Also, the sleeping car which has been carried on the fast mail for Kansas City, leaving at 2:05 a. m., will be eliminated.

Restraining Order Against Interfering With Trains in Iowa.

By the Associated Press.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Io., July 8.—Federal Judge M. J. Wade late today issued a temporary restraining order directed against the six shop crafts unions in favor of the Burlington Railroad. The order, affecting all Burlington points in Southern Iowa, prohibits the unions from interfering with the operation of trains and the full protection of railroad property.

A hearing on a motion for an injunction will be held at Keokuk, Io., July 27. The Northwestern road was preparing to ask for a restraining order when the Burlington order was issued and it was said that other roads entering Council Bluffs had planned to do the same.

No strikers had returned to work on the Union Pacific when 5 o'clock arrived this evening, the time set by the company for the men to return or lose their connection with the road, it was stated.

MAN WORKING IN STRIKER'S PLACE KICKED AND BEATEN

Missouri Pacific Shop Employe Captured After Chase in Autos and Flogged as a Strikebreaker

SAYS MEN TOLD HIM THEY WERE STRIKERS

Was Thrown Out of Machine Into Alley After Being Pummeled at Meeting Where Captors Took Him.

A report to the police last night by Robert S. Mitchell, a special agent of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, disclosed that Manly Daniel of 148 Valley avenue, Webster Groves, who has been working in a striker's place at the Missouri Pacific shops, had been assaulted by three men while on his way home from work at 5:30 p. m. Friday and subjected to a harrowing ordeal.

Daniel is 47 years old and has long been an employe in the valuation department of the railroad. When the shopmen went on a strike a week ago, he was one of the "white collar" office men who volunteered to do shop work, and he was put at trucking.

Stopped by Three Men.

He was stopped three blocks west of the shops by three men Friday afternoon who inquired what kind of work he was doing in the shops and at the same time accused him of being a strikebreaker. Daniel assured the men that he was not attempting to break the strike, asserting that he was merely holding a job for a striker. This explanation did not seem to appease his inquisitors and when the men became more threatening, he fled.

Upon reaching Grand boulevard he jumped on a passing Ford truck, but the driver made him get off. Then he was given a lift by a prosperous-looking man in a large car, to whom Daniel began to tell his troubles. As soon as the man learned that Daniel was being pursued, he also made Daniel get out.

At this moment the three pursuers appeared in three automobiles that had picked them up, and they took Daniel back to a hall near the entrance to the railroad shops.

Beaten Almost Insensible.

In the hall were about 25 men to whom Daniel was presented as a strikebreaker and he was cuffed and kicked almost into insensibility. Some of the cooler heads counseled moderation, and then four men carried Daniel out and tossed him into an automobile, drove around for about 15 minutes, and tossed him into an alley. After kicking him around the alley for awhile, they left, and Daniel dragged himself to a street car at Park and Theresa avenues. He went to the Missouri Pacific Hospital for medical attention and then went to his home. While severely bruised, his condition is not serious.

Daniel said the three men who beat him said they were striking shopmen.

ROCKEFELLER TRIES TO IMPROVE GOLFING ON 83rd BIRTHDAY

Celebration Is Quiet One Because of Recent Death of His Brother, William.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 8.—At his country place, Pocantico Hills, Tarrytown, John D. Rockefeller, the world's richest man, celebrated his eighty-third birthday anniversary today. Because of the recent death of his brother, William, his celebration, usually an epochal occasion, was unusually quiet.

After breakfast, he played a round of golf with one of his five guests, and bent every effort to better his record on the nine hole course laid out on his estate several years ago.

His record for his private links is 42. This he made shortly after his birthday party last year. Rockefeller required many more strokes today.

A small gathering of friends attended the luncheon which followed the golf game. The party was to have been a gala affair. Hundreds of invitations had been sent out. According to his custom, Rockefeller cut a large birthday cake. Several hundred telegrams were received, and many of these were read to Rockefeller during luncheon. One was from John D. Jr., with his family at Seal Harbor, Me., for the summer.

Rockefeller and his guests went for a short walk in the afternoon over his 6000-acre place.

All the gates at the entrance of the place were locked today, and no one but employes and guests were admitted. Rockefeller is expected to attend the new Community Church tomorrow. John D. Jr., has given chimes to the church in memory of his mother, and Mrs. John D. Jr., gave the pulpit.

STRIKING SHOPMEN TAKE 27 MEN OFF TRAIN AT MOBERLY, MO.

Crowd of Several Hundred Sends Party, Bound for Indiana, Back to Kansas City.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOBERLY, Mo., July 8.—Union shopmen on strike here took 27 men off of Wabash No. 28, Buffalo limited, which arrived here at 9 p. m.

The men were bound for Fort Wayne, Ind., and were said to be strikebreakers. They were in a special coach and the doors of it were locked. Several hundred persons were at Union Station when the train pulled in. The first three men were taken out through windows. About half the men were taken out before the train started again. It had gone about two blocks when it was stopped at the Coates street crossing and the remaining occupants were taken off.

The coach the men had been in then was cut off of train and left here. The strikers took the men to a large room in the City Hall which is seldom used. The men were searched and the strikers, after holding a meeting, decided to send the men back to Kansas City. It is said the men stated they had been signed up by railroad officials in Kansas City to act as guards of company property at Fort Wayne, Ind.

PRISON CRITICISM IS CONCURRED IN BY STATE OFFICIAL

Director of Missouri Penal Institutions Says League of Women Voters' Findings Are Accurate.

STATEMENT MADE TO GOVERNOR HYDE

Hollenbeck Admits Women's Department Hasn't Shown Much Improvement Since Administration Change.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 8.—Replying to the findings of an investigation by a committee appointed by the League of Women Voters to investigate conditions in the Missouri penitentiary, especially in the women's department, A. T. Hollenbeck, director of the Department of Penal Institutions, said the report was a "fairly accurate presentation of conditions in the female department which has not shown as great improvement since the change of administration as have the other departments of the institution."

"Many of the recommendations made by the committee are feasible and can be carried out, while many are impossible under present conditions," Hollenbeck's report to Gov. Hyde states.

Col. H. N. Morgan, Warden of the St. Louis Work House, passed several days here this month, Hollenbeck says, making a thorough investigation of the women's department. He talked to the prisoners and interviewed many of them who had been former inmates of his institution. He has visited many penal institutions and praised the Missouri penitentiary highly, according to the report to the Governor.

The Recommendations.

The recommendations are taken up in detail:

1. The board recognizes the fact that the present building is not an ideal one and expects to make recommendation for a new one.

2. It is impossible to secure the services with hte meager compensation now allowed, of a trained and specialized matron.

3. An assistant matron will be employed.

4. A trained nurse is not deemed necessary now because of the small number of patients regularly confined in the penitentiary. Trained nurses and employed temporarily on special occasions.

5. A night school is to be established.

6. Inmates are given a thorough physical examination when they are received, including blood tests and vaccination.

7. The "Task system" is being taken under advisement.

8. Women prisoners are not required to do as great tasks as in other penitentiary.

9. The prisoners are being paid for their labor in accordance with the provisions of the law.

10. Records of women are not as complete as they might be.

11. All prisoners are paroled to responsible persons who act as their advisers. A majority of these who are paroled from this institution go to their homes or to friends and money and clothing are supplied them sufficient for their needs.

12. One-third of the inmates have their own springs and mattresses sent them by friends. Straw mattresses supplied by the State are washed and refilled at frequent intervals. The matron has recommended that all be supplied with feather pillows.

13. The conditions at the laundry are admittedly bad but fans have been installed and other improvements are contemplated.

14. The so-called "blind cells" are seldom used and are deemed a necessity in all prison institutions.

In Dark Cells at Night.

Many of the inmates are hardened criminals and refuse to obey the rules and occasionally "murderous assaults" are made on officials and other inmates. Offenders usually are put in a dark cell over night, occasionally a longer period is required but never long enough to injure the prisoner's health.

"Whenever any other successful methods of handling obstreperous and sometimes violent prisoners has proven effective, the board will be very glad to discontinue the present methods," is the closing comment of the statement.

IMPERSONATOR GETS $260 LOOT

How an unidentified negro knew that Mrs. Alfred Clifford, 22 Westmoreland place, was sending her chauffeur to call for $260 worth of apparel at the Maison de Bernard, 312 Arcade Building, yesterday afternoon, is puzzling the police.

The negro, representing himself to be Mrs. Clifford's chauffeur, called for the clothing, a dress, a sweater, two skirts and an underskirt, about 20 minutes after Mrs. Clifford had telephoned that her chauffeur would stop by for the packages. Employes accepted the negro on his statement. Several minutes later the real Clifford chauffeur, a white man, arrived.

tionale and a member of the Madgeburg City Council.

Besides these two several other citizens of Madgeburg were arrested, all members of the Deutsch Nationale and some belonging to the Deutsche Volkische group.

The Deutsche Nationale itself, which has 71 members in the Reichstag, though faced with the fact that many of its members are implicated in the Monarchist plot, and the whole Deutsche Volkische group which is involved, have formally served notice they will expel no member on that account.

The Chancellor has sent State Secretaries Fischer and Schroeder to Paris and Herr Bergmann, who is at The Hague, has also been ordered to Paris. These three will first negotiate with the individuals on the reparations commission before formally asking for a moratorium.

For the last few weeks the Reichsbank, backed by the Government, has been throwing gold values on the Bourse, thus trying to prevent a disastrous collapse of the mark. Hundreds of millions of gold marks were thrown on the market, but it was impossible to hold up the mark. The Government hoped to force up the value of the mark and to buy gold marks enough to pay the next instalment of reparations, but, while they had been able to do his successfully many times in the last year, this time the market cracked.

People Bought Up Marks.

The Germans themselves had lost faith in their own paper money and, knowing the Government's trick, they bought up all the gold values the Government threw on the market, handing back worthless paper marks to the Government.

Ever since the murder of Dr. Rathenau, the mark had been sinking imperceptibly, yesterday it went down with a crash. The mark has lost half its value in a few weeks. As yet the panic is local and the hope is that the bourse will recover before outside holders of marks lose confidence.

Solution of German Problem Rests With France, Belief at Capitol.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Solution of the German financial and industrial problem rests with France, in the opinion expressed today by well informed economic experts of the United States Government. American participation of any relief measures for German rehabilitation under present conditions was regarded by some offcials as an economic impossibility.

Viewed from the economic angle, the German situation was declared solely a question of German credit, which rested upon the reparations terms. Unless France is willing to cake concessions in the matter of reparations to enable Germany to carry her burden, Germany, it was asserted, canot hope to borrow money to continue her rehabilitation and meet reparations payments.

Under present reparations conditions some officials regarded Germany's credit as practically nil, and with a loan from the United States Government out of the question, it was not seen how funds from private sources could be raised in this country until a rearrangement of the reparations scheme would free sufficient German securities to enable the flotation of a loan.

France, in view of some officials, is facing two courses with respect to Germany, either the maintenance of the present attitude of standing firm and talking of eventual German payments or granting of reparations concessions permitting Germany to make some payments in the near future with the resultant increase in French stability.

The French franc, officials pointed out, is falling as well as the German mark and it is believed here that a more stable German curency would be reflected in an improvement of the French exchange position.

The probability of Germany's failing to make the reparations payment of 50,000,000 gold marks on July 15, was not regarded by officials as foreshadowing any serious consequences, as it wa sexplained, it would only be a postponement of payment. Officials added, however, that should the German payment be made some disruption of exchanges affecting the British pound, Scandinavian currencies and probably the French franc as well, would result from the purchase of gold by the Germans to meet their obligations.

Germany Has Money to Meet July 15 Reparation Payment.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 8.—The 50,000,000 gold marks required to meet the July installment of Germany's reparations payments were gathered in the Reichsbank before the mark entered upon its present headling plunge.

Parliamentary circles are deeply engrosed with the prospective realignment of the Government coalition and the prevailing political situation, and appear compartively indifferent to the fate of the mark. Official quarters also are averse to talking freely on the subject while the conferences with the guarantees commission are going on. The Reichsbank has confined its utterances to a communique to the effect that the printers' strike has brought the money presses to a standstill and that as a result the bank's ready stock of finished currency is wholly depleted. It hopes to tide over the shortage by issuing an emergency 500 mark note.

The shortage of big bills is already giving trouble to tourists whom the banks and hotels load down with bales of 20 and 50 mark notes.

Expected Request for Moratorium Causes Little Surprise.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 8.—News received here that Germany intended to ask the reparations commission for a moratorium on cash payments and that Dr. Fischer, chairman of the German war debts commission and H. S. Schroeder, Undersecretary of the Ministry of France had left Berlin for Paris, excited no surprise among the members of the commission. The commission has received no communication from Berlin on the subject.

Germany's cash payments this year and the major part of her reparations payments for 1923 would go toward meeting the Belgian priority claims and therefore there is no immediate concern among the French authorities regarding the effect of such a move by Germany on French finances, although the seriousness of German conditions is generally recognized. The Temps takes advantage of the present developments to reiterate the French view that while a moratorium may be necessary, the real need in Germany is a drastic overhaulding of the finances of the Government, the stoppage of the money printing presses and the manifestation of a real desire on the part of the Germans to put their house in order.

Britain Seeks Aid of U. S. in Saving Germany.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

LONDON, July 8.—Premier Lloyd George and the whole British Government are so concerned about the situation in Germany, politically and economically, that they have informally turned to the United States Government, through Ambassador Harvey, with inquiry whether it can suggest anything to prevent a collapse. The Premier believes that either a loan must be floated immediately or the reparations scaled down to save the German republic from chaos.

American Embassy officials said today that no formal representations had been made by the British Government looking to the participation of the United States in allied efforts to rehabilitate Germany, but the subject has been discussed for some time in diplomatic and other circles and the hope expressed that the United States might be induced to lend its support to the project.

over the deadline." Fitzgerald, it is said, stepped over the deadline, whipped out a pistol and told the guard to "start shooting." The guard, drawing his gun, fired at Fitzgerald, witnesses say. One of the bullets entered the right lung of Fitzgerald's son. Another shot entered Fitzgerald's right leg and went through his left foot. A third bullet went through both of Hanklison's legs, just above the knee.

Mob Rushes to Stores.

The mob of strike sympathizers seemed to surge forward and then as if on common impulse, they started for the city for guns. Word preceded them and by the time they reached the business section of the city two of the three hardware stores in town had succeeded in hiding their stock of firearms and cartridges. Inside the third and largest were police and deputy sheriffs. Their attempts to keep the men out were futile, and the men, it is said, took every gun and cartridge in the store and started for the railroad yards.

Postmaster Charles Cline arrived just as the men were departing, and talked with them and asked them to stop and think before causing any trouble. The men listened to him and returned every gun and bullet they had taken. The police immediately confiscated them.

They then returned to the railroad yards, their numbers increased by a hundred or so sympathizers.

Once before, in 1911, Clinton came into prominence during a rail strike when Clinton seemed to be the storm center of the entire strike, and Carl Person, local union leader, was charged with slaying a guard. He was tried, convicted and sent to prison, but was later released.

Two incidents, similar in some respects, were reported to the police. In an anonymous telephone call to the Magnolia Avenue Station, it was reported that Tony Firos, a Greek laborer, employed at a local Frisco Railroad roundhouse, was forcibly taken by men in an automobile from a restaurant at 1004 South Vandeventer avenue Friday night.

Arthur E. Kelly, 3726 Walsh street, employed as a special officer by the Frisco Railroad, said that several men, after accusing him of being a strike breaker, dragged him into an automobile Friday night at Chouteau and Vandeventer avenues, and took him to his home. They threatened to take him out to St. Louis County and assault him, he said, if he returned to work. George F. Berry, 4440 Gibson avenue, a striking shopman, was arrested on information given by Kelly.

REFERENDUM LAW IS CALLED A DISGRACE

Brewster Says Present Missouri Plan Is a Shame to American People.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., July 8.—R. R. Brewster, Republican candidate for United States Senator, in a 45-minute campaign speech here tonight confined himself largely to indorsement of the Republican national and State administration. Nearly 1000 persons sat on the stone steps of the State Capitol listening to his remarks.

After declaring that if he could not "indorse and support the Republican national and State administration, I'll withdraw from the race," Brewster told his audience that the Federal administration had saved $260,000,000 in the first year of its management of national affairs, had discharged 60,000 useless Government employes and had a budget system "in full force and effect."

Hyde's Administration Praised.

Touching upon Gov. Hyde's administration, he said he indorsed "enthusiastically" the program which Hyde had accomplished. "There isn't a word of truth in the statement that taxes have been raised in Missouri," he declared. "Would you have your Governor willfully and deliberately violate the law for political purposes? The law provides that property shall be assessed at its true value. Democratic Governors for years have disregarded this provision and have had property assessed at 30 and 40 cents instead of its true value. Your State taxes haven't been raised a penny during the Hyde administration. In fact, they have been lowered. It is up to the local board to fix the school and road rates and if they haven't seen fit to lower it, that's their question."

Referendum Plan Attacked.

Brewster declared that the "referendum law in Missouri as it is now is a shame and disgrace to the American people." He urged as a remedial measure that every individual entitled to vote at the primary come to the polls and cast a ballot.

Berwster did not promise how he should stand on any question, saying that the chief question the voters were interested in was whether he would "reflect honestly, earnestly and conscientiously his constituency."

The Kansas City candidate was introduced by Mrs. M. E. Morrow of West Plains, member of the constitution convention now in session at Jefferson City. She followed Mrs. Sylvester Wells of Kansas City, president of the Brewster-for-Senator Club of that city, who devoted 15 minutes to praising him.

Guard Who Killed Boy Said to Have Gone From St. Louis.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 8.—Dispatches from Clinton tonight stated that the railroad guard who fired into a crowd at Clinton this afternoon, killing a boy and wounding two men, was from St. Louis. A number of strikebreakers arrived on a train from St. Louis and were being taken to the railroad yards. Trouble started at the station where a crowd of strikers, seeing the strikebreakers, started jeering and hooting. The shooting followed.

With one company of State troops from Champaign already in Clinton and companies from Paxton and Decatur on the way, no further trouble is expected. It was announced at Clinton tonight that the remainder of the strike breakers and guards had been sent from the city to avoid trouble.

Troops under command of Maj. John O. Smith of Champaign were on their way to the scene of rail strike rioting at Clinton within 20 mintues after the order was issued by Adjutant-General Black, it was announced here by Col. Frank L. Taylor, of the General's staff.

The entire 130th Infantry, Illinois National Guard was ordered mobilized tonight by Adjutant-General Black. The troops will be held in their armories to be moved at a minute's notice to the scene of threatened trouble in the railroad shopmen's strike. There are troops now under arms as far north as Rockford and as far south as Cairo.

REED'S RECORD IS A SERPENT'S SLIMY TRAIL, HAY SAYS

Dry Leader, in Address at Palmyra, Declares Senator's Hands Are Red With the Party's Blood.

FOR LONG WHETHER HE IS WET OR DRY

If Liquor Were Issue, a Wet Democrat Would Be Better Than Wet Republican Masquerading, He Asserts.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PALMYRA, Mo., July 8.—Charles M. Hay, recognized dry leader of the State and candidate two years ago against Breckinridge Long for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, tonight in Palmyra delivered a scathing denunciation of Senator Reed in the first of a series of speeches in opposition to Reed and behalf of Long in the present campaign.

Hay spoke to an audience of about 800 persons, said to more than twice the number attending either Long's or Reed's meeting in Palmyra. He was introduced by H. Clay Heather, formerly a member of the Legislature.

Carrying throughout his speech the theme that Reed was disloyal to the Democratic party almost from the day he entered the Senate in 1911, Hay recited Reed's record before, during and after the war. He insisted that the Democratic party would be "true to itself" and that it would not revise is principles and its latforms at the behest of Reed.

In the use of invective adjectory denunciation and figures of speech Hay outdid Reed himself tonight. He eferred to Reed's record as "the rtuous slimy trail of the hissing erpent."

"Hands Wet With Party's Blood."

He declared Reed's "hands were ed with the party's blood." Again, e said, Reed "shakes his bloody alons at the man who led the arty."

Reciting Reed's opposition to administration measures, Hay termed eed "a guerilla, attacking President ilson from the rear when Republican enemies were attacking in the ont."

In discussing Reed's defense of is Wisconsin campaign for a Republican candidate for the Senate n 1920, Hay said Reed was guilty of "downright falsehood."

Hay considered Reed's charge that Long was running wet in the city and dry in the country, a camel in the country and a fish in the city."

"Reed says," Hay continued, "that r entertainment purposes Long has in his cellar or cellars a liberal supply of old Lynch rye and other once familiar brands. Personally I do not know, and so far as this campaign is concerned, I do not care whether that charge is true or false. Whether Breckinridge Long is as wet as fish or as dry as a camel, I am for him. If he be wet, he is a wet Democrat, and as between a wet Democrat and wet Republican masquerading as Democrat, I am for the wet Democrat. The issue in this campaign is not whether Long is wet or dry. The issue is this: 'Is James A. Reed faithful or unfaithful to the Democratic party and the immortal principles for which that party has stood and stands today?' I am a dry, always have been, and always will be, but Reed cannot becloud the issue in my mind or in the minds of other dry Democrats by the discussion of any issue other than his own miserable record.

"No Right to Seek Nomination."

"I say to you that Reed has no more right to seek a nomination in a Democratic primary than has Henry Cabot Lodge, Hiram Johnson or Senator Borah."

Hay, in beginning his speech, justified his entrance into the campaign by asserting that the contest was not between men seeking private employment, and that as a Missouri citizen he was entitled to pass upon the kind and character of representation Missouri shall have in the Senate.

He said he had an intimate knowledge of Long's ability as a lawyer, which he praised highly, declaring that Long was known as a man of sound judgment, of unimpeachable integrity, faithful to his supporters and fair to his adversaries. These characteristics were apparent in Long as a candidate two years ago, Hays said.

Hay took up Reed's declaration that Long, defeated in the general election two years ago, was a "corpse" attempting to ride another race on a "lame horse."

"Lame Man Better Than Assassin."

"He may by force of circumstances have been a little lame," Hay said, "but he was not half as lame as Reed tried to make him. Speaking for myself, I would rather follow the lead of a candidate whose thighs were bruised and whose head was bloody as he battled for democracy than to follow the leadership of the party assassin who wounded him. James A. Reed, his hands red with his party's blood, now comes back to Missouri democracy and shakes his bloody talons at the man who led the party in that stormy year and in derision and defiance says, 'this man whom I beat and bruised was weak, you cannot afford

In discussing Reed's defense of his Wisconsin campaign for a Republican candidate for the Senate in 1920, Hay said Reed was guilty of "downright falsehood."

Hay considered Reed's charge that Long was running wet in the city and dry in the country, a camel in the country and a fish in the city."

"Reed says," Hay continued, "that for entertainment purposes Long has in his cellar or cellars a liberal supply of old Lynch rye and other once familiar brands. Personally I do not know, and so far as this campaign is concerned, I do not care whether that charge is true or false. Whether Breckinridge Long is as wet as fish or as dry as a camel, I am for him. If he be wet, he is a wet Democrat, and as between a wet Democrat and a wet Republican masquerading as a Democrat, I am for the wet Democrat. The issue in this campaign is not whether Long is wet or dry. The issue is this: 'Is James A. Reed faithful or unfaithful to the Democratic party and the immortal principles for which that party has stood and stands today?' I am a dry, always have been, and always will be, but Reed cannot becloud the issue in my mind or in the minds of other dry Democrats by the discussion of any issue other than his own miserable record.

"No Right to Seek Nomination."

"I say to you that Reed has no more right to seek a nomination in a Democratic primary than has Henry Cabot Lodge, Hiram Johnson or Senator Borah."

Hay, in beginning his speech, justified his entrance into the campaign by asserting that the contest was not between men seeking private employment, and that as a Missouri citizen he was entitled to pass upon the kind and character of representation Missouri shall have in the Senate.

He said he had an intimate knowledge of Long's ability as a lawyer, which he praised highly, declaring that Long was known as a man of sound judgment, of unimpeachable integrity, faithful to his supporters and fair to his adversaries. These characteristics were apparent in Long as a candidate two years ago, Hays said.

Hay took up Reed's declaration that Long, defeated in the general election two years ago, was a "corpse" attempting to ride another race on a "lame horse."

"Lame Man Better Than Assassin."

"He may by force of circumstances have been a little lame," Hay said, "but he was not half as lame as Reed tried to make him. Speaking for myself, I would rather follow the lead of a candidate whose thighs were bruised and whose head was bloody as he battled for democracy than to follow the leadership of the party assassin who wounded him. James A. Reed, his hands red with his party's blood, now comes back to Missouri democracy and shakes his bloody talons at the man who led the party in that stormy year and in derision and defiance says, 'this man whom I beat and crushed was weak, you cannot afford again to follow him. If you do, I will weaken him again. Follow my red flag or be damned.'

"It is my faith that not yet has the democracy of Missouri become so craven and prostituted as thus to reward its traitor and assassin."

Speaking of Reed's ridicule of Long as the entertainer of America's guests during the war, Hay said:

"Lent Talent to Enemies of U. S."

"While Long was devoting his time, talent and means to the entertainment of America's friends, his opponent in this race was prostituting his talents to the delight and comfort of America's enemies. With the taint of that course still upon him, he now attempts with ridicule and sarcasm to belittle Long's services. He says, forsooth, that Long's chief functions was carrying alligator grips for foreign diplomats. That doubtless is a minor role, but, frankly, I would rather carry alligator grips for the friends and guests of my country than by word and act to lend aid and comfort to my country's enemies. He says Long mixed cocktails for effete English Dukes. Maybe so, but he never mixed any poison in the cup of the President of his country in time of war."

Hay then entered into a discussion of Reed's record in the Senate, saying: "Reed has ability, talent—but can that talent be trusted? What is the answer of his senatorial career? He entered the Senate in 1910 with these words still ringing in the ears of his constituents."

"I have never given aid or comfort to the enemy. I have not claimed to be wiser than the combined wisdom of my party as expressed in its platform regularly adopted."

Have his acts squared with his words? Let his record before the war, during the war, and since the war, answer.

In 1912 a Democratic administration came into power. With a fidelity and vision unsurpassed in our history it set itself to the accomplishment of long deferred reforms. From 1912 to 1916, more wholesome constructive legislation was enacted than in any similar period of our history. The mountain peak of achievement was reached by the enactment of the Federal Reserve Bank act.

"Criticism Only Contribution."

"What was the contribution of James A. Reed to his party and his country during that period?

"Criticism, obstruction, opposition."

"In 1914 the President recommended certain needed changes in the Interstate Commerce Commission law. Reed opposed the measure. In the same year the President proposed amendments to the antitrust laws. Reed opposed the measure after it had been agreed upon in conference."

"The Federal Reserve Bank act he at first attacked with a ferocity that brought consternation to its friends. He seemed determined to defeat it. Finding that impossible and yielding for once to party pressure, he was, to use the language of Carter Glass of Virginia, "finally whipped into line."

"Thus early dawned the day of our humiliation and misrepresentation. Thus early did Reed's record belie his campaign promises of 1910."

Voted for War.

"So reads his record before the war. War came. What was Reed's contribution to his party and his country during the war? Again the record answers criticism, obstruction, opposition. He voted for the war. But he opposed the measures necessary to win the war. With his nation at war, practically without any army, he opposed the service act, designed to secure an army, and secure it on the Jeffersonian principle that 'all men are created equal.' With an army called for, which had to be fed, he opposed the food control act, designed to secure food and secure it on fair and equitable terms. If he had voted against the war he could not have pleased the Kaiser more.

"But, thank God, he didn't have his way. He didn't ham-string America or enable Germany to win. The forces of constructive statesmanship couldn't whip him in line, but they brushed him aside and marched on. Not only the statesmen from Missouri, but the boys from Missouri marched on. They answered their country's call with ardor, they sailed the seas with a song. They went over the top with a smile. They marched on through blood and fire, onto the front till that November morning when beneath the stars of their God and their country they stood triumphant over the broken remnants of German autocracy. Of them and their record we're proud. We're proud of the record made by fathers and mothers, wives and daughters who stayed at home and worked and saved, prayed and sacrificed that these boys might be fed and clothed, armed and munitioned, and that America might win the war. The paths of Missouri's young manhood run from homes to dugouts and from the furrows of the farm to the trenches of the battle front. These paths are lit by the altar fires of sacrifice and patriotism. Would to God those were the only ones made by Missourians. But winding amidst them like the tortuous, slimy trail of the hissing serpent, is the path made by the senior Senator from Missouri.

"Made Slimy Trail Alone."

"But we didn't follow him. He made that slimy trail alone. It is my faith that we won't crawl in it now.'

"In this belated hour, he tried to make peace with the service men by a mock concern for their welfare. He opposed the measure designed to insure them bread in war time, but he wants to give them a bonus now. But it will be observed that he wants his bonus first. While the bonus bill waits in Washington, he campaigns for renomination in Missouri. Breckinridge Long was for bread then and is for a bonus now. I would rather trust him to keep up the fight for a bonus than the man who jeopardized the soldiers' bread in time of war."

Asserting that Reed had "not the nerve" to submit his record to the people, Hay said he was attempting to becloud the issue, and had brought in such matters as Reed's attack on Hoover.

"The gentleman whose record we are interested in is not named Herbert Hoover," Hay said, "but James A. Reed. We do not care just now who Hoover is or was. If he is a devil, that doesn't make Jim Reed a Saint. Reed doesn't put wings on himself by putting horns and hoofs on Hoover.

"Added to Own Dishonor."

"But by his discussion of Hoover, Reed has only added to his own dishonor, for he has deliberately falsified about Hoover and attempted to deceive you, his own constituents. He tells you that Hoover fixed the price of wheat. That's not true. A commission 12 men, six representing the farming industry, fixed it, and Hoover had nothing to do with it."

Hay then recited the facts of the price fixing of wheat as they were published several weeks ago in the Post-Dispatch, concluding his discussion of the subject with an oratorial tribute to the farmer.

He described Reed's tactics of criticism, obstruction and opposition to the League of Nations.

"The majority of his party and great leaders of the opposing party approved it," Hay said, "citizens everywhere, Democrats in overwhelming numbers called upon their representatives to ratify the treaty.

"Fought Treaty Unfairly."

"What was the record of James A. Reed? Criticism, obstruction, opposition. He opposed it. He denounced it. He attacked the good faith and patriotism of the President for advising its ratification. He not only fought the treaty, but he fought it unfairly. He didn't state the facts. He deliberately misstated them. He didn't fight it honestly He deliberately misconstrued the plain terms of the covenant. He resorted to base sophistry and demagoguery to deceive the people. He stooped to coarse appeals to passion and prejudice to inflame the people against the treaty and the treaty's supporters.

"The cruel fact is that this man who in 1910 boasted that he had never stabbed his party's leader in the back, not only denounced the President's proposal, but villified him personally. Not only in the Senate, but from one end of the country to the other, he attacked him with the coarseness of the gutter and the ferocity of the jungle. The attacks began as the President took his seat at the conference table, continued as the Presidnt, single-handed and alone, battled for justice and democracy against old world diplomats, increased in ferocity as he returned to his native shores with the great document in his hand, raged unabated as the President, pleading for the great cause, paled and trembled, and fell, and pursued him to the sick chamber and there with eager, savage eyes kept watch with death itself."

Hay recalled the history of Reed's attempt, which Hay called his "impudent request," to be sent as a delegate to the Democratic national convention, and recited that the party convention rejected Reed by a vote of 1070 to 429, and told also of the refusal of the national convention to award him a seat.

"The national convention, by a platform regularly and by overwhelming vote adopted, declared in favor of the peace treaty," Hay said. "What then? Did Reed accept the combined wisdom of the party?"

"Never Got on Platform."

"In 1910 he said, 'I stand on the Democratic platform. I never left it and never found it difficult to keep my equilibrium upon it.' On his return from San Francisco, did he stand on his party's platform? Did he keep his equilibrium on it? No. He never got on it at all. He says the State Committee ruled him off. They couldn't toll him on. He hired a hall in Kansas City, stood on his own platform, denounced his party's platform and nominees, then hurried away to Wisconsin to speak for an Independent Republican candidate for United States Senator

Consumed Days of Senate's Time.

"During the discussion of the league covenant in the Senate, Reed consumed days of the Senate's time in his diatribes against the league covenant, but during all of that time not a single syllable fell from his lips suggesting any other or better plan of international co-operation. The covenant proposed a practical method of settling international disputes by arbitration, a practical plan for disarmament, a practical plan for the abolition of secret treaties, a practical plan for the preservation of the territorial integrity and political independence of all nations. These Reed opposed. But not once did he suggest any other plan to accomplish any of these great purposes. He now boasts that he voted against the measure proposed by the President to increase the army and navy and says he was right and the President was wrong. But when the President proposed practical plan for the disarmament of this and every other nation, Reed opposed it. Reed must know, as all people must know it, namely, that unless by some plan the nations accomplish general disarmament, they will revert to competition in armaments. If we do not join with other nations in disarmament, we will be forced to arm and arm to the teeth.

"Democracy Kept the Faith."

"The Democracy of 1920 kept the faith. We went down to defeat, but we went in honor. The principles we fought for then still live. The vision we beheld then is still ours. The leadership we followed then we follow now; the soul of the most far-visioned Democrat this nation has known.

"In the memory of all he was and is for America and humanity I ask shall we desert him and his principles now? Shall Missouri recompense to him be a benediction and a blessing upon the head of his slanderer, betrayer and assassin?"

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Defeat of Senator James A. Reed and the nomination of Breckinridge Long as the Missouri Democrat's choice for United States Senator in the coming primaries was forecast today by Senator Spencer, Republican, Missouri, as a result of a poll of the State taken at his behest by Republican county managers.

Of the 114 counties in Missouri he has received replies from 105 of the 114 counties in the State. Eighty-nine of these, he says, are "strongly Long, while of the 19 for Reed many are doubtful.

REED, AT NEW BLOOMFIELD, DENIES HE "FOUGHT WILSON"

Senator Declares He Voted as Missouri People Wished Him to Vote—2500 Hear Him in Hostile Territory.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW BLOOMFIELD, Mo., July 8.—For the second time in the primary campaign, Senator James A. Reed today entered Callaway county, which has been hostile territory, to denounce Breckinridge Long, his opponent, and defend the charge that he "fought Wilson." More than 2500 persons, half of them women, attended the barbecue in Dun's pasture, where the senior Senator spoke.

Vivid language was used by Reed in attacking Long, who was described as a "coat tail candidate" and likened to an "intellectual serf." He warned the Democratic party against nominating a candidate who had been defeated before the League of Nations issue in the primary campaign.

Reed also attacked Harding, Hyde, George Creel, Secretary Mellon, Taft, Charles Hay of St. Louis, the Rev. W. C. Shupp of the Anti-Saloon League and Herbert Hoover.

The senior Senator on arrival here appeared worn and his voice was in poor condition. The strenuous campaign appears to be wearing on him. He will go to Kansas City for a rest over Sunday and start again Monday on his canvass for Democratic votes.

Fulton Man Presides.

W. M. Aycock of Fulton presided at today's meeting. Reed was introduced by U. S. Hall, ex-Representative of Columbia, who praised the Senator for "his personal honesty." He told of his record as prosecutor of Jackson County and later as Mayor of Kansas City, "another favorite place for men to feather their nests." Hall said that Reed came out of both offices poorer than when he went in.

Defending the charge that Reed in 1920 went to Wisconsin to campaign for a Republican candidate for the United States Senate, Hall told how the Democrats had supported the candidacy of Horace Greeley when he ran for President. Also, Hall related how Missouri Democrats had supported B. Gratz Brown, a Republican, who was elected Governor.

"Thank God for a man in the United States Senate who stood where Thomas Hart Benton stood," Hall said in closing.

Refers to Coattail Brigade.

Defending his right to vote, not as a President ordered, but as he believed the people of Missouri desired, Reed said:

"As long as the people of this country think independent, we will have a free country. When the people cease to think for themselves, we then cease to have a democracy.

"A man who cannot think for himself is too big a fool to represent Missouri in the United States Senate. Or a man who won't think for himself is too big a poltroon. This State never belonged to the coattail brigade."

The speaker brought a laugh when he said he had served with President Harding in the Senate "and he was about the easiest picking we had down there."

Reed said it might just as easily be imagined that he would be elected President as it would that Long would be elected Senator.

"I would have to do all the thinking and then would have to teach it to Breck," he added sarcastically.

Reed ridiculed Taft, then asked that his remarks not be quoted. Then he added: "I'd hate to have the destiny of my country in his (Taft's) hands. He might go to sleep some night and forget to wake up."

JUDGE OUSTS MAN "LUKEWARM" IN HIS POLITICAL SUPPORT

Court Stenographer Asked to Resign Because He Worked for Another Candidate.

Nicholas L. Meston, court stenographer for Circuit Judge Klene, yesterday was asked by the Judge to give his resignation not later than tomorrow. Judge Klene told a reporter that he learned Meston was "lukewarm" in supporting him for renomination for Circuit Judge while at the same time active in behalf of the candidacy of Wilbur C. Schwartz. Both Judge Klene and Schwartz were indorsed by the Bar Association for Republican nominations, but there are 33 other Republicans seeking Circuit Judgeship nominations, with nine to be made.

Judge Klene explained that since Meston has been holding a lucrative position under him for the last 5½ years he thought he had a right to expect a greater amount of reciprocation from his appointee than the latter has shown. Meston would not make a statement.

LONG RECEIVES WARM WELCOME IN RAY COUNTY

Assurances of Support Given Senatorial Candidate on Visits to Henrietta, Camden, Orrick and Hardin.

ENTHUSIASTIC CROWD HEARS RICHMOND TALK

Opponent Trying to Bring Republican Support to His Cause, Is Charge Made in Speeches.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

RICHMOND, Mo., July 8.—Breckenridge Long invaled Ray County today in his race for Senator, found a ready reception and received positive assurances of support. He came into the county from Lexington, where he spoke on the previous night, and was met by friends who took him through Henrietta, Camden, Orrick, then to Hardin, where he spoke in the afternoon. From Hardin he returned to Richmond, where he addressed one of the most enthusiastic crowds he has met during has campaign.

Accuses His Opponent.

Knowing he was among his friends enabled him to drive his remarks with force, and he charged his opponent with trying to bring Republican support to his cause, saying:

"There is a movement on foot to have Republicans come to our Democratic primary and vote for my opponent," he said. "Of course, the Democrats of Missouri will not permit Republicans to name the Democratic ticket. To do so would be to efface our political identity and to merge ourselves with the forces of the opposition. To do so would be party treachery. We have traditions to uphold. We have historic institutions to preserve and we resent the suggestions that Republicans should annex the Democratic party, and we will not permit it.

"I hear so much of it, though, that I must call it to your attention, so that you Democrats will be on guard. Here in your own vicinity, Lib Morse, the man who made Lowden famous by taking his slush fund, is advocating the nomination of my opponent. Members of Lib's family say they are going to vote for my opponent. I hear his satellite here, Joe Black, is talking for my opponent. Jim Bradshaw, field agent for my opponent, has made the statement that my opponent will receive 50,000 Republican votes in St. Louis.

Names More Names.

"It seems to be a part of a plan concocted to turn our party over to the Republicans. For instance, L. F. Padberg, a Republican judge of election, has resigned as a judge of election and announces he is going into the Democratic primary to vote for my opponent. He is making speeches in St. Louis at Republican meetings arranged for that purpose to get Republicans to come into our primary to vote for my opponent.

"Gaty Pallen, an attache of their headquarters in St. Louis, states this week that an organized movement would be made in South St. Louis under the direction of their headquarters, to get Republicans to vote for my opponent, and that this Padberg meeting was the first of a series.

"The movement also extends to the country districts. One, James R. Weldy, a Republican leader of Frankford in Pike County, the home of Ed Glenn, announced that he would vote 25 Republicans in our prmary for my opponent. The Cooper County Republican Commititee is openly advising Republicans to vote for my opponent and my opponent's manager.

"Means They Are Beaten."

"Ed Glenn, has written to Republicans this time while Republicans asking them brazeningly over his own signature to vote for my opponnet. This all means that they are hoplessly beaten. That they cannot get enough Democratic votes to come even close to winning and now are preparing to betray their party into the hands of the Republicans to secure their own selfish purposes. Of course, they cannot succeed. Of course, we Democrats will not allow this to happen. Of course, steps are being taken to insure the virture and integrity of our party. Of course, the things for which we stand will be protected and held inviolate.

"We are not occasional Democrats. We are not ready to say to the Republicans: 'You were right and we were wrong.' We are going to stand by our party and see perpetuated their princles of Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson."

10-YEAR-OLD BOY KILLS HIS BROTHER, 9, IN PLAY WITH GUN

Charels McDonald, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James McDonald of Alton, shot and killed his 9-year-old brother, Leroy, yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the family home. Members of the family say the boys were playing with a gun when Charles playfully pointed it at Leroy, pulled the trigger, the bullet taking fatal effect.

The boys are grandchildren of the former chief of the Alton Fire Department, Andrew McDonald.

DRY LEAGUE STATE HEAD CALLS LIST OF DONORS 'PHONY'

Names of Alleged Contributors to Anti-Saloon League Is Given Out by Former Judge H. S. Priest.

INFORMATION FALSE, SUPT. SHUPP CLAIMS

He Says Policy of Furnishing False Information to the Enemy Was Followed in This Case.

A list of alleged contributors to the Anti-Saloon League of Missouri, and amounts of their contributions, given out yesterday by former Judge Henry S. Priest, was declared by the Rev. W. C. Shupp, State superintendent of the league, to be "phony."

Some of the persons whose names are in the list said last night, to a Post-Dispatch reporter, either that they had not given anything to the league or that they had not contributed any such sums as those in the purported list, which sums are mostly in three figures.

Supt. Shupp said a brewery representative bought the list of names from a man who was formerly engaged in special work for the league, in aiding law enforcement in local option counties, before the prohibition period. The story, as Supt. Shupp told it, was that the league, in this case, followed a practice sometimes used in warfare, and furnished false information to the enemy.

"Absurdity Is Obvious."

"The enforcement employe came to me," Shupp said, "and said that a brewery representative was trying to buy information from him as to the league's activities and its sources of support. The man had no intention of selling us out, and I told him that, since the brewery people had started the game, we could play it also. I told him I would not object to his furnishing a list of names to the brewery people—not a correct list taken from our records, but one that he might prepare as he saw fit.

"I afterward learned that he had taken the membership manuals of some of the churches, which are kept in our office, and had made up a list chiefly from these lists of church members, and that he had added a number of names taken, virtually at random, from the telephone book. He put down the amounts arbitrarily, and made them so large that the absurdity in many cases is obvious.

"My chief purpose in having him furnish this list to the brewery people was to try to get some information which we wanted about them. We learned somethings, though not all we wanted to know.

Surprised at Its Revival.

"There was talk of printing this list several years ago, and a public official, whose name was on the list, and who has never in fact been a contributor to the league, protested against it. I thought the 'phony' nature of the list was recognized at that time, and I am surprised to see it being revived and seriously put forth now.

"Our league would be prosperous indeed if we could get anything like the contributions shown in this list. As a matter of fact, most of our contributors give either $6 a year or $12 a year. Looking over the list, I see some of our $6 and $12 a year contributions listed as giving $100 or $150. But the greater part of those named have never given us anything, so far as our records show. Some of the amounts are obviously beyond the means of the men named as giving them. Some of the men named have never been in sympathy with us.

"Politicians Not Givers."

"Attorney-General Barrett, State Auditor Proctor and Circuit Attorney Sidener, who appear as having made large contributions, have never been among our contributors, in any sum whatever."

Examination of the list shows several groups which represent the membership of various West End churches. One large group, printed together, is of members of Pilgrim Congregational Church, another is of members of Westminster Presbyterian Church, another of members of Central Presbyterian Church. One of the names in one of these church groups is that of a member of the Executive Committee of the Missouri branch, Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, of which Judge Priest is president. This man is credited with having given the league $100.

Priest Believes It Genuine.

Judge Priest said last evening that he believed the list to be genuine, though he noticed the names of some wets among the purported contributors to the Anti-Saloon League. He said the list covered contributions made in 1916, 1917 and 1918.

The apparent purpose of giving out the purported list yesterday was to make a counter-attack on Supt. Shupp, who has asked Missouri ministers to preach, between now and the primary, Aug. 1, against the candidacy of Senator Reed, on the ground that Reed is opposed to prohibition.

Another purpose was to indicate that the Anti-Saloon League has large resources for political campaigns. Reed has recently been talking about the prospective expenditure of $200,000 by the league in the Missouri campaign this year. Supt. Shupp says the league's total budget last year was $38,600, and that its resources are not materially larger this year.

Protest Is Issued.

In a long prepared statement, which accompanies the purported list of Anti-Saloon League contributors, Judge Priest protested against "discrediting the sacredness of God's house with political harangues."

Judge Priest also gave out a letter, dated shortly before the 1916 election, and signed by Superintendent Shupp, in which Shupp discussed, with one of his field workers, the changed attitude of a certain Missouri Congressman. This letter was:

"I was mighty glad to get your letter telling about your interview with ——. Since he comes fully over with us, it will save us a lot of trouble. The other fellow is wet and has little chance to be elected, so even if the other crowd get next, I don't think they could defeat our man.

"They will likely go along thinking of his vote against national prohibition, and help us elect him. That will be one sore bunch when he votes next December again. Put all our friends into the fight for ——, but tell them to keep mighty quiet about it.

"P. S.—Better keep your eye on him pretty close, however, for he may be playing us double."

Thinks He Wrote Letter.

Superintendent Shupp said, after reading this letter, that he might have written it, and that he was inclined to think that the letter was genuine, and was taken from an old correspondence file which was thrown away several years ago. The man named in the letter was re-elected to Congress in 1916.

Besides the St. Louis list, Judge Priest gave out a similar Kansas City list, which Superintendent Shupp pronounced no more genuine than the other. The name of State Senator Proctor was in this list, as the name of Attorney-General Barrett was in the St. Louis list, and Shupp says neither has actually been a contributor to the league.

APPOINTED BY POPE AS BISHOP COADJUTOR

THE REV. FATHER GILFILLAN.

FATHER GILFILLAN REPORTED NAMED BISHOP COADJUTOR

Cable From Rome Announces Rector of St. Louis Cathedral Will Assist Bishop in St. Joseph.

An Associated Press cable from Rome yesterday afternoon announced that Pope Pius XI had appointed the Rev. Father Francis Gilfillan, rector of the St. Louis Cathedral, as Bishop coadjutor of the diocese of St. Joseph, Mo.

Father Gilfillan said last night that he had not received personal notification of the appointment, and could therefore say nothing about it. Archbishop Glennon said he was without inforamtion, except from news dispatches. It has been known here that the appointment of a coadjutor to Bishop M. F. Burke of St. Joseph was under consideration. Bishop Burke is 77 years old.

Ordained in 1895.

Father Gilfillan is 50 years old, is a native of Ireland, and was educated in St. Patrick's College, Carlow, and in the Catholic University in Washington. He was ordained to the priesthood by Archbishop Kain in St. Louis in 1895, and he has been stationed in the New Cathedral parish since 1896, serving as assistant successively to Father J. J. McCaffery and Father P. F. O'Reilly, and being appointed pastor in 1907.

He has served as a member of the board of directors of Kenrick Seminary and as a member of the Board of Synodal Examiners.

Has Right of Sucession.

A Bishop coadjutor has the right of succession, on the death of the Bishop whom he assists. Such appointments are usually made when the Bishop of a diocese, because of age or illness, is not able to give the required attention to his duties.

The diocese of St. Joseph is one of three in Missouri, the others being these of St. Louis, an archdiocese, and Kansas City.

The dispatch announcing this appointment also told of the naming of the Rev. Father Michael Keyes as Bishop of Savannah, Ga.

HUSBAND'S DEVOTION TO RADIO CAUSES WIFE TO SEEK DIVORCE

She Alleges He Spends All of Money Buying Outfits and Does Not Support Family.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Radio, which has brought pleasure to thousands of American homes during the last six months, was the innocent source of annoyance to Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tibbs, wife of J. Fletcher Tibbs, of the Southern Railway, according to the petition for a limited divorce filed in the District of Columbia Supreme Court today.

Mrs. Tibbse charges, among other things, that her husband "spends all his time reading books about this invention and all his spare money buying radio outfits to the exclusion of herself and child in so far as entertainment is concerned; and certainly to their complete exclusion as far as having any money to support them with is concerned."

HARDINGS RETURN TO WHITE HOUSE AFTER TRIP TO OHIO

Yesterday, Their 31st Wedding Anniversary, Spent in Journey Over Mountains.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—President Harding returned to the White House late today from his week's automobile trip to Ohio.

During his absence President Harding attended Marine maneuvers at Gettysburg, the centennial celebration at Marion, Ohio, and a reception in his honor at Columbus, Ohio, in addition to making several stops along the route for brief addresses. The final day of the return trip, which was the 31st wedding anniversary of the President and Mrs. Harding, was spent traveling over the mountains between Uniontown, Pa., where the last overnight stop was made, and here.

Two stops were made during the day, one at Hagerstown, Md., where Mr. and Mrs. Harding had luncheon with a group of men and women who are active in Republican politics in that section, and the other at Frederick, where the Marines were encamped on their hike back to permanent headquarters at Quantico, Va. At Frederick the President was greeted by Gov. Ritchie of Maryland, Maj. Gen. Le June, commandant of the Marine Corps, and Brig. Gen. Smalley D. Butler ,in command of the Marine detachment. Only a brief stop was made, the presidential party proceeding to Washington, arriving at 6:04 o'clock.

IRISH INSURGENTS HAVE FLED BEFORE NATIONAL TROOPS

Force of Irregulars Massed South of Dublin Routed and Menace of Fighting Is Farther Removed.

BLESSINGTON TAKEN WITHOUT RESISTANCE

Rebel Leader, Former De Valera Aid, Motoring to Inspect His Forces, Drives Into Arms of Enemy.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, July 8.—The force of irregulars mustered south of Dublin has fled before the advance of the national troops, and the menace of fighting before the capital is further removed. The base of the Blessington, was captured by national forces early today, and the main body of the irregulars is on the run in the Wicklow Hills.

The insurgents withdrew from Blessington without resistance; the occupation of the village entailed no casualties on either side. They had been billetted in the town in considerable numbers.. Last Sunday four or five hundred of them took possession with strong outposts.

The nationals encountered serious resistance only at Ballymore Eustace, where they suffered some minor casualties. The irregulars fell back on their base losing several small detachment; when the cordon on the south and west was within a mile of them they slipped away into the wildest part of the Wicklow Hills.

Drives Into Enemy's Arms.

The irregulars have lost their best leaders, including Andy McDonnell and Jerry Boland. Jerry is the brother of Harry J. Boland, De Valera's former secretary. He arrived in a motor to inspect one of the outposts, but drove directly into the hands of the nationals who were in possession of it.

Erskine Childers, one of De Valera's main supporters and recently reported as commanding the rebels in the area south of Dublin, is said by the correspondent of the Daily Mirror to have been badly wounded.

The Dublin correspondent of the Daily Express declares several hundred prisoners already have been taken and that several lorry loads of wounded were sent to the capital.

The question of what the provisional government will do with De Valera if he is captured is raised by the Daily Mail's Dublin correspondent, who expresses the opinion that it will merely detain him a while, releasing him for the first meeting of the new Parliament.

In various parts of the provinces the Irregulars, alarmed by the advance of the National soldiers, have abandoned and burned their fortified positions and fled into the country.

Life in Dublin Becoming Normal.

In Dublin itself, life is rapidly becoming normal. The railways are resuming service, though damage to the line prevents direct railroad communication with Cork.

Casualties suffered by the National army in the recent conflict in Dublin were 16 dead and 122 wounded, an official announcement says.

Architects estimate that it will require four years to rebuild the areas devastated, this not including replacement of the Four Courts Building.

The Irish Independent suggests an Irish loan of £20,000,000 for reconstruction.

There has been a remarkable response to the provisional government's call for volunteers to assist in putting down the republican revolt. In this city alone nearly 2000 men have been enrolled for military service.

Provincial Situation.

Substantial progress in the campaign being waged against the republicans by the national force in the provinces is indicated in today's official communique. More than 50 prisoners were taken at Arklow, County Wicklow; Drogheda, on the Louth-Meath border; Newton Cunningham, County Donegal, and Ballymore Eustace, County Kildare.

The town of Ferns in County Wexford, which has been strongly held by the irregulars, has been captured and the garrisons made prisoners. In the Enniscorthy district parties of irregulars are reported to be roving about the country seizing food and clothing. Drogheda is controlled by the national forces, the communique says.

REPRESENTATIVE HAWES IS SICK AT HIS HOME IN WASHINGTON

Became Infected When on Fishing Trip in Chesapeake Bay a Week Ago.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 8.—Representative Hawes is ill here of an infection contracted a week ago and will be unable to return home for several days. His office announced today that his ailment was a "streptococcic" infection.

With friends Hawes went on a fishing trip in Chesapeake Bay when the House adjourned. He became suddenly ill on a launch. Upon being carried back to camp he was attended by Maj. Johnson, army medical officer, who was in an adjoining camp, and who ordered that he be carried to Washington at once. His personal physician stated today that his patient is better and may be out by Wednesday.

Blood poison was feared for a time. The infection appeared on head and feet and brought high fever at the outset. His condition was not made known generally for fear his friends might be unduly alarmed. Mrs. Hawes and their two daughters had returned to St. Louis and it was his purpose to join them the past week.

JUDGE BLOCKS ENFORCEMENT OF CHAUFFEUR ORDINANCE

Restraining Order, Effective Until Oct. 2, Issued Upon Complaint of Service Car Owners.

A temporary restraining order was issued yesterday by Circuit Judge Hall against Director of Streets and Sewers Fisk and Chief of Police O'Brien to prevent them from enforcing and ordinance regulating service cars and chauffeurs. The ordinance was approved in January, 1921, and prescribes rules and regulations for motor service cars and their drivers, and provides a fine of $25 to $500 for violation.

Fifty-six service car owners, who are plaintiffs in the suit, allege that the ordinance is in conflict with the State law regulating motor vehicles also that the Board of Aldermen exceeded its authority in enacting the ordinance. The temporary order will be in effect until Oct. 2, the time set for hearing the case on its merits.

Striking Carpenters Return.

The carpenters employed by the Widmer Engineering Co. on a building at King's highway and Slevin avenue, who went on strike May 20 because nonunion men were installing machinery there for the Standard Underground Cable Co., which was to occupy the building returned to work yesterday. J. W. BYRNES SPEAKS AGAINST PROHIBITION

St. Louisan Attacks Amendment and Enforcement Act as Morally Wrong.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Mo., July 8.—J. W. Byrnes, Democratic candidate for the mayoralty at the last election in St. Louis, spoke against the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act at a meeting here tonight, called by Mayor John J. Ernst, the first in the campaign of the Missouri Branch of the Association Against Prohibition. He attacked the amendment and the act on the grounds that they are morally wrong, contrary to the Constitution, conducive to evil effects and economic disturbance and dangerous to American institutions.

Morally, he argued, man is possessed of the right to life, the power of choice and a free and unrestricted will, the use of things that make up life and living, and, having physical senses, the natural right to gratify them, and the right to select and choose, subject to the corresponding obligations against abuse, subject to the laws of human reason, and provided further that the exercise of such natural rights does not trespass upon the natural rights of others or shock the reasonable sensibilities of others.

Conclusion as to Liquor.

He concluded that man has the natural right to produce and use alcoholic liquors, subject to regulation where abuses are found.

The Constitution, he said, rested on natural rights, and the Eighteenth Amendment, by depriving the individual of the right to select and choose without restraint, tended to nullify it. The amendment, having been passed by constituted authority, should be obeyed as long as it is a law, but the temptation for infraction was serious and general. "Disrespect for Federal laws," he said, "is dangerous to our institutions, wrong in itself and strikes at the foundation of our Government."

He denounced the action of the Government, through the Shipping Board, in dispensing liquors on American ships.

Statistics, he said, showed a decrease in arrests for abuse and an increase in arrests for the manufacture of liquors, the sum total being about the same. Public abuse could be regulated, but it seemed that surreptitious abuse was impractical to reach. "It is apparent," he said, "that the means adopted to secure temperance results in more evil than the good end desired, and as no end, however good, can be justified by means not entirely good, prohibition as such is not defensible, since it can only deal with abuses, which are entirely matters of regulation."

Economic Effect Discussed.

Economically, he declared that the sum total of materials, wages and salaries, invested capital and yearly profits affected was $2,250,867,280.

The danger, he said, was that amendments such as the Eighteenth and laws such as the Volstead act, logically and completely carried to a conclusion in other things, were the straight road to bureaucracy, paternalism, communism and complete collapse, or led to monarchy.

The remedy, he said, was in the joining of all forces of good and going back to the liberty of the Constitution and uninfluenced representative government, the building of character in youth, by example, training and moral suasion, and the sanctity of the home and Sunday school.

MARRIAGE OF COUPLE IN MARCH JUST COMES TO PUBLIC'S EYE

Mrs. P. M. Webb Announces Her Daughter, Alice Margaret, Wedded to John S. Carter Jr.

Carter confirmed the announcement to a Post-Dispatch reporter, giving as his reason for keeping the marriage secret so long a desire to establish himself in business before making it known. He said he and his wife were married by Justice of the Peace Stecker under the names of "John Crane and Margaret Moore of Chicago." He is 23 years old and his wife 20.

The bride has been living at the home of her mother and Carter with his parents, until about a month ago, when he went to live with friends at 326 North Euclid avenue.

TROOPS ON WAY TO MINES IN KENTUCKY

Cavalrymen With Machine Guns Sent to Madisonville, Where Strike Trouble Threatens.

By the Associated Press.

BARBOURVILLE, Ky., July 8.—Gov. Edwin Morrow late today ordered trips to move from Hopkinsville and Livermore to Madisonville, when county authorities at that place advised him the situation at a strip mine there proved threatening, and that local authorities would be unable to handle the situation if trouble developed as they anticipated.

Gov. Morrow was reported tonight en route to Frankfort leaving here after a brief business visit. A total of 55 men due to arrive in Madisonville early tomorrow morning. The cavalry troops from Hopkinsville will be equipped with machine guns, while the infantry from Livermore will carry its regular field paraphernalia.

200 Union Men Said to Have Threatened Miners.

By the Associated Press.

MADISONVILLE, Ky., July 8.—An appeal for State troops to come here as a precautionary measure was forwarded late this afternoon to the Governor by county authorities who claim they are "solely concerned in trying to see that peace in the county and laws are maintained," following the action Thursday night of about 200 men visiting the Sunlight mines and making threats against the property and employes of the company, after making efforts to persuade the men to jain the union.

The Dunlap Mining Co. operates the strip mines a few miles southeast of here, with nonunion labor, it is reported, using about 100 men.

The statement of County Judge C. G. Givens, County Attorney Charles G. Franklin and Sheriff L. R. Ray, regarding the need of troops was issued after a conference and said:

"The local authorities are not concerned one way or the other in any disputes between the company and its employes or betwen the company and the union (if the union is in any way involved in the controversy), but the local authorities are solely concerned in trying to see that the peace of the county and the laws are maintained.

"There are legal means provided for settling all such questions and acts of violence, if such are contemplated, cannot be tolerated here."

Nine More Alleged Union Miners Held in Connection With Killing.

By the Associated Press.

BELLAIRE, O., July 8.—Nine additional arrests of alleged union miners were made at New Lafferty, O., today by Sheriff Richard Lynch, in connection with the killing of John Majors near the town early this week.

Majors was a part owner of the mine and the trouble resulted from friction between union and nonunion miners.

Thirteen men are now arrested charged with suspicion. A special session of the grand jury has been called to convene Monday to consider the killing of Majors.

One arrest followed trouble today at the mine of the Cleveland and Western Coal Co., six miles south of here on Pipe Creek.

U. S. Marshals Ordered to Coal Mines in Ohio.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., July 8.—Law enforcement in Ohio coal mining regions in the event of mine strike trouble was put squarely up to local officials throughout the State today by Federal Judge Sater and Gov. Davis here.

Orders that United States Marshals proceed to the Consolidated Coal and Coke Co. properties in Perry County temporarily were held up by Judge Sater. At practically the same time Gov. Davis issued a statement declaring county and municipal law enforcement officers in the mining regions of Ohio "will be held to strict account" if there are strike disorders.

SOLDAN ATHLETE, WHO DIED OF TYPHOID FEVER, IS BURIED

The funeral of Harold Johnson Jacoby, 17 years old, letter man in track athletics at Soldan High School, was held at 3 p. m. Friday at the home of his uncle, Samuel J. Keiffer, 5918 DeGiverville avenue, where he died Wednesday of typhoid fever. Nearly 100 members of the Demolay Masonic order were honorary pallbearers. Burial was in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Young Jacoby became ill two days before he was to have been graduated from Soldan on June 18. He insisted upon getting up to receive his diploma, but collapsed on leaving his bed and the diploma was brought him by his aunt. He had studied hard for three months, some times staying up until 1 o'clock, to crowd a four and a half year course into four years, and this intensive work is believed to have led to his sickness.

He was president of the Epsilon Eta Club at Soldan. For the last year he had lived much with his uncle that he might be eligible to attend Soldan, as his father, Charles A. Jacoby, had moved to 5011 Belleview street, St. Louis County.

GOV. HARDING RESENTS SENATORIAL CRITICISM

Reserve Board Head Declares Charges Against Policy Are Misleading and Untrue.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Gov. Harding of the Federal Reserve Board in a letter to the Senate today struck back at senatorial criticism of the board and its policy.

Assuming complete responsibility for circulation by Federal Reserve banks of a speech by Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, defending the board, Gov. Harding declared that charges made against the board were "misleading and untrue."

Without mentioning by name Senator Heflin, Democrat, Alabama, who has criticized the board frequently, Gov. Harding said that some of the Senate charges "would have been resented as libelous" but for the constitutional immunity of Senators in debate.

Gov. Harding's letter written in response to a resolution by Senator Heflin regarding circulation of Senator Glass' speech was accompanied by letters from the Philadelphia, Richmond and St. Louis reserve banks stating that they had circulated, respectively, 11,000 copies, 10,000 and 15,000 copies of Senator Glass' speech.

In his letter Gov. Harding said that on Jan. 18, he sent a letter to the Governors of all reserve banks stating:

"Think Senator Glass' great speech defending Federal Reserve system should be widely and promptly circulated."

"The Federal Reserve Board," Gov. Harding's letter to the Senate continued, "assumes responsibility for commending this speech to the Federal Reserve banks for circulation. Neither the board nor the Federal Reserve banks regarded the speech as being an attack upon any Senator and were not interested in it from that point of view. This speech was and is regarded by the board as a fair presentation of facts. It was commended to the banks for circulation because it was an answer made in the Senate chamber to charges which had been made on the floor of the Senate. It is a clear exposition of the policies, functions and operations of the Federal Reserve system during a critical period and is an important contribution to current economic discussion."

Asserting that banking business rests peculiarly upon the foundation of public confidence, Gov. Harding declared that the board and each bank, as a custodian of the nation's finances had the right and the duty to take necessary steps to prevent undermining of public confidence.

Dining and Buffet Cars on Santa Fe No. 4 Telescoped at Burrton, Kan.

By the Associated Press.

BURRTON Kan., July 8.—Six persons were seriously injured here late today when Santa Fe passenger train No. 4 crashed into an open switch and into a string of oil cars, which took price and burned for hours.

The injured are:

H. K. Domville, Detroit, Mich., cut about the head.

H. E. Miller, Mamaroneck, N. Y., serious internal injuries.

Eugene W. Smith, address unknown, cut and bruished.

Sam Dresher, Omaha, right leg crushed.

R. C. Malcolm, Pekin, China, severe internal injuries.

J. M. Slehman, Pasadena, Cal., bruised and cut.

James W. Ditto, Lancaster, O., cut on head.

R. A. Broomfield, Harmosa Beach, Cal., leg broken.

O. Peterson, dining car steward, head cut.

Eight of the injured were passengers in the club car, the first behind the engine. It was the only wooden car in the train. The steel dining car, next behind, nosed halfway through the club car, reducing it to kindling. These cars and the engine were the only ones to leave the track.

When the train entered the switch, both the fireman and engineer jumped. S. H. Yoakum, engineer, of Newton, Kan., set the air brakes before he left. Both sustained slight cuts.

Emergency aid was rendered by doctors sent on special trains from Newton and Hutchinson. Eight of the injured were brought to hospitals in Hutchinson.

DEATH SENTENCE LIFTED FROM NEGRO BY HYDE

Woodville Thurston Was Found Guilty of Criminal Attack on a White Girl.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 8.—The death sentence of Woodville Thurston, negro, 30 years old, who was to have been hanged in St. Louis July 21 for a criminal attack on Marcia E. Herbold, a white girl, was commuted by Gov. Hyde today to life imprisonment. The Governor's chief reasons, as stated at his office, were letters written by Thomas J. O'Brien, former Assistant Circuit Attorney in St. Louis, who prosecuted Thurston, and by Mr. and Mrs. James S. Dowling, 5447 Bartmer avenue, by whom Thurston was employed when the crime was committed.

O'Brien wrote, on Thursday, that he had not been able to make up his own mind during the trial whether Thurston was guilty, and said: "I ask the closest consideration of this case; I should regret to see a man hanged if there was any doubt as to his guilt." He made no further recommendation. He said that an Italian saloon keeper who had testified for the State that he had seen Thurston in the neighborhood where the assault occurred, that evening, had not heard of the assault for several days and might have been mistaken as to the date he saw Thurston.

O'Brien also expressed doubt concerning the light by which Miss Herbold had seen her assailant. He said that she had testified to seeing the negro under a street light close to the lot on Manchester avenue, west of King's highway, where the assault occurred, and that a policeman had testified to the proximity of the light and this spot, but that he himself had gone to the scene and found the lamp to be 110 feet away.

Mr. and Mrs. Dowling wrote that one of Thurston's chief duties was to meet Dowling when he came home at 6 p. m. and take care of his automobile, after which he would eat his dinner there and remain until 6:30 or 6:45 p. m. They said they were now certain that he had not left earlier on any night around the time of the assault, which was on Jan. 14, 1920, at about 6:45 p. m. The Dowlings were the only witnesses in defense of Thurston at his trial. Their home is four miles from the scene of the assault.

Archbishop Wrote Letter.

O'Brien had declared that the Dowlings were reputable people and he was certain they would not willfully perjure themselves.

Archbishop Glennon of St. Louis wrote to Gov. Hyde yesterday, telling him that a reasonable doubt of Thurston's guilt seemed to be created by the evidence, but making no recommendation. He does not know Thurston, but the case was called to his attention by Father de Vilbas, Catholic chaplain of the St. L Jail.

Thurston's mother died since sentence. He is in the jail now. T last hanging in St. Louis was of a gro in 1907, for murder.

An apple may look healthy on the surface but sometimes when you cut it open you find a busy worm in the center. So, too, with your new building. You might make it look like a wing of Buckingham Palace, but if you put an indifferent heating boiler in it, it's an apple with a worm in it.

We often wonder what people are thinking of when they spend thousands of dollars on new buildings and treat the subject of the boiler as if it were a mere incident instead of what it is—the heart of the building.

Why not quit fooling—why not stop taking chances—why not eliminate false economy—and install Kewanee All Steel Boilers, which will last as long as the building, add to its renting and sales-value and insure the comfort of the people in it.

Kewanee All Steel Boilers are riveted together in one piece at the factory, doing away with any chance for leaky joints such as occur in any boiler assembled on the job.

The Old Man Behind the Boiler will give you figures on costs and savings that will open your eyes. Write to him for an eye-opener.

BROWNS DIVIDE DOUBLE BILL; CARDINALS WIN, 10-7

Vangilder Beaten by Red Sox on Four Hits; Kolp and Pruett Win

Pratt Triples With One on in Ninth and Breaks Tie, in First Game—Fohl's Men Outhit and Outplay Foe in Second.

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

BOSTON, Mass., July 8.—Elam Vangilder's brilliant four-hit pitching exhibition against the Boston Red Sox was wasted this afternoon, when the men of Hugh Duffy fielded so spectacularly behind Warren "Rip" Collins that the Fohlmen were able to manufacture only one run out of the eight hits. Two of the four hits off Vangilder came in the ninth inning, producing Boston's only earned run, which with an unearned run in a previous inning gave the Red Sox a 2-1 victory in the first game of the double-header.

After thus dropping into a virtual tie with the Yankees for first place, the Browns regained their batting form in the second game and slammed out an easy 10-6 triumph for Ray Kolp, pounding Bill Piercy and Benny Karr and leading from start to finish by a comfortable margin. As Cleveland obliged by taking the threatening Yankees' measure, the Browns increased their first place lead to one full game.

Vangilder certainly will be glad to get out of Boston. He has lost three games to the Red Sox thus far this year, and in each game he deserved victory. Once he went into the ninth with an apparently safe lead, only to have McManus make two errors, after which the Sox defeated him.

This afternoon he pitched as fine a game as one would order in a world's series. And still he lost. In the first inning, a double play pulled Vangilder out of a hole, but in the second Elam's jinx asserted itself. Pratt, first up in the second, sent a little roller toward third. It was a hard chance, but Ellerbe raced in fast and picked up the ball cleanly, only to follow with a wild and wooly throw past Sisler, Pratt reaching second. Dugan laid down a sacrifice bunt and John Collins sent a long fly to Williams on which Pratt easily scored.

Elam Stops Hostile Rally.

Vangilder refused to be rattled by this misfortune and mowed down the Sox one after another. In the fourth after two were out, Pratt got the first Boston hit, a single to left. Ellerbe followed by fumbling Dugan's grounder, but Vangilder stopped the hostile rally by stabbing John Colins' line drive.

Again in the sixth, Vangilder showed a stout heart under fire. Leibold led off by beating out a slow roller to McManus. Menosky sacrificed and Leibold went to third, while Vangilder was throwing out Burns. Del "Pesky" Pratt smashed a grounder toward the box which Vangilder knocked down, but which dribbled toward second for what threatened to be a hit. Leibold was racing for home, but Vangilder raced just as fast. He retrieved the ball near second and his fine throw to Sisler was just in time to retire the batter and prevent Leibold from counting.

Meantime the Browns were hitting Collins, but not in the pinches. Tobin started the game with a single, was sacrificed to second, only to stay there while Sisler and Williams were being retired on outfield flies. In the fourth, Sisler singled, only to have Williams and McManus fly out. Sisler stole second and third, but Jacobson tapped to Collins and Sisler's fine base running was wasted.

In the fifth Severeid started with a single and took second on a wild pitch, but Ellerbe flied to Menosky, Vangilder fouled to Ruel and after Severeid reached third on Tobin's scratch hit to Rip Collins, Pratt made a spectacular stop and throw to retire Gerber.

Sisler drew a pass to start the sixth, stole second and scored on Williams' single to center. That was the only run the Browns were able to push over. Tobin started the eighth with a double to right, but Gerber flied out, Sisler rolled to Pratt and then Del raced over toward second for another splendid stop and throw to retire Williams.

But the fanciest bit of fielding was still to come. To start the ninth McManus crashed a double against the left field fence. Jacobson laid down a sacrifice and it appeared that at last the Browns were to dent the plate and take the lead. Severeid bunted foul on an attempted squeeze play and then sent a fly to left. [illegible] Menosky made the catch and [illegible] signaled McManus to dash for the plate. Menosky's throw was [illegible], but was not the feature of the [illegible].

Pratt's Triple Ends Game.

"Muddy" Ruel saw that if he waited he would have to take the ball on the bounce, at the plate. So he dashed out to meet it, made the catch, wheeled and threw himself in the path of the onrushing McManus. There was a scramble of legs and arms, both men went sprawling in the dust and Ruel arose triumphantly to show that he had held the ball during the mixup. McManus was out, the side was out, once more the Sox had stopped the threatening Fohlmen.

After one was out in the Boston half of the ninth, Burns singled to left for the third hit off Vangilder. Then Del Pratt took a vicious swing at a fast ball and met it. The leather sailed far out to right center, cleared the outstretched arms of the desperately racing Jacobson and hit the concrete base of the bleachers. Jack fumbled a bit in his haste to retrieve it and by the time McManus took his relay and pegged to the plate it was too late. Burns was dashing to the dugout with the winning run scored.

There was a wild cheer, but it was short-lived. A hush of regret spread over the bleachers. The spectators were sorry. They wanted the Browns to win.

Browns Gain Easy Lead.

There was nothing brilliant about the second game. It was a contest of sluggers and the Browns had the best of it. They collected 14 safeties. In the first inning, Tobin singled, Gerber reached first on Maynard's fumble, Sisler advanced them with his infield out and Williams tripled to right center. Kenneth scored on an infield out and the Browns had a lead they never relinquished. Ray Kolp pitched as he pleased. He was hammered in the late innings and "Shucks" Pruett twirled the ninth.

Tomorrow the Browns will rest. On Monday they will meet the Red Sox in the third doubleheader of the series and Tuesday the Fohlmen will test their prowess against the Yankees in the first game of a series of four. Tomorrow night, Vice President Walter Fritsch will take Urban Shocker to New York, to give the spit-ball artist a good night's rest before he opens the Yankee series. Urban wants revenge. Let him have it.

World's Champion Who Easily Defeated Mrs. Mallory

MLLE. SUZANNE LENGLEN. —Keystone.

Her decisive victory in straight sets, 6-2, 6-0, over her bitter rival in the world's championship final at Wimbledon, yesterday, confirms her in a title she has held ever since 1919, her first victorious season. Mlle. Lenglen's alleged temperament failed to develop during yesterday's contest and her "goat" remained with her throughout.

Mlle. Lenglen, Playing Wonderful Tennis, Overwhelms Mrs. Mallory; U. S. Champion Wins but 2 Games

First Set Goes to French Girl 6-2, While Norse Woman, Losing Control in Second Set, Is Defeated 6-Love—Mlle. Lenglen's Game Brilliant Exhibition, Experts Agree.

WIMBLEDON, July 8.—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen late today demonstrated in a masterly manner that she is the greatest woman tennis player in the world.

Before a monster crowd that taxed the capacity of the stands here, and which included the King and Queen, the brilliant French woman defeated Mrs. Molla Mallory, 6—2, 6—0.

Mlle. Lenglen, after her victory, approached Mrs. Mallory, smiling and with her hand outstretched. Mrs. Mallory walked towards her and they shook hands cordially. Mrs. Mallory congratulated Suzanne and praised her game.

The crowd, which had plainly indicated by its applause that Mrs. Mallory was the favorite, gave the French woman a rousing reception when she left the court.

Mlle. Lenglen was plainy very nervous as the match started, while Mrs. Mallory was cool, but wore a determined, set look. Mlle. Lenglen lost no time. She won her first game, and after losing the second to the American woman, came back and won the third and fourth. Mrs. Mallory then won the fifth and her admirers took hope, but the French woman quickly won the sixth, seventh and eighth games and the set.

Applause Favors American.

The placing of both women was excellent. Mrs. Mallory excited admiration with her slashing drives, but the French woman managed to return most of them by brilliant playing. From the applause it was evident that the crowd was pulling for the American woman to win.

Mrs. Mallory lost on her own serve in the first game of the second set after carrying it to deuce. Her service was better than in the first set, but her returns were weak.

The French woman waded through Mrs. Mallory in the second, third and fourth games, winning them by furious attacks from the net. She also won the fifth and sixth games, giving her the second set in 6—0, and the match at 6—2 and 6—0.

Never before in the history of tennis has such a match been staged. There was the bitterest kind of enmity between the two women. Ever since Mlle. Lenglen defaulted to Mrs. Mallory at Forest Hills, L. I., last fall, a feud has raged in the newspapers. Supporters of Mrs. Mallory had claimed the French woman defaulted fearing defeat. The French woman had stoutly maintained that she collapsed physically.

"I Played Like a Fish, but Was Beaten Fairly," Mrs. Mallory Comments

WIMBLEDON, July 8.

"I PLAYED like a fish," said Mrs. Mallory as she walked off the court today, after losing to Mlle. Lenglen. "I was beaten fairly, but a third meeting will show who is the best player."

Mlle. Lenglen's only comment was:

"I was in good health and I won."

Smith's Home Run and Hornsby's Timely Hits Help Crush Brooklyn

For Third Successive Time Dodgers' Crack Hurling Staff Is Blasted by Barrage of Safeties—Cadore Due Today.

By Joseph F. Holland.

The "invincible" pitching staff of Brooklyn ran into the irresistible Cardinal attack yesterday afternoon, and for the third straight time the invincibles crumbled and collapsed. This time the score was 10 to 7 and, as usual, it was a hit by Rogers Hornsby that finally brought the verdict to the Rickey standard. It was the fifth straight Cardinal success, their best consecutive run of the season.

While this devastating Cardinal barrage was overcoming the handicap of poor pitching, New York was falling before the wrecked Pirates. The defeat brought the Giants within four games of the speeding Cardinal machine. That is an advantage which admits of real hope.

This Cardinal attack was not to be denied. Twice it witnessed a faltering pitcher drop a precious lead and three times it made up the deficit, and came again into the fore front. Home runs, triples, doubles and singles, all slashing hits, were part and parcel of the drive. Hits, hits and more hits; 15 of them, to be exact.

Mr. Grimes Disappears.

It is best not to bore the reader with details of the early innings and we take up the thread of the invincible attack in the last half of the seventh, with the Dodgers leading 6 to 5. Burleigh Grimes, one of the few survivors of the strain of vanishing spitball stars, was pitching and, while taking his share of slaps, was doing fairly well.

Behind him the Dodger machine was hitting like Jimmy Murphy's speeder. Indeed, when an expert accountant finally tallied up all the hits, it was found that the Dodgers had outhit the Cardinals 16 to 15. But when hits meant runs the Cardinal force was there.

Mueller batted for Pertica, Rickey's second pitcher, as the seventh opened and singled to right. Flack singled to left and Grimes vanished in favor of Sherrod Smith, at one time a great left-hander. Mann immediately batted for Jack Smith and forced Dyer, runing for Mueller, at third. The absolutely reliable Hornsby came through however, with a single to right that scored Flack and sent Mann to third. Mann followed the trail to the plate a moment later when Schultz bounded tantalizingly slow and high to Olson and was out at first.

That tied the score at 6 all and it remained tied just so long as it took Lou North to retire the pestiferous Dodgers.

Once More Hornsby Does It.

Stock opened the eighth with a triple to center. He scored on Ainsmiths' single to right. Lavan forced the Cardinal catcher at second, but raced to the middle station a moment later on North's ace to right. When Sherrod Smith hit Flack and filled the bases he was withdrawn in favor of Al Mamaux, the golden-spooned Pittsburg boy. Al walked Torporcer, batting for Mann, and forced Lavan over, leaving three packed and groaning bases for Hornsby. Rogers debated not, but singled to right, scoring North and Flack with the runs that made the issue safe beyond all doubt. Schultz's fly to Wheat ended the inning.

It was Hornsby's fourth hit and the third run he had driven across the plate. In the fifth inning he singled, stole second and third and was erased by an eyelash at the plate to steal home. The productive day brings Rogers well over the .400 mark.

Smith and Griffith Hit Homers.

There were such things as home runs. Jack Smith made one in the fifth with Flack on base and Bert Griffith, the St. Louis boy with Brooklyn, made another with the bases clear in the fourth.

It was a day of slugging, rampant, resounding slugging—but the Cardinals won and that is all one need worry about. Lou North is credited with the victory and Sherwood Smith with the defeat.

Looks Bad for Cadore.

Today the Cardinals have an opportunity to gain another half game on the Giants, who are idle. If they submit Leon Cadore to the same slaughter that Reuther, Vance and Grimes have endured, New York will be near enough to wave at.

Bill Doak for the Cardinals and Cadore for the Dodgers. Play at 3:15. The Dodgers finish up Monday and the Phillies follow for their treatment.

North the Winning Hurler.

Sherdel was out after his eleventh victory of the season yesterday. Rickey had to remove the little southpaw, however, and the victory was finally credited to North after Pertica had found the way a storm-tossed coast.

Jack Smith's homer was his fifth of the season.

McCurdy has played the last inning of two games at first base, but he has not acquired a fielding average. Harry hasn't a putout or assist to show for his work.

The Cardinals have been picking no soft spots in their five straight. They have beaten Reuther, the league's best; Vance and Grimes in succession. Their first two victories in the present run were at the expense of the Reds.

Hornsby is out after his twenty-second home run today. The crowd begged for a circuit smash yesterday, but Rog was content with three singles and a double.

Thirty-one players made their way into yesterday's game; 17 Rickeyites and 14 from the other side. A lot of it resulted from jockeying left-hand batters with right-hand pitchers and vice versa.

Century Sets New Mark in Winning Four-Oared Race

St. Louis Crew Negotiates Mile in 5:39 in Central States Regatta — Two Other Records Fall.

LOCALS FIRST IN FOUR OF SIX SENIOR RACES

Detroit Club Has High Point Total With 22—Western Rowing Club Is Second With 13.

From a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PEORIA, Ill., July 8.—Detroit oarsmen triumphed over the field again this afternoon in the final events of the Central States Rowing Association regatta with a total of 22 points. The Western Rowing Club of St. Louis garnered 13 during the two days' rowing.

Until the last event of the afternoon, conditions were ideal for the racers. A smooth, unruffled lake greeted the oarsmen in the first five events and as a direct result, two course records and one association mark were shattered. St. Louis crews claimed two of the new marks, while Detroit boasted the other.

Sweeping down the river with perfectly timed strokes for the first three-quarter mile, the Century senior four-oared crew accepted the challenge thrown out by the Detroit and Ivy crews in the final spurt for the finish and sped to victory, by a length and a half over the Detroiters for a new course record of 5m. 39s. To finish third, the Ivy crew gained five yards in the last five strokes on the St. Louis aggregation.

Hartman Sets New Mark.

Rowing his usual consistent race, Hartman of Detroit set up another course record in the second event, the senior single one-mile race, by negotiating the distance in 5m 55s. Hartman was pressed closely by Muckler of the Western Club, who finished a length behind. Clark of Detroit was third.

Hartman and Muckler stood out during the two regattas as the individual stars of the 350 oarsmen who participated. Hartman rowed with four first-place crews during the two regattas besides finishing with second and third place crews on several occasions. Muckler, though not as fortunate in being with the winning crews, stood out head and shoulders above the rest of the visiting and local oarsmen with the single exception of the Detroiter.

Teamed with Vogler in the senior doubles, Muckler carried the Western colors to victory over the Detroit aggregation later in the afternoon and shortly after that he again paddled the Western banner to a triumph over a Detroit entry when he picked up over two lengths on Clark in the single shell quarter-mile dash.

St. Louis Barge Sets Mark.

It was due chiefly to the great work of Muckler that the Westerns landed second place in the meet, for he captured five of the 13 points himself and was the big factor in bagging another three. His brother, F. Muckler, pulled through to a second place in the junior singles yesterday.

Forced to the limit by the Centrals, the St. Louis barge crew spun down the three-quarter mile course to victory in the record time of 3m. 52s. The previous mark was chalked up here in 1913, and stood at 3m. 56s. Officials accepted the new time as an association record. The Centrals were but a few yards behind at the finish and undoubtedly also broke the old time. The North Ends crossed a length in the rear of the Centrals.

The Detroit senior eight, holding a big lead most of the way, was forced to relinquish its advantage at the last stroke to the Grand Rapids outfit, which shot over the line in front by less than a yard. The finish was a fitting windup to the four days' racing program. Peoria pulled in three lengths behind the two leading crews.

How they finished: Detroit Boat Club, 22; Western Rowing Club, 13; Grand Rapids Boat Club, 10; Peoria Ivy and St. Louis Rowing Club, 6; Century and Central Rowing Clubs, 5; Baden and North End Rowing Clubs, 2; Lincoln Park Boat Club, 1.

REDS DEFEAT PHILLIES IN DOUBLE BILL, 7-1 AND 5-3

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, July 8.—The Reds won both games of the double-header with the Phillies today by scores of 7 to 1 and 5 to 3. In the first game, Donohue, starting his first game for nearly six weeks, displayed all his skill of the early season, holding the visitors to four hits and a single tally. Weinert was hit freely, Bohne driving the ball over the left-field fence, only the third time this feat has been accomplished in 11 years. The Reds stole seven bases in this game, three times working the double steal. In the second game, Couch pitched brilliantly save for a let-down in the last round, from which he recovered in plenty of time. Both teams fielded well throughout. Scores:

Home-Run Swatters Made Nine Circuit Drives Yesterday

YESTERDAY was a good day for the home-run hitters in the two major leagues. Eight athletes sent out drives for the circuit, and one, Tris Speaker, smashed out two in one contest. Speaker's feat was accomplished against Carl Mays, the submarine right-hander of the second place New York Yankees.

Long George Kelly, the Giants' first-sacker, again broke into the limelight, when he poled a four-bagger with the bases full against Southpaw Cooper of the Pirates. It was his third homer in two days.

Others to hit for the circuit were Tillie Walker, Athletics, who pounded out his nineteenth of the year; Rolla Naylor, Athletic pitcher; Jack Smith, Cardinals; Bert Griffith, Superbas; Del Pratt, Red Sox, and Sammy Bohne of the Reds.

American Rowing Star Is Victor in Diamond Sculls

Hoover Defeats Beresford by 50 Yards Under Adverse Weather Conditions.

By the Associated Press.

HENLEY ON THAMES, England, July 8.—Rowing a stream line racing shell of his own design over the famous royal regatta course in the face of a strong wind and driving rain, Walter Hoover, the crack American sculler, outdistanced his opponet, J. Beresford Jr., of the Thames Rowing Club, by nearly 50 yards today and the Diamond Sculls trophy, Blue Ribbon trophy in the world of oarsmen, will follow Hoover to his native city of Duluth.

The time made by the American for the course of one mile, 550 yards was 9 minutes, 32 seconds, more than a minute behind the Diamond Sculls record, but Henley officials believe that Hoover's sculling, unequaled on the Thames in many years, would have brought a record under normal weather conditions. They are anxious for the American to return to England in 1923 to defend his trophy and try for a record.

Hoover announced himself willing if he can make the necessary arrangements.

Hoover rowed against one of the best English scullers, Beresford, descended from a family of oarsmen, having spent much of his time since early boyhood in a shell on the Thames, under the guidance of his father, an oarsman of some repute in his day.

Celebration for Hoover Planned.

By the Associated Press.

DULUTH, Minn., July 8.—Plans were taking shape here tonight for a great homecoming celebration to be accorded Walter Hoover, who by virtue of his victory today over J. Beresford Jr. in the Diamond Sculls event of the English Henley, was crowned King of the world's amateur scullers.

Mayor S. F. Snivley said he would declare a holiday "and several of them," if it was necessary for the occasion.

Officials of the Duluth Boat Club immediately began arranging a suitable date for the affair and had virtually decided tonight to stage the celebration the week of July 23.

WALKER HITS 19TH HOMER; ATHLETICS BREAK EVEN

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 8.—Chicago and Philadelphia split a twin bill today, the former winning the first, 4 to 1, and dropping the second, an abbreviated game, called in the eighth, 3 to 2. "Red" Urban Faber held Philadelphia to three hits in the opener, one a home run by Clarence "Tillie" Walker, his nineteenth of the season. Hasty was driven from the mound in the fifth. In the second Rollie Naylor held the Sox to seven hits. Rain caused the game to be called in the eighth. Scores:

Lynch Is Favored To Defeat Buff In Title Contest

Bantam Champion Defends Honors in 15-Round Bout Tomorrow Night.

By Bert Igoe,

Post-Dispatch Eastern Boxing Authority.

NEW YORK, July 8.—In all the history of the ring there have been few men who have come back and regained a title. You can count them on the fingers of one hand.

Joe Lynch seems destined to accomplish that unusual feat when he meets Johnny Buff in a 15-round bout at the New York Velodrome Monday night. Joe lost the title to Pete Herman, after he had won it from that little warrior previous to Herman's departure for Europe to fight Jimmy Wilde for the bantam weight title—as it turned to be—of Europe.

Lynch Has Weight Advantage.

Handicapped by weight, height and reach, Buff is to have none of the best of it Monday night. Lynch is one of the tallest bantams that ever lived. He has a good punch and when so inclined can fight like a streak. Buff, a smaller man than Jimmy Wilde in every way, has always fought larger men with telling effect. What he lacks in size he makes up in punching power. He has the strength of a husky lightweight and this alone has helped him to whip many a man who was rated his superior. He is a punishing body puncher and Lynch may find himself totally at sea in trying to "locate" Little Buff.

Lynch never did stand up any too well under body punishment and Buff is the candy kid at that particular torment.

All things considered, however, Joe seems to be the one favored. He must face the problem of regaining a title, one that is so rarely accomplished. Herman did it, for one, and Joe may be inspired by that triumph. Joe gathered in $37,500 for losing the title. He will get no such sum Monday night, but if he were to win he can begin all over again and in the end might command such a princely stipent for defending a title regained.

LEITCH SISTERS ARRIVE IN MONTREAL, IN QUEST OF AMERICAN HONORS

MONTREAL, July 8.—Cecil and Edith Leitch, English golf stars, arrived here today from Liverpool. Edith said she would play in the Canadian and United States women's championships, but expressed fear that an injured arm would keep her sister, the former English champion and present Canadian title holder, out of both tournaments.

Conference Called to Sign for Title Bout Breaks Up Without Result.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills, negro challenger for the heavyweight championship, failed to get together at a conference called for the signing of a contract for the contest today and the meeting broke up without result.

Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, presented one contract, and Paddy Mullins, who handles the negro, put forward another. Dempsey refused to sign the Wills contract and Wills the Dempsey.

Mullins' contract was so drawn that the bout would have to be held within 90 days at the most. Kearns' chief objection was that Wills' document placed both boxers "at the mercy of promoters," his contention being that regardless how small the best purse offered might be it would have to be accepted. Mullins' argument that the bidding would be spirited enough to force a big purse was counteracted by Kearns' assertion that a combination of promoters could force the boxers to meet for an inadequate purse.

The Dempsey document provided that the bout be held within [illegible] days after a promoter's contract was signed.

"I Played Like a Fish," Molla Explains; Evidently Suzanne Had Her Blowing Like a Porpoise

Shimizu Defeats Garland and Will Play Tilden Today

Japanese Davis Cup Star Gains Straight Set Victory in Clay Court Net Semifinal.

BROWN - KAMMANN LOSE

St. Louis Doubles Team Defeated by Hennessey and Wesbrook, 7-5, 6-2.

From a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 8.—Zenzo Shimizu, catlike little Japanese Davis cup player, won his way to the final of the twelfth annual National Clay Court tennis championship singles here late today when he defeated Charles Garland Jr., Pittsburg, in a semifinal match, 6—2, 6—1, 6—2.

Shimizu meets William T. Tilden II, Philadelphia, world's champion in the title round, tomorrow.

Shimizu won with surprising ease. Garland, a former member of the American Davis Cup team, had been expected to give the Jap a hard fight, as this was the first outdoor tournament Shimizu had played in this season. However, Shimizu met Garland at every turn and at no time was the result in doubt.

Shimizu solved Garland's forehand drives with remarkable ease, and with his own accurate placing and backhand returns he usually turned such Garland tactics into Shimizu points. He would follow a sizzling placement ace with a quick cross-court return, and he kept Garland racing from one side of the court to the other while he remained cool and adamant in his own deep court.

Tilden Favored to Win.

Occasionally Shimizu would take the net, and when he did he usually counted points. Garland tried to stay his defeat by a net game, but only twice did he break through Shimizu and score from a fore-court position. Usually Shimizu kept Garland well back, chasing from alley to alley too late to return Shimizu's drives. What points Garland did capture were made on Shimizu's errors, with few exceptions.

Tilden is generally the favorite to win tomorrow. However, Shimizu surprised the gallery today by his short victory, and Tilden has been seriously pushed in the last two days by Wray Brown, St. Louis, and Wesbrook, in the semifinal yesterday.

Donald Strachan, Philadelphia, won the boy's tournament title in the final this afternoon, defeating Byron Donaldson, Detroit, 3—6, 8—6, 6—4.

Brown and Kammann Lose.

Wray Brown and Karl P. Kammann, the only surviving St. Louis combination in the doubles, lost in fourth round play today to John Hennessey, Indianapolis, ranked No. 1, and Walter Wesbroow, Detroit, ranked No. 4 in the tournament seeded draw. Hennessey is a former Indiana champion and runner-up to Kumagae in the Florida State. Wesbrook is a former Western Conference collegiate champion from the University of Michigan.

The St. Louis team took the lead in the first set, but Hennessey and Wesbrook, with smoothly coordinated team play and individual brilliance, stretched out the set to 5 all and won, 7—5. The Missourians quickly fell before the Hoosier-Detroit combination in the second set, 6—2.

Fritz Bastian and Ralph Burdick, Indianapolis, defeated Willis Fulton and Leonard Keith, Cleveland, in a hard-fought third round match today, 3—6, 6—3, 6—3.

William T. Tilden II, Philadelphia, and his protege, young Sandy Wiener, Germantown, Pa., eliminated Parks and White, Ardmore, Pa., 6—4, 6—3, 6—4.

The tournament will end tomorrow.

Tilden and Wiener Lose.

Fritz Bastian and Ralph Burdick, Indianapolis, won their way into the final of the doubles by defeating Tilden and Sandy Wiener in the semifinals, 6—4, 7—5, 6—4. What shortcomings the boy Wiener had were almost entirely covered up by the brilliant work of Tilden, but Bastian and Burdick, who are teammates of two years standing, won out through their careful co-operation and ability to capitalize every break in the Tilden-Wiener play. They raised the hopes of Hoosier tennis followers, who had become disheartened after elimination of every one of their stars in the singles.

In the other semi-final doubles match of the day, which was finished just at dusk, John Hennessey, Indianapolis, and Walter Wesbrook, Detroit, defeated Shimizu and Beals Wright, Boston, 6—2, 7—5, 6—2. Flashy and terrific volleying won for the Middle Westerners, who swept the brilliant Jap and his experienced partner off their feet. Hennessey and Shimizu bore the brunt of the battle for each team.

GOOD ENTRY EXPECTED FOR TWO RIVER SWIMS

A great deal of interest is being evinced in the three-mile handicap swim for men and the mile paddle for women, which will be held on the Meramec River under the auspices of the St. Louis A. C. The swim for men is scheduled to be decided July 23, and the women's event a week later.

Only swimmers holding A. A. U. cards will be eligible to participate. Amateur cards can be obtained from Verne Lacy, 1838 Arcade Building. Entries should be made with Charles Bumpke, 2219 South Broadway.

Many paddlers are in training for the races and a good entry is looked for.

Mlle. Lenglen Says Mrs. Mallory Caused Her Less Difficulty Than Either Miss Ryan or Miss McKane

American Champion Played Very Well "Within the Limits of Her Game," Her Tribute to Beaten Foe—Thinks Her Victory Was Due to Advice of Her Father on Tactics to Be Used.

By Suzanne Lenglen.

(Copyright, 1922.)

WIMBLEDON, England, July 8.—I am the happiest girl in the world. I fully believe I have redeemed myself in the eyes of those critics who laughed at my illness last year at Forest Hills. I think I have wiped out that defeat and proved my right to the championship title.

Mlle. Lenglen.

It was the thrill of my life as I walked the courts today before that magnificent audience. I felt confident, but was just a bit nervous. Down in my heart of hearts I did not believe I could lose. I do not believe I could have retained my title had I harbored any doubts of my own ability.

With that litle preliminary blast of my own trumpet let me give all praise to Mrs. Mallory. Within the limits of her game she played in great form. I had been impressed by her defeat of Mrs. Beamish Friday, and I was still more impressed by the game she played against me yesterday. Everything turned out as I expected. The American champion played coolly and perseveringly; but, as I said to a friend recently, I did not expect a hard struggle.

Certainly the match was not the hardest fight of my career. I can so well remember that much more trying fight against the distinguished English player Mrs. Lambert Chambers in 1919 and I had had harder fights against Miss Ryan and Miss McKane this year, both at Wimbledon and Brussels.

Follows Father's Advice.

For my method in attack I followed the advice of my father. He told me not to try for a point for the sake of getting it. "Exert yourself only when it is necessary, Suzanne," have been his words of advice throughout the tournament. That is why I avoided all sensational strokes and tried merely to beat Mrs. Mallory at her own game—gradually to wear her down until she missed her point.

All this was my father's advice. He has watched the world's best players and knows so much about the game; yet, curiously, he was wrong about one thing. He was wrong about me. Until the last moment he was not certain whether to let me play. He would shake his head and say I should not play singles. I should rest, and get strong and well. But I said "No," because it was my wish to fight for the title I have won. Was it wise? Who can say? But certainly when I came through so successfully I felt I had done the right thing. However convinced I might have been about my own fitness, it was pleasing to find I was free from physical trouble on the day of the match.

The score tells briefly the story of the match, but there were indeed many thrilling moments of keen excitement. There was something tremendous in coolness and strength in the active little lady in a brown jumper who faced me across the net. I took the first service ,and scored the first point. Mrs. Mallory missed, after some hard cross-court exchanges and, with a drive down the side line to her backhand. I passed her and the first game went to me.

I glanced around at the great stands. The silence was so intense it almost hurt and even two experienced players like Mrs. Mallory and myself felt affected in spite of ourselves.

Attacks Mrs. Mallory's Backhand.

Now, Mrs. Mallory was serving and from corner to corner came her long drives. I was trying her backhand all the time. Then I netted a drive and the return of service—a low bounding one—passed under Mrs. Mallory's racket.

Soon she scored her first game. Then the game proceeded in the same fashion. Most of the time we were playing across from the back-hand corner to back-hand. Always Mrs. Mallory was gliding rather than running up and down the base line. Again and again I attacked her backhand corner and got the same thing back and back again with astounding regularity. I felt the sensation of an angler playing a very astute fish.

I was varying baseline drives in speed and length. Now and then Mrs. Mallory would cleverly save a shot, but usually I was able to pass her at the side lines. She was netting her drives a great deal and I eventually took the first set, 6—2.

In the second set Mrs. Mallory often passed well down the base line, but after some very long games my tactics won out.

Suddenly it was all over and everybody crowded around me saying nice things, so I was not sorry that I had disregarded father's gloomy doubts. And he, too—how pleased he was!

MRS. MALLORY WINS BUT TWO GAMES IN CONTEST FOR WORLD'S NET TITLE

no doubt as to the superiority of the French woman. She completely dominated the match all the way through. In the second set the French star came to the net and simply smashed her way to victory. It was the greatest exhibition by a woman ever seen here. Her serving was faultless and time and again she shot the ball past Mrs. Mallory for aces. Practically all of her playing in the second set was at the net while Mrs. Mallory remained at the base lines. Mrs. Mallory drove into the net a great deal in the second set.

Experts after the match agreed that Mlle. Lenglen had played the best game ever staged by a woman on the Wimbledon courts.

Three-year Rivalry Ends.

The battle at Wimbledon today was the culmination of a three-year struggle for premier tennis honors between these two players, which in recent months developed into the keenest and most personal conflict ever witnessed in the history of women's sport competition.

Mrs. Mallory's quest for the world's champion dates back to 1920. She entered the Wimbledon tournament in 1920, but found that other entrants aside from Mlle. Lenglen could play high-class tennis, and she was eliminated by Mrs. Lambert-Chambers, 6—0, 6—3. In 1921 Mrs. Mallory made another attempt only to be defeated by Miss Elizabeth Ryan, a former California player, in the seventh round, Miss Ryan after losing to Mlle. Lenglen, 6—2, 6—2, in the challenge round.

From Wimbledon Mrs. Mallory went to St. Cloud, Paris, for the world's hard court championship and there met Mlle. Lenglen in the final round, only to be defeated in straight sets, 6—2, 6—3.

Smarting under the defeat and the personalities which developed Mrs. Mallory returned to America and practiced strenuously for the national championships scheduled at Forest Hills in August in which the famous French player was to be a competitor. The pair came together in the second round.

The first set went to the American champion at 6—2. In the opening game of the second set a long and vicious rally was won by Mrs. Mallory after which Mlle. Lenglen made a double default and, dropping her racket, collapsed on the side lines. Coughing incessantly, she notified the referee that she was unable to continue and defaulted the match.

Miss Bauer Sets New World's Record for 100-Yard Backstroke

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 8.

MISS SYBIL BAUER of the Illinois A. C., Chicago, broke the world's 100-yard backstroke record for women, swimming in a 75-foot pool here today by one-fifth of a second. She finished in 1 minute 15 4-5 seconds.

Miss Bauer later failed by three-fifths of a second in an attempt to equal the mark for 150 yards backstroke in the same pool. Her time was 1 minute 59 4-5 seconds.

In breaking the mark she established last March in Milwaukee for the 100 yards, Miss Bauer defeated Miss Ailen Riggin, Olympic fancy diving champion by 10 yards, and Miss Helen Donohue by 15 more. Miss Riggin and Miss Donohue represent the Women's Swimming Association of New York.

Miss Riggin was 20 yards in the wake of the speedy Miss Bauer in the second race, and Miss Donohue was five yards behind Miss Riggin.

This is the tenth world's record that Miss Bauer has broken since coming here last Saturday: She planned to return to Chicago tonight.

TRAVELING CLUBS OF TROLLEY LEAGUE HAVE SIGNED NEW TALENT

Today's schedule in the Missouri-Illinois Trolley League calls for the White Rose to clash with the Maxwell Motors in Belleville, while the Wiles-Chipmans will be entertained by the Tricity Packers in Polo Park, East St. Louis, with the Maroons of Collinsville giving battle to the Alton Blues at Alton and the Ben Millers traveling to Mt. Vernon, Ill., where they are scheduled to mix it with the Car Builders of that city.

From present indications the four traveling clubs of the Trolley circuit will be able to give a good account of themselves, due to the fact that each of the non-park-owning clubs has added considerable strength to their ranks within the past week.

Finger Shocks Form Defeating Smithers, While Vance Eliminates Metcalf, 6-3, 6-0.

By Davison Obear.

The singles event of the fourteenth annual Central States tennis tournament for men opened on the courts of the Triple A club yesterday afternoon. With the exception of a light wind, the conditions for play in the first round yesterday were excellent. The Triple A Tennis Committee made necessary preparations during the week and the matches were run off on scheduled time.

Only 12 singles matches in the first round were completed yesterday. Out-of-town players are not required to report until Monday and several of the local players who took part in the national clay-court event at Indianapolis have not returned.

Two upsets occurred in yesterday's matches. George Finger, captain of the Missouri State Life team, eliminated Mel Smithers, the Triple A veteran, in one match, while H. Vance Jr. defeated Robert Metcalf, the Kirkwood Country Club star, in the other.

The victory of Finger over Smithers was a big surprise. Smithers recently defeated H. M. Hess in the Triple A challenge event and was favored to win yesterday's match. Finger won in three sets, 5—7, 6—3, 6—3. Vance played an excellent game to defeat Metcalf. The Kirkwood star was somewhat handicapped by an injured knee, which may have been responsible for his winning only three games in the match.

Seeded Draw Is Used.

A number of matches in the singles will take place today. Play in the doubles will also start. All first-round matches must be completed by tomorrow night. The Central States draw was seeded according to the United States Lawn Tennis Association regulations. Eight players were seeded as follows: Wray Brown, 2; Ted Drewes, 3; Jack Cannon, Kansas City, 4; Ben Parks, Oklahoma, 5; Joseph Werner, 6; Fred Josties, 7; Charles Speice, Oklahoma, and Karl Kammann, who was given No. 8 position.

A glance at the singles draw indicates that either Josties or Leonard Reed of Pittsburg should meet Ted Drewes in the fourth round. Jack Cannon of Kansas City and Charles Speice of Kingfisher, Ok., will very likely advance to the fourth round in the second quarter of the upper half of the draw.

Wray Brown is in the top quarter of the lower half. There are no visiting players in this section, although he will have to win from Charlie Barnes and either Karl Kamman or Ted Heuerman to reach the semifinal round. In the last quarter Joseph Werner and Ben Parks of Oklahoma will probably meet in the fourth round.

KNEPPER WINS IOWA STATE GOLF HONORS

DES MOINES, Ia., July 8.—Rudolph Knepper of Sioux City won the Iowa State golf championship for the third time here this afternoon when he defeated Arthur M. Bartlett of Ottumwa, 6 up and 5 to play, in the final of the 1922 State tournament played over Hyperion course.

In winning today's match and title, Knepper accomplished a new feat in Iowa golf history, although Bartlett had won the championship four times, but not in consecutive years.

Knepper was never down during the entire match, although Bartlett squared the contest at the ninth green of the morning round after having been three down at the fifth tee. Knepper, however, won the tenth hole and was not headed after that.

Mrs. Frank Godfrey of Brooklin and Miss Leslie Bancroft won the doubles title by defeating Mrs. Bickle and Miss Helen Hooker of Greenwich, Conn., in a close three-set match. The score: 3—6, 7—5, 6—1.

Grey Lag Runs in Impressive Style To Win at Empire

Son of Star Shoot Overcomes Many Hardships to Win $5000 Handicap.

By Leased Wire From New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Grey Lag took up 132 pounds and won the Empire City Handicap, with $5,000 added, at one mile and a furlong over the Empire City track, near Yonkers today in a way to confirm once more his real thoroughbred greatness.

This confirmation was not needed. He established his place so firmly as a 3-year-old last season that it would take more than one defeat under such a crushing impost as he carried today to dim his luster.

He might well, however, hang his reputation on today's race alone, so impressively did he win after being blocked three times through the early part of the race and after being shut off sharply rounding the far turn. It takes a good horse to overcome the hardships and ill-luck of a race and then gallop to commanding victory.

Grey Lag conceded 17 pounds to Capt. Alcock, winner of the Suburban Handicap and the Brookdale Handicap this year; 21 to Bon Homme, which is not without some quality; 27 to Hephaistos, a 3-year-old of the second flight, and 30 to Devastation, which only last Tuesday ran second to Firebrand in the Independence Handicap at Latonia, beating Exterminator, among others.

Grey Lag Overcomes Handicaps.

It looked like a difficult task and many even considered it a hopeless one and yet Grey Lag proved equal to carrying the heavy impost, to conceding pounds to the others, to overcoming difficulties and to winning easily at the end by a length and a half.

The track was loose and cuppy, so that the time for the mile and a furlong, 1:54, was 3 seconds behind the record for the course.

Capt. Alcock, Bon Homme and Hephaistos went out to make the running when the barrier was released, but they fairly zigzagged their way around the first turn and up the back stretch so that both Grey Lag and Devastation were blocked two or three times in an effort to go up first on the inside and then on the outside.

Rounding the far turn, Grey Lag was shut off sharply and was last for a few strides, as Devastation, with more luck squeezed through an opening on the rail. It looked then as if the son of Star Shoot was beaten, but neither horse nor boy lost courage, and when Fator pulled to the outside and found clear sailing his mount closed so strongly that the whole aspect of the race was changed in less than a sixteenth of a mile. Half way down the stretch he took command and little wonder the crowd rose in mighty cheer as he won going away.

Bon Homme finished second and Devastation third as the other two tired as the result of their early pacemaking. Devastation might have been second if Marinelli had not drawn his whip as the horse floundered a bit right at the end.

PART OF FELSCH AND RISBERG COMPLAINT IS ORDERED STRICKEN OUT

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 8.—Legal technicalities and snarls faced Judge John J. Gregory in Circuit Court today in the three baseball suits started by Joe Jackson, Oscar Felsch and Charles Risberg, former players, against the Chicago American League baseball club for back salaries and bonuses alleged to be due.

Judge Gregory ordered new writs requiring the presence of Charles and Louis Comiskey, owners of the White Sox team, to appear before Court Commissioner E. J. Ludwig, July 12 in an examination asked by the three plaintiffs under the Wisconsin discovery statute. Previous orders in the Flesch and Risberg cases were set aside. A new order was authorized in the suit of Jackson for the appearance of the Comiskeys.

The Court ordered stricken from the Risberg and Felsch complaints the paragraph relating to charges that the American baseball public had been deceived in the White Sox scandal of 1920 and which is made the basis of the suits. This order granted the motion of Attorney George B. Hudnall, representing the Comiskys.

Roy Walker Is Released.

Roy Walker, right-hand pitcher, has been released to the New Orleans club of the Southern Association, it was announced yesterday by Manager Rickey. Walker was obtained from the Pelicans in the winter of 1920. On his last appearance on the hill as a Cardinal he shut out the Reds for five innings.

SINGLE G. SETS NEW PACE MARK FOR SEASON; GEERS' NARROW ESCAPE

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., July 8.—Single G. demonstrated again today that he is the best pacer in the Grand Circuit. The aged son of Anderson Wilkes, driven and trained by Ed Allen of Indianapolis, defeated the best bunch of pacers in training for the free-for-all purse, feature of today's card at North Randall. He won the event in straight heats and set a new season's pacing record for one and two miles, 2m. 3¾s. and 2m. 2¾s. respectively.

After Single G. had been ruled out, Juno proved a surprise by beating Hal Mahone and Jimmy McKerson in the third heat.

Pop Geers, veteran driver of the grand circuit, had a narrow escape from injury in the 2:15 trot. As the horses were scoring for the second heat, Queen Alix backed into Geer's sulky, overturning it. The veteran Memphis reinsman luckily escaped with a slight shaking up. His entry, Anna Phelps, which finished second in the first heat, ran away two miles and a half after the accident and was withdrawn.

Just What Is Really Known About Spiritualism Told By Psychic Investigator

Agent of New York Society Finds That Amazing Credulity and Arrant Fraud Play Large Part in Most of the Stories.

NEW YORK, July 8.

"PSYCHICAL research is making great progress in spite of widespread superstition and gullibility."

This was Dr. Walter F. Prince's comment when I spoke to him about the great wave of interest in spirits and spiritualism which has been sweeping over America the past few months. Dr. Prince is principal research officer of the American Society for Psychical Research. Getting the facts is his specialty; when I spoke to him about his personal beliefs, he said that beliefs do not count. He is convinced, however, that much has already been proved, in the realm in which the investigators call the supernormal, and that there is much real evidence to support the theory that we can communicate with the dead. But he is not at all enthusiastic over the seeming willingness of millions to swallow all sorts of strange stories of ghosts and spooks and fairies.

"Scientists," he said to me, "are not interested in propaganda. Scientists want to find out what is what. A scientist may accept a theory as a theory in order to test its truth or falsity, but he is not a scientist if he insists that any particular conclusion shall be reached. He must pursue his discoveries to the bitter end—no, not exactly that, for the truth, whatever it is, cannot exactly be bitter to the scientist.

"But the general attitude toward psychic pehnomena is anything but scientific. On the one hand, we have people with utterly closed minds—people who insist, in spite of discovery after discovery, that there ain't no such animal as the supernormal. On the other hand, we have people without minds but with wide-open mouths ready to swallow anything that strikes their palates. Neither group is really interested in learning what we actually know, and what we yet do not know, about the supernormal."

"Do you really know more along these lines," I asked him, "than we know before all this modern psychic investigation was begun?"

"Do we know more about 'lightning," he replied, "than we did before we began to study electricity?"

"There's a difference," I protested. "There is no real disagreement among investigators as to the existence and as to some, at least, of the characteristics of electricity."

"And there is no more disagreement among real investigators," he answered, "as to the existence and as to some, at least, of the peculiarities of these supernormal forces. I said among real investigators, remember. I mean those who are trained in the facts and the procedure of science—among those who know how to make experiments and note results, instead of simply looking on in bewilderment while something strange is happening.

Like Studying Lightning.

"We can throw out the testimony of those so-called investigators who lose interest in the investigation as soon as they discover some evidence of fraud. If a physician, for instance, were to lose interest in a dying man because he suddenly discovered that the patient had lied to him, we wouldn't think much of him as a physician, would we? And if someone were to lose interest in electricity because some particular lamp failed to do what was claimed for it, we wouldn't consider him much of an electrician. And yet, instead of going to trained psychical researchers to find out what has been proved or disproved to date, it is a common practice to take the word of some outsider who has looked into it and discovered it is all a fake.

Emotionalism Ruled Out.

"But on the other hand," Dr. Prince continued, "we can also throw out the testimony of well meaning sentimentalists whose belief in spirit manifestations is obviously not scientific, but emotional. I have no desire to take from anyone any comfort he may receive through believing things that cannot stand the light of scientific investigation; but such credulity does not help the cause of psychic research. Individuals may get a certain emotional kick from it, but the world will remain just as mystified as before."

"How about the investigations of Conan Doyle?"

Dr. Prince would not be drawn into any personal controversy. It was quite evident, however, that Sir Arthur represents an altogether different attiude toward spiritualism than that held by the Society of Psychical Research. Sir Arthur looks for intellectual guidance to the British Psychic College instead, and Dr. Prince is not at all impressed with the findings of this particular group. Its founder, he said, was on record as having "explained" one of Houdini's escapes from an iron tank as having been accomplished through dematerialization.

"My scientific investigations," Dr. Prince said with a smile, "do not permit me to conclude that Houdini, in order to escape from his tank, completely demobilized not only his flesh and blood and bones but his shoes and clothes, including all the buttons, turned them all into the thinnest kind of gas and then leaked out between the molecules of his prison wall and assembled himself completely on the other side. I am more inclined to agree with Houdini in this matter than with the authorities of the British Psychic College.

"But the fact that there are people who reach these strange conclusions is no reason at all for ignoring psychic research. This is equivalent to ignoring the American Revolution because you cannot believe that George Washington couldn't tell a lie; or ignoring the history of Rome because you are quite convinced that Romulus and Remus were not suckled by a wolf.'

Tells of Some Advances.

"What advances have been made in modern psychic research?" I wanted to know.

"When our society began its investigation 40 years ago," he answered, "our investigators were often ridiculed by 'orthodox' scientists for taking the study of hypnotism seriously. Since then hypnotism has become thoroughly orthodox and accepted and has therefore passed completely out of the province of the S. P. R."

"How about telepathy?" I asked. "Has that been proven to the satisfaction of the orthodox scientists?"

"No, it has not," he answered. "Many of the orthodox scientists do not yet know what the evidence for telepathy is. But there have been sufficiently conclusive proofs to convince most of those who have given the matter a thorough, scientific study. Among these, telepathy is generally accepted as a fact, but the process is still unknown. There are still a few who believe that what passes for telepathy is always the work of some discarnate spirit, but the main difference of opinion is concerning the possible limits of telepathic power: Can a telepathic message come only from the conscious mind of the 'agent' or may it proceed from the unconscious? Also, may the message be relayed from mind to mind, and may the bulk of the communications commonly attributed to spirits be the work of this strange force, the laws of which are still absolutely unknown?"

"How about so-called spirit rappings? Are they always physical?"

"The consensus of opinion among the scientific psychical rsearchers," he said, "is that they are not; at least they are not always due to any known physical cause. Whether they are the work of discarnate spirits or of some influence proceeding from the bodies or the minds of living persons is still in dispute. A few insist that the sounds are not real sounds at all but imaginary sounds, but in that case, they could not be recorded on mechanical devices.

Evidence of Apparitions.

"It is thoroughly authenticated that people do sometimes see apparitions, not merely as mental pictures, but as pictures which correspond with actual happenings at a distance. Moreover, the scientific researchers seem to be agreed that some of these apparitions contain a supernormal element. A long list of cases was investigated by F. W. H. Meyers, who accepted the spiritistic theory, and by Frank Podmore, who did not; and they agreed that there was some connection between the apparition and the death, at a distance, of the person apparently seen—a connection which could not be due to chance. Their report on 'Phantasms of the Living,' gives the evidence in full."

"What about all these cases of automatic writing," I next asked, "where spirits of the dead are supposed to guide the hands of the living and deliver messages from the spirit world?"

"Each case must be investigated separately," he answered. "Some may be due to hysteria, some to fraud, but there are such records

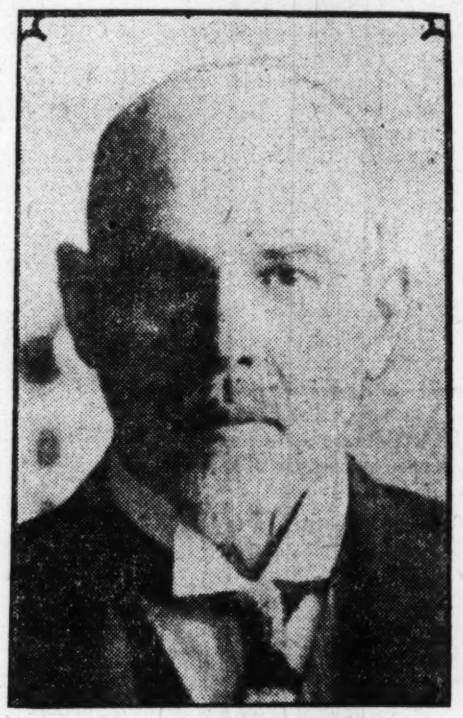
"Germany's Future Far From Militarism," Declared Rathenau in His Last Interview

"FORCE AND PEACE NOT INTERCHANGEABLE TERMS"

Told Post-Dispatch Representative Shortly Before He Was Shot That His Difficulties in Trying to Bring Order Out of Chaos Were Political Rather Than Economic and Blamed Foreign Bankers' Stupidity for Not Letting the Problem Be Solved Scientifically.

Asserted That He Would Be Willing, if It Were Possible, to Take the Contract on His Own Responsibility to Restore the Devastated Sections of France and Belgium for $2,500,000,000— Germany's Greatest Need Today Is Good Will of Other Nations.



THE LATE DR. WALTER RATHENAU.

By HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE,

Editorial Director of the New York World.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

PARIS, July 8.

IT is difficult to realize that the marvelous energy of Dr. Walter Rathenau has been stilled by death. He was one of those dynamic personalities who seem to radiate action. Not that he conveyed the impression of extraordinary physical vitality, for he cultivated repose. But his mind seethed with ideas. It worked steadily, remorselessly and objectively. He was almost wholly cerebral. Almost too much so, in fact, for in politics no man can be greatly successful who is too intellectual and in whom the human touches have been repressed. Root is an example. So is Woodrow Wilson.

I saw Rathenau and held extended conversations with him three times in the week preceding the assassination. In spite of an outward austerity he was a man of amazing fascination. His voice was rasping. He spoke with intensity. His hands and fingers were long and thin. He had the high-domed head of the thinker. His face was narrow and his features were inclined to the Mephistophelian. This aspect was accentuated by his pointed gray-black beard and his piercing dark eyes, which transfixed you when their glance met yours.

He was punctilious about his attire, almost to the point of being finicky. After taking office he always wore the conventional afternoon clothes. His scientific and industrial training gave him a sense of regularity that he never permitted himself to abandon. He avoided the heavy continental lunches, which make the afternoons difficult for those unaccustomed to them, for they produce a lethargy that renders membership in the "Three Hours for Lunch" club desirable. He drank one glass of Rhine wine and smoked one cigar. This custom he never varied. And his food was simple compared to the usual gourmandizing in Berlin.

I was lunching with Loucheur on Saturday, June 24, in Paris, when the word of the assassination came. It came at a moment when I was repeating to the Frenchman what Rathenau had said about him, complimentary things based on the fact that both Rathenau and Loucheur were business men before they were politicians.

Tribute from Former Foe.

"Europe and the cause of peace have sustained a great loss in Rathenau's death," said Loucheur. "He was Germany's strong man. The Germans needed him and so did the rest of the world."

Rathenau was too good a business man to give his confidence lightly. We had met before and because of that and the fact that I had come to him well recommended, after the first few minutes of our first meeting he spoke with complete candor. It was understood that the exchange of views was not for publication, at least not at that time, and we agreed that our discussion was to be as between private individuals rather than statesman and journalist. Incidentally, his attitude to the press was modelled very largely on the American pattern of regular meetings, in which matters were parsed in the frankest manner.

Rathenau's methods made me think of the processes employed by a great newspaper man who always plumbed the depths of his visitor's mind before letting himself go. Whatever doubts he may have had on the score of my equipment were resolved when he learned of my intimacy with a certain American business man whom he pronounced, with an enthusiasm rare in him, to be by far the best industrialist in American commercial life, from the standpoint of character, executive ability, clear-headedness and attitude toward his community. One could perceive instantly where the speaker's real interests lay. Not in the realm of politics but in the field of commerce.

"Tell me," he asked, "what is the attitude of America toward Germany at this time?" I answered that so far as my observations had gone they led me to the conclusion that while there was a definite understanding of Germany's difficulties there was also a strong belief that Germany had failed and was failing to show good faith; that the Germans were out to score a financial success rather than to achieve a record of full compliance with the obligations imposed upon them.

"That cannot be denied," he replied. "It is quite understandable. We are making the fight for self-preservation. We are seeking a solution for the reparation problem in such a way as to satisfy the essential obligations through our work, but at the same time to leave us a margin to enable us to live decently and to build for the future.

"How but through the development of our economic energy and resourcefulness can we take our place among the nations with self-respect for ourselves and with helpfulness to the others? Peace rests upon amity and not upon force. Germany degraded and kept in humiliation is a potential source of evil and danger not only to herself but to the whole world.

"The difficulty we are facing is of politics and not economics. The trouble is that the politicians will not permit the situation to be solved scientifically. The fizzle of the bankers' meeting in Paris a few days ago demonstrates this completely."

Rathenau spoke in clear English. His terminology was precise and his vocabulary extensive. Now and then he would employ a French or a German word in elucidation when he was really at a loss for a more definite term for his thought. He received me in the Foreign Office, so long the habitat of Bismarck. The room the Iron Chancellor had formerly occupied and in which is hung a heroic sized painting of the man of blood and iron, had been abandoned by Rathenau in favor of a smaller and less pretentious room previously used by the Undersecretary. Continuing his remarks, the Minister said:

No More Militarism for Germany.

"As I visualize Germany's future it lies far removed from militarism. We have learned the lesson that peace and force are not interchangeable terms. There are others to whom this lesson has not yet become apparent. You in America do not know what it means. To you militarism is an abstraction. To us Europeans it is an always present menace from which perhaps England alone is successfully freeing herself.

"A definite, fixed sum as a solution to the reparation problem! How easy to say and yet how difficult to achieve! There is so much misunderstanding, some deliberate, some honest, to eradicate before the underlying truth is revealed. The chief duty resting upon us is the restoration of that portion of France that is devastated. It would seem that on this point there should be no difficulty in reaching the truth, yet the estimates are miles apart."

Then he added a most significant remark when he said:

"My own investigations justify the assertion that all the devastated area can be restored at a cost not in excess of two and a half billion dollars. I would personally undertake the contract at that figure were such a proposition feasible.

"Germany's needs are many, but her greatest need is good will. I am aware that that can only come slowly and can only come as a result of our efforts, but over and above any efforts we make there must be a predisposition toward recognition on the part of the rest of the world."

Dr. Rathenau professed to be only amused at the suggestion that the Rapallo treaty between Russia and Germany was in any wise a warlike measure. From the character of his expression I carried away the belief that the execution of the Rapallo treaty was largely a poker bluff in that the threat it contained of commercial exploitation might swing the other nations into line. In passing, it should be said that the Rapallo treaty has not been ratified by either the German or the Russian Governments.

The Foreign Minister was skeptical of reports concerning increasing monarchistic strength in Germany. Perhaps his skepticism led to his undoing. He was a democrat by inclination and had convinced himself that the only stable future for Germany lay in the participation in government by all the people instead of the mild form of benevolent autocracy that existed under the so-called constitutional monarchy. Rathenau was one of the few of the great industrial barons and men of wealth who was sincerely a republican.

Wanted U. S. Troops Kept on Rhine.

On the following day, Thursday, June 15, I sat beside the Foreign Minister at a luncheon given by Ambassador Houghton. Rathenau had formed a high opinion of the American Ambassador, who, before entering diplomacy, had been a wealthy and successful business man. There was a complete absence of the usual reservations and conventions that characterize official gatherings and the table talk was surprisingly free and frank. The only concession to official usage was to be found in each addressing the other as "Excellency." From 1 o'clock until after 4 the conversation flowed steadily, touching on matters of most intimate personal reaction concerning Germany, America, France and especially Russia. As the Foreign Minister and Ambassador were protected by the sanctity of that confidence that surrounds table talk, neither permitted any obstacle to stand in the way of reaching an understanding. It cannot be said that the Ambassador and his guests were in entire agreement with all that Rathenau had to say, but it must be admitted that the latter adduced a good reason for each argument he presented.

I walked over to the Foreign Office with him and he took occasion to impress upon me again the request he had made of Mr. Houghton and Major-General Allen, who commands the American army of occupation in Germany, that America should not fail to maintain a force on the Rhine. "It is essential to world peace that this be done," he said. "I doubt if the extreme importance of this is known and appreciated in America."

Referring to Houghton, Rathenau said: "America has made a very wise selection in sending Mr. Houghton to Berlin. He is a man of ability, of courage and of real understanding of the great difficulties that beset the world. He has a thorough American viewpoint, so much so that I do not always find him in complete agreement with my plans, but I have never found myself lacking in respect for his honesty and definitiveness of purpose."

This is written just after leaving M. Poincare, Prime Minister of the French Republic, whom I asked as to the effect of Rathenau's death. His response was that the victim of the assassination, which he attributed entirely to a monarchical move, had been an important factor in bringing about a stabilized world peace. Dr. Rathenau, he said, was a man with whom one could do business and in whose intentions the French Government had had confidence to the extent of crediting the murdered statesman with a real desire to bring about an adjustment of the reparational tangle.

"Stick to Your Employer, Learn Your Job," Vauclain's Advice to the Young Man

Noted Locomotive Builder Tells Why He Thinks Opportunities for Success Are as Great Today as Ever in History.

SAMUEL M. VAUCLAIN, railroad shop mechanic of 50 years ago, now president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, who was in St. Louis two days last week, believes that the young man in industry has a better chance today than he had when he went to work as a youth of 16, in 1872, in the Pennsylvania shops at Altoona.

SAMUEL M. VAUCLAIN.

"The opportunities for advancement today are endless," President Vauclain said to a Post-Dispatch reporter who questioned him on this point. "Many new avenues of trade and new lines of business have opened since the days when I went to work at my trade.

"All that is required is application. The young man who applies himself to his tasks can't help but get along. The thing for him to bear in mind is that he is working to learn the business. When he has learned, the dollars will chase him; he won't have to chase them.

"The young man who is wise will stay in the place where he has grown up, and with which he is familiar, and will not let himself be led away by promises. The young man ought to feel that his employer knows his value. Every employer is looking for young men who can go higher—men who can lead.

Depends on Young Men.

"And the young man needn't wait until he is old, or even middle-aged, for a place of leadership. Our plant is 91 years old, and the average age of the men in managerial positions in the plant is 37 years. We depend on the young men. The old fossils like me don't do much.

"The employer of young men has his duties toward them. He should not take credit for the good things they do and give them hell for their mistakes. It is to his interest to create loyalty, to foster ambition and fearlessness."

Men in Vauclain's former line of employment are now on strike throughout the country, but he declared that the strike has not seriously affected the Altoona shops, where he worked.

"Most of the men there, and in the shops of the B. & O., know when they have good jobs, and have not struck," he said.

"This strike," he commented, "is due to large-headedness—to the idea of some people that they can be stronger than the Government. Such a strike is essentially an act of arrogance. It was prompted by dictators. They have still to learn that they can't buck the Government, the people and the force of economic conditions, and that they have to go along with the tide like the rest."

President Vauclain's present journey follows the trip of the "Prosperity Special" of Southern Pacific locomotives, seen in East St. Louis recently in transit to the Pacific Coast. He has made his own private car, and his own personality, a sort of second "prosperity special," by his optimistic outgivings as to business prospects.

"There was never so much to be done in this country as there is right now," Vauclain declares.

Keep Eyes on Steel.

"The railroads are in splendid shape now. Their big difficulty is going to be in handling the traffic this fall. They are going to need cars and locomotives. The demand for locomotives usually comes last, and we locomotive builders are the last to get the actual fruits of a wave of prosperity. The railroads must have a surplus of business before they begin to look about for more locomotives to haul it.

"Steel is the basic industry of this nation. If the steel industry operates at a loss, every other business is bound to be depressed, even those industries that are operating profitably.

"A depressing influence, in recent business conditions, has been the clamor for lower steel prices, and the accompanying determination of many persons not to buy until prices should go lower.

"This demand became so strong that the steel manufacturers had to yield to it, to a certain extent, and chose to lose money rather than to see their business organizations wrecked. The trouble was that the period of deflation lasted longer than they calculated, and their losses became a chronic condition.

"Although the steel manufacturers had to cut prices, there was no cut in railroad rates, wages remained high, and material prices were maintained. The demand for fewer working hours in the steel industry followed—all tending to increase cost of production, not to lower it. The coal strike cutting down the supply of gas coal, added another item of increased costs.

"But even with the coal strike now in progress, the railroads are giving unmistakable evidence that prosperity is not a future matter—that it is really here now.

"The reports of the Pennsylvania and B. & O. railroads show that their merchandise traffic has increased so greatly that, even with little coal business to handle, their freight traffic is greater than it was before the strike. Imagine what it will be when the coal business comes back.

Common Labor Scarcity.

"In the fall we shall see a scarcity of labor. Common labor is growing scarce, there is no mistake about it. Employers are trying to devise ways of getting along without the customary amount of unskilled labor, which is difficult to get, and is high-priced and often of doubtful value.

"The limitations of the immigration law deprive the manufacturer—and this includes the farmer—of labor, for the class of people who can do unskilled work is not getting into the United States under the present restrictions.

"Another fact bearing on this situation is that Americans are being educated away from the idea of manual labor.

"The desire for education is commendable. But we cannot have all the people professional workers and merchants. We need producers. The others live off the producers.

"Oh, yes, I know the nonproducers, the doctor, the lawyer and the merchant are necessary in our civilization. Even the moving picture actor is essential to happiness, it seems. But it affects the labor supply.

"This scarcity of labor is a condition that our business men will have to deal with. If common labor is not to be had, we must learn to get along with skilled labor only. At present, the tendency of skilled labor is to become cheap through its plentifulness. I can hire a college graduate for less than I have to pay a pick-and-shovel man. I suppose it is because manual labor is considered disagreeable, though I don't feel that way about any kind of work—it should be a pleasure for people to work.

"When I was a boy, plumbers used

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Meddling With Mexico.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WE'VE been reading about Mexico and recognition since "before the war." Those like the writer, who are totally ignorant of the refinements of statecraft and diplomacy, no doubt are perplexed. Indeed some of us may be so bigoted even as to believe that if these two products of civilization were jumbled together the result would be a hodge-podge of labyrinthian circumlocution that doesn't mean anything.

An editorial in this week's "Nation," "Wall Street and Mexico," says nothing at all about diplomacy's "refinements" to quote the opening paragraph:

"Mexico has received Wall street's permission to carry on. That is the meaning of the long and elaborate agreement signed by Mr. de la Huerta, the Mexican Minister of Finance, and the group of international bankers, representing the holders of Mexican bonds, headed by Mr. Lamont. But the permission is only temporary, and it is granted at a price which may be too high for Mexico. The bankers have yielded almost nothing. The compromise is a compromise of their hope of control over Mexico such as they have over Nicaragua and Bolivia rather than of anything which they had in hand."

If there is any meddling or interfering in the internal affairs of Mexico, on the part of various and divers citizens of the United States, why does not the sovereign people invite these gentry to leave and have an end to the squabbling? Are they overpolite? There must be a better way to deal with boors. Would not such a policy receive the indorsement of most enlightened opinion in this country? If not, why, pray?

Sanitary and Moral Questions.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A LITTLE while ago I was riding on a street car here with a man whose property was once used for the wholesale and retail liquor business. He was bewailing the fact that his property had been depreciated by prohibition, and he was calling the result "confiscation." Just at this point we passed an old livery stable building that was being wrecked as a nuisance on order from the City Council. I pointed to it and asked if he thought the owner was entitled to compensation. He thought not. So, you see, it all depends on the viewpoint, and that viewpoint is created in accordance with our sympathies and environments.

I don't doubt, Mr. Editor, that you would elegantly argue against compensating the owner of the livery stable, and just as eloquently argue for compensating the brewer.

Speeding Up Traffic.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHEN A. B. C. said "Let's have a little more speed in this town," he said a mouthful. Police authorities experiment with traffic rules like a kid playing with a new toy. Nearly all official and quasi-official activities are directed toward slowing up traffic, rather than facilitating it. It's tank-town stuff. As anybody who has lived in a metropolitan city knows, speeding is responsible for very few deaths. People are killed, not by fast drivers, but by timid or careless ones.

In Chicago a motorist is arrested for going too slow, not too fast. There you have the symbol of the two cities. If our police made a study of traffic regulations as they have been scientifically worked out in larger cities, and if they would stop allowing every association of busybodies and meddlers to interfere with this public function, our streets would not be jammed every night and morning and there would be fewer accidents. This isn't a hick town, but its traffic officers act as if it were.

MOTORIST.

A Toast.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

LONG live the Bonus Commission! Of course they must needs live long to get it all paid at their present rate of progress. But I mean that as a toast. Ah, sir, if you and I were aboard the George Washington, we could stow away several ponies of Martel's Three-Star cognac to the health of the Bonus Commission. Because, my dear sir, I admire the thoroughness with which the commission does its work. "Slow and careful" seems their motto. Nothing shall escape their vigilant eyes.

Perish the thought that it is for the sordid $10 per diem that the work lags. Nay, nay, Pauline! The job must be done thoroughly.

"If you were married when you entered the service," etc. "What is your present wife's name?" Ah, sir, I am a lonely bachelor. I had no wife then, I have no wife now. May I never have a wife. So, to indicate the blank in my life, I left the questions blank. Of course, I could have answered, "The unknown goddess," but who reads Kipling in these days of "The Sheik"? Did the Bonus Commission assume me celibate? Let me shriek "No!" They sent the application back. Mayhap they patronize the movies, and can take no chances on our not being married.

Again, it may be a gentle hint that I should be married. Who better fitted to be the forebears of posterity than the crusaders of democracy and the sordid despoilers of the treasury?

Long live the Bonus Commission! And three beers for the red and white wines on the blue ocean.

JOSEPH D. HEADE.

MR. REED IN WISCONSIN.

Senator Reed says he has been unfairly treated by the Post-Dispatch regarding the part he took in the Wisconsin campaign in 1920. The question was raised by a statement of Mr. Reed's opponent, Mr. Long, that "I never went to Wisconsin and campaigned for a Republican for United States Senator." In reply Mr. Reed declared that "Any man who said I campaigned for a Republican in Wisconsin is a liar." He explained that he went to Wisconsin to try to defeat the Republican Senator, Mr. Lenroot, who was seeking re-election, and further said that he had been entertained by the Democratic committees where he spoke.

The issue of veracity between the two candidates in the Democratic senatorial primary seemed to the Post-Dispatch a matter of genuine public interest. Was Mr. Long right or was Mr. Reed right? What were the facts? The place to get the facts, obviously, was Wisconsin, and, accordingly, a member of the staff was sent there. He got the facts from a man who should be familiar with them, namely, the chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee of Wisconsin, John P. Hume.

Mr. Hume's statement has been printed in the Post-Dispatch. Summarized it is this: There were three candidates for the United States Senate in Wisconsin, two Republicans and one Democrat. Lenroot was the regular Republican nominee and James Thompson was the independent Republican, who had the support of the La Follette machine. The Democratic candidate was Paul S. Reinsch, a man of distinction, a former member of the faculty of Wisconsin University, who had served as Minister to China under President Wilson, a student of international affairs.

The issue was the League of Nations. Lenroot, the regular Republican, was for the League, with reservations. Thompson, the La Follette Republican, whose election Reed advocated, was opposed to the League unqualifiedly. Reinsch, the Democrat, was for the League. Senator Reed's campaign in Wisconsin was against the Democratic party's policy and platform, for which Reinsch stood.

Mr. Reed never spoke a word for the Democratic candidate, Chairman Hume says, nor was he entertained by Democratic committees as such. He came to Wisconsin to help elect the La Follette candidate, was exploited by the La Follette press, and was entertained by La Follette and La Follette followers.

That is what the chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee of Wisconsin says. It is official. The Post-Dispatch believes it is true.

Mr. Reed is not accused, on this score, by the Post-Dispatch or by our political writer. Mr. Reed is accused by the Democratic organization of Wisconsin and convicted by the facts.

The pending tariff bill, if it becomes a law, will be educational; it will teach the average American family to make one loaf of bread do the work of two or three.

THE TRAFFIC IN TITLES.

The traffic in titles—a method of political financing—has raised no end of a row in England. The practice of dignifiedly rewarding a liberal contributor to the campaign fund is not new, though it seems to have reached flourishing proportions during the present premiership. The "Lloyd George Barons," as they were caustically described by an elderly peer some time ago, have become offensively numerous.

Indignant Britishers, however, think they have found a remedy in that "pitiless publicity" with which the United States is reputed to have purged its politics of the baleful influence of money. There is a demand that laws enacted to curb this evil shall be patterned after the measures which have proved effective here.

It is somewhat embarrassing, though, to learn that our British cousins credit us with having banished money from our politics. Truman Newberry of Michigan has demonstrated that a fat family purse packs a lustier wallop than pitiless publicity can deliver. And the grants now being made to special interests in the name of high protection can still command the laws, if not the applause, of listening Senates.

Things, of course, are better than they were. The coarse work of other days has been supplanted by a defter technique, almost a finesse. Our Capuans of the checkbook now occasionally have to wait and cool their heels in the anteroom, but they have not been thrust out into the cold, hard world by our politicians.

London, we fear, is looking at us through a rose-tinted monocle.

THE WOMAN'S VOICE.

At a time when the old guard in Washington is wondering what can be done to save the country from radicalism and the rest of the country is wondering how far the old guard will drive it into radicalism there comes an echo of hope from Wisconsin. It is a woman's voice and it carries the ring of sincerity.

Mrs. Ben Hooper, the Democratic convention choice as candidate for the senatorship, says: "It is because of my desire to promote world peace that I am willing to go into this contest. * * * It is a cause for which I feel I would give my life. * * * I favored the League of Nations, and when the United States failed to ratify it I supported the Washington conference, giving my time and paying my own expenses in a campaign to promote its success. World peace is a thing for which I will go the limit."

Here is nonpartisan devotion so rare in the Senate that it would be difficult to point to its parallel among the male membership. Would Mrs. Hooper's elemental zeal, should she become Senator, fade out into expediency and partisan bias after a few years? There is reason to hope that it would not. In the matter of peace women are parties of special interest. They are the mothers of the race. There is no expediency that will unseat this protective passion of motherhood. Another advantage the woman has in politics. If she is a wife she is not in the position of economic dependence on her job as is the male legislator. We believe from what Mrs. Hooper says that she would vote for peace though it cost her another term in office.

We question if the country as a whole wants the La Follette-Brookhart-Frazier type of Senator. But the country is willing to go to extremes if merely to voice its protest. Mrs. Hooper in Wisconsin and Mrs. Oleson in Minnesota afford an interesting promise of intervention.

The Senate minority is charged with delaying the tariff bill for political reasons. The best politics the minority could play would be to let the thing pass and hang the responsibility on the perpetrators.

BROTHER-VICTIMS OF THE DROUTH.

One critical word leading to another in the senatorial primary has brought out the fact that the Anti-Saloon League of Missouri has been broke for several months and unable to pay rent for its local headquarters. But thanks to the intercession of an officer of the league and a landlordly generosity no eviction has occurred. Meantime the league has struck oil, or tapped a new vein, or an unlooked-for ship has come in. Anyhow, the league is again paying its rent. And the arrearage, we gather, has been marked off.

The whole incident is distressing, even though the late acute circumstances have been relieved. But there will be heartless wretches to cackle an unfeeling I-told-you-so. With an impertinence but illy concealing their satisfaction they will remind the league that no such embarrassment was known while yet the Demon Rum was legally with us. In the wet, wicked yesterdays the Anti-Saloon League enjoyed all the comforts of good fortune, not to say affluence. There will be mourners to extend the hand of misery's fellowship to the Anti-Saloon League—to say: "Shake, Brother Shupp! Prohibition has busted us, too."

Any candidate who lives through two summer months of campaigning must be fit, at least in the Darwinian sense.

OUT THROUGH THE MIDDLE.

The leaders of the Senate majority, in emergency dinner assembled at Senator Lodge's home, find themselves in a seemingly inextricable dilemma, with the tides of party defeat already rising about their ankles. Every way they turn for a solution of the tariff, the bonus and the ship subsidy bills, and for pacification of the public on the Newberry issue, there is a stone wall as high as heaven—except one way. That is the right way. We do not expect them to see it, but here it is:

1. Kill the tariff bill without obsequy or apology.
2. Kill the bonus bill in favor of a permanent plan for taking care of the disabled and needy as long as they need.
3. Seek and enact into law the highest business judgment of the land on salvaging the most that can be salvaged from the Government merchant marine fleet and fostering an American merchant marine.
4. Unload Newberry.

THE OLD GAME ISN'T WHAT IT USED TO BE.

LEAD BELT.

I.—Chat Pile.

Smooth mountain scraped from the shoulder of Missouri,
Silver-blue mountain spewn out of the gullet of the mills,
Upon the dirty flat they have piled the broken bones of the hills
And shoveled the marrow into the hot stomachs of the smelters.

This they have made of you, Missouri;
This they have made with steel bars and muscles of men;
This has clanged out of the money-vaults of the East,
This has sweated out of the little houses by the tracks;
This is you, Missouri, shining in the sun.

II.—Mill.

What is the song of the deaf old mill?
The big crushers chew the big rocks, grunting in bass;
The little crushers whine over the little black ores;
The jigging tables pluck the lead prisms from the hands of the water;
The round tables suck away the wet dust.
The song of the mill is the song of a faithful monster
Eager to empty the work into the hands of the master.

III.—Smelter.

The smelter says:

"Fire is clean and fine like gold. The slag cannot be made beautiful, nor is the pig lead strong but by its heaviness. The slag curls itself into pretty round shapes, yet it is lighter than the dirt, and cuts into the skin. But the lead is bound together with the soul of the Fire. Flesh is heavy, the hills are heavy, but the lead is heavier, more precious with the soul of the Fire."

IV.—Companies.

St. Joe, St. Francis, Federal, National,
Doe Run—count the names earning money.
Can they remember the Frenchman hauling rocks to the river?
Mr. Jones bounces in his Packard down Fifth avenue,
And doesn't even thank a piece of paper handing him dollars.
Superintendent Smith rolls up his cuffs and yells: "More speed."
The banker pulls his beard and says: "Good stock, sir."
I say, "Very well, sir, open the belly of Missouri, sir;
Missouri is heavy with lead, and Flat River is busy, sir,
Chucking it out at the feet of the world."

V.—Workmen.

Silence between you and me, comrades;
I will not tell about you. I could tell
Of heavy muscles swinging air drills, I could show
Arms and sledges, the levers of machines, the doors
Of furnaces. I could talk of women trying
To make the money last, some children playing.
But it's a hard day's work tomorrow, comrades,
And it's no use to praise or pity. It's a fight
Day or night shift, a good time or a bad time—
That makes a poem loud enough;
So silence between you and me, comrades.

C. D. CHRISTOPH.

A local railroad man is the author of the following slogan of the Democratic senatorial campaign in Missouri:

ESSAY ON MAN.

Man is a two-legged creature that differs from the other animals in the possession of 40 ounces of gray matter, erroneously called a thinking apparatus.

The breed is divided into two classes; those who work, as financiers, politicians, baseball players and second lieutenants; and those who are worked, called the general public.

Man claimed descent from the ape until the monkey delegation at Washington got busy and hushed the scandal. Since then the fish has been made our common ancestor.

Man's mission in life is to get a good job, criticise his fellow being, talk about the weather and occasionally hold a good hand at poker.

The good Lord in order to show what a good piece of work he could produce once he made up his mind created woman, and then to show his sense of humor he endowed her with 10 ounces less of brain matter than given to man.

Man was put here to earn his living by the sweat of his brow; but since ivory, wood and concrete do not sweat several men became dancers, "movie" actors, novelists and landlords, where headwork plays but a minor part.

The chief characteristics of man are laziness, a vivid imagination, a great capacity for consuming a large quantity of indigestible food, a remarkable faith in get-rich-quick schemes, a fondness for clothes, and a sublime confidence in himself.

The usual span of life for man is 60 years; but late hours, worry, the automobile, rotten whisky and a supreme contempt for the ability of a locomotive at a railroad crossing are cutting in deeply on this alloted time.

Endurance is one of the great qualities of man and is typified by his ability to pay taxes, listen to campaign speeches, suffer the visits of his mother-in-law, work for a year without a raise, and wear evening clothes to a dance.

The race has lasted some 3000 years and hopes to double that record or survive at least until some man's wife admits, after a quarrel, that she was in the wrong.

The study of mankind is very interesting and we recommend it to anybody who has a sense of humor and a little time on his hands.

(Linn Creek, Mo., Reveille.)

There seems to be a report afloat that I drink intoxicating liquor, get drunk and such like as that. I wish to say this to those who want to know the truth, that I haven't tasted intoxicating liquor anywhere in the bounds of Camden County since I have lived in Linn Creek, and any person that says that I have is an unqualified liar. Now put up or shut up.

Events in the Social World

St. Louisans Have Carried Most of Social Affairs to Summer Resorts, and Cottages Along Lake Shores Are Scenes of Many Gay House Parties—Wequetonsing and Harbor Point, Mich., Most Popular.

MOUNTAIN, seashore and lake resorts have called St. Louisans from the heat of the city, and our social world is represented in many of the summer places in the United States and Canada.

Michigan, particularly Wequetonsing and Harbor Point, is as usual the most popular, and the cottages along the lake front are the scenes of many gay house parties, while dances and informal entertainments add much to the attractiveness.

The seacoast resorts run a close second, with the Atlantic given a preference over the Pacific, and Hyannisport, Mass., Fisher's Island, N. Y., Biddeford Pool, Me., and Dublin, N. H., each have their quota of St. Louisans.

Among the many prominent members of society at Wequetonsing are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus and their family; Mrs. Ames Cushman and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cushman; Mr. and Mrs. J. Northern Golf Courses Popular Among St. Louisans

Enrollment at Wequetonsing 10 Per Cent Larger Than Last Year—Yachting Favorite Sport at Charlevoix

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WEQUETONSING, Mich., July 8.—The first week in July has seen the Wequetonsing golf links, the only 27-hole course in Northern Michigan, better patronized than ever before so early in the season. A large crowd played on the Fourth, when there was a blind bogey tournament for both men and women and a driving contest for men and putting event for women. Prizes were awarded. The annual tournaments will be held late in August.

C. M. Bradley of Chicago, president of the golf club, is on the job again, and states that thus far about 10 per cent more have enrolled than at the same time last year. P. S. McIntyre of St. Louis is vice president, and other members of the board of directors are Wilbur B. Jones, Charles P. Pettus, St. Louis, and W. J. Clark of Harbor Springs, Mich., who is secretary and treasurer.

Although some St. Louis summer residents along the north shore of Little Traverse Bay went to the Harbor Springs Fourth of July celebration, many from Wequetonsing and Harbor Point were present at the old-fashioned marshmallow roast on the beach at Roaring Brook, for which Miss Margaretta Otis and Mrs. William J. Sinclair of Chicago constituted the Committee on Arrangements and Invitation.

St. Louisans recently enrolled at the golf club are Mr. and Mrs. J. S. McIntyre, Clarence Condie, Mrs. Howard Stevens, Clifford Saxton, John Saxton, Miss Virginia Simmons, Henry McIntyre, A. F. Mengel.

Mrs. Michael Ravold, 70 Vandeventer place, St. Louis, again is at her beautiful cottage, "Nini-Mosha," and is expecting the arrival of her sons, George M. Ravold and Dr. Armand N. Ravold of St. Louis, and John D. Ravold, actor, now playing in New York. The Misses Annie Estelle Ravold and K. Adele Ravold came up with their mother.

C. D. Condie of St. Louis has gone to Camp Monoqua, Wis., after a visit with his mother, Mrs. C. W. Condie, who is at Roaring Brook Inn for the season. C. W. Condie is dividing his Yachting Holds Attention of Cottagers at Charlevoix..

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHARLEVOIX, Mich., July 8.—With the coming of July and the nearer approach of the Chicago-to-Mackinac race of the Chicago Yacht Club, the yachting fever has broken out in Charlevoix in a most contagious form, and the millionaire Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Indianapolis members of the Charlevoix Yacht Club, which conducts an imposing regatta every August, are urging that the crack Chicago boats come here immediately after their big race, which will be followed by their annual Mackinac regatta, and hold a series of races on Pine Lake July 27, 28 and 29.

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce is aiding the cottagers in their efforts and has made liberal appropriation to pay for attractive trophies and for the entertainment of the visitors. Pine Lake is 12 miles long and four miles wide. There would be two races around a triagular course at the Charlevoix end and one to Boyne City.

St. Louis folks continue to occupy their pretty summer homes at the Belvedere resort on the plateau over-

BOSTON, July 8.—The annual cruise of the Eastern Yacht Club, an event of much interest to all yachtsmen along the New England shore, started on Wednesday. This year the yachts started from Marblehead, and stopping at various points along the Massachusetts and Maine coasts, will disband at Bar Harbor on Wednesday next. Among the members of the club of long standing is H. Clay Pierce of St. Louis, who for many years made his summer home at Magnolia; Samuel C. Davis and Mrs. George Tiffany, both of St. Louis.

terfered somewhat with the schedule of sports planned at the Point Judith Country Club, but many of the prominent polo men of the country arrived for the Fourth and several games drew a large number of the summer colony to the club.

Mrs. Albert Bond Lambert of St. Louis, whose summer home is Sagamore Villa, at the Pier, has joined her mother, Mrs. George S. McGrew, and her children.

W. M. Chandler, W. T. Chandler and Miss Margaret F. Chandler of St. Louis have opened their cottage at Saunderstown for the summer.

Mrs. Harry L. Bock and daughter, Miss Margaret, of St. Louis, arrived late in June at their cottage at Saunderstown.

President Divides Honors With Gen. Pershing on Ohio Trip.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Gen. Pershing, Missouri's soldier son, proved almost as much an attraction in Marion, O., at the homecoming celebration there for President and Mrs. Harding as did these distinguished citizens, according to all reports. Gen. Pershing was greatly feted by the President's fellow-townsmen and he said he had to make more speeches there to the square inch than anywhere else in America.

The General will return with the presidential party by motor from Columbus. According to present plans, they will arrive back in Washington tomorrow, where, after a brief stay, Gen. Pershing will go for a series of promised North Shore visits.

With Congress adjourned, so far as the House is concerned, for a brief summer vacation, all too short for fence building in home districts, most of the Missouri delegation in Congress has returned to the State they represent. The Senators and their families are not quite so fortunate, as the Senate grinds on and on.

Mrs. Dadyer, Miss Louise Dyer and Miss Helen Dyer and Miss Edna V. de Iliniere of St. Louis, who are in Washington for several weeks, are at the Powhattan Hotel. While here they have been the guests of honor at a number of affairs.

Mrs. James A. Reed entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Senate Cafe for Mrs. W. H. Kessinger, wife of the auditor of Porto Rico, having as her guests Mrs. Coolidge, Mrs. Joseph L. France, Mrs. Selden P. Spencer and Mrs. Thomas P. Gore. Mrs. Reed is entertaining informally at a porch party tomorrow afternoon for Mrs. Kessinger, who is staying at the Shoreham while in Washington.

Mrs. Edgar Ellis is in Chicago until July 10, when she will leave for Kansas City.

How You May Have a Really Fine Complexion

Says Buttermilk Cream and Soap Used Each Night Before Retiring Makes Complexion Soft, Smooth and Beautifully Clear.

The old-time application of buttermilk and cream to whiten and preserve the skin and remove harsh little wrinkles and ugly sallowness was grandmother's recipe, but women throughout the country are again using it, but this time in the form of a delightful new vanishing cream and soap that ensures a beautiful complexion and snow white hands and arms.

Both of these truly wonderful toilet preparations can be obtained at any first-class drug or toilet goods counter by simply asking for Howard's Buttermilk Cream or Howard's Buttermilk Cream Soap.

Each night before retiring the face should be cleansed with warm water, just hot enough for the heat to be pleasant to the skin, and using Howard's Buttermilk Cream Soap. Dry and rub gently, using a little friction. When the skin looks pink and feels soft and warm apply a small quantity of Howard's Buttermilk Cream, rubbing well into the pores until completely absorbed. You will find this treatment all that is necessary to keep away fine lines and dangerous wrinkles. Simply ask your favorite drug or toilet goods counter for Howard's Buttermilk Cream. If you cannot obtain locally send 10 cents (silver or stamps) for generous trial package of both Cream and Soap. Howard Bros. Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Just What Is Really Known About Spiritualism

which cannot be accounted for except on some theory of the supernormal, but just what that supernormal power is is still a matter of some disagreement. If it is not the work of spirits, however, it is a case of telepathy working in an amazingly complex fashion."

"What is your conclusion?" I asked.

"So long as there are two conceivable conclusions," he answered, "the true scientist will refrain from accepting either; he will simply employ them as hypotheses and pursue them to their ultimate proof or disproof. But I cannot understand why some people seem to find it more easy to believe that intelligence is transmitted throughout the world, without any physical or spiritual media, than that it should be transmitted by conscious, disembodied spirits.

"What I have said about automatic writing applies equally to clairvoyance and psychometry. Both are proven facts, but whether they are due to telepathy or to spirit intervention is still in dispute. But the Society for Psychical Research has established by scientific investigation that certain living persons have been able to see happenings hidden from other mortal eyes (the phenomenon we call clairvoyance), while others, whom we call psychometrists, have been able to gain intelligent impressions by feeling watches, jewelry and other keepsakes in their hands."

"How about fortune telling? Can the future be predicted through supernormal agencies?"

"There is a good deal of honest disagreement on that score. Some predictions seem too remarkable to some investigators to be attributable to guess-work. Others, possibly because they have had no such personal experiences themselves, are silent on the subject."

Eventually I asked Dr. Prince about 'ectoplasm." He seemed to see the question coming and he seemed to be trying to steer it off. Did it seem too silly to be discussed, I wondered, or was it one of those embarrassing subjects which he hated to take up with a layman?

"It is embarrassing," he admitted, "not because of the subject itself but because there has been so much rubbish written about it. It embarrasses the whole cause of psychic research to have people so guillible that they are willing to swallow as spirit revelation things which serious investigators know to be grossest fraud.

Doubt About Materialization.

"Not all the investigators are willing to concede that there has ever been a genuine materialization. Among those who do concede that the phenomena are genuine, there is still a great dispute. Some accept the theory that discarnate spirits have taken on physical forms for certain occasions, using the substance of the medium's body for the purpose. Others hold to the theory that the rare phenomenon is due to natural forces emanating from the medium's body, but has nothing to do with spirit intervention."

Following this explanation, however, Dr. Prince said a kind word for ectoplasm after all. He said that those investigators who rejected the whole idea had not generally investigated the phenomena of materialization at such length as had those who had become convinced of its objective reality.

But when it came to slate-writing, Dr. Prince was not so merciful.

"I believe it is all a fraud," he said. "In the first place, I have never heard of a genuine investigator who is convinced of the genuineness of any such phenomena. In the second place, I have been working for several months now investigating 19 alleged slate-writers in America and a few from abroad. There seems to be less evidence in favor of slate-writing than there is in favor of spirit photography."

"Do you deny that spirits have been photographed?" I asked.

"It is not entirely a closed subject among psychical researchers," he said, "but there are few, if any, who have announced themselves convinced so far. There are many obvious frauds. There are other photographers, such as William Hope of the 'Crewe Circle' in England, who will not permit themselves to be investigated. This, of course, is not sufficient reason to deny his claims, but there are suspicious circumstances in the pictures themselves. Why do Hope's spirits always array themselves in a peculiar style of dress when they come to him to have their pictures taken, or else exude a different kind of ectoplasm from that which is the rule with other spirit photographers? There are also suggestions of fraud in photographs or writings found on these photographic plates.

Must Treat It Scientifically.

"As to the alleged photographs of fairies and hobgoblins and other creations of the poets—well, I expect any day to hear that someone has photographed the stork which brings the babies, and the type of mind which will believe the one should just as readily believe the other. These photographs, for instance, always show the fairies stylishly dressed in the exact costumes which the artists have always imagined them to wear, and with the very butterfly wings growing out of their shoulder blades with which, in spite of their utter uselessness, every well-imagined fairy was always supposed to be equipped.

"Psychical research," Dr. Prince concluded, "is not child's play. It is a serious effort to gain a knowledge of the forces which govern human life. To hold that the human soul is immortal, but that we must not ask questions about it, does not seem rational to us. To hold that a man cannot live after death, while refusing to examine evidence to the contrary, does not seem scientific. But to reject both these positions only to be imposed upon by charlatans and neurotics who tell you that their wild tales are too sacred to be investigated—this certainly will not help us to an understanding of life. Psychic research must follow the course of any other science. We need not believe either that electricity does not exist or that it is the sign of God's anger and therefore must not be investigated; but even though we avoid both these extremes, it is not necessary for us to buy stock in every perpetual motion scheme."

"LEARN YOUR JOB, STICK TO EMPLOYER" IS VAUCLAIN'S ADVICE

to get big wages, on the theory that they did work that no one would wish to do unless he was well paid for it.

"In the future, we may have to bow down to the man with the wheelbarrow, or do his work ourselves. The prospect would not alarm me—I can teach anyone pick and shovel work from my own experience.

"Dispensing with common labor is not so impossble as it may sound. I recently saw a man digging a cellar by means of a Ford tractor and a plow. The tractor was not built for that kind of work, but the man managed to make it do, and to take the place of the common labor that he could not get.

"Besides the shortage of common labor, we will see two other famines this fall—one of railroad cars, when the coal business and the grain business start up; and one of locomotives. As I said, the demand for locomotives comes last.

"The natural growth of the United States is several million persons annually. The general business just to take care of these extra people is enormous. I am glad to see people living better. Everyone should wish to see the workingman live better. The money he has to spend makes about 50 per cent of our business.

"It is a good thing for a workingman to buy an automobile if he can; it shows he has confidence in being able to earn more money in place of what he has spent on the machine, and it gives him and his family a good time.

"I am endeavoring to give the maximum wage to the men on the payroll of the Baldwin Locomotive Co., rather than to put more men to work at present."

President Vauclain has made a trade study of the Far East, and of Russia and central European nations, and has built locomotives for Rumania and other nations now being reconstructed.

Europe's Dilemma.

"Europe is facing our problems," he says, "but against greater odds. While our productive capacity has been increased, their markets and facilities have been destroyed. The eastern half of Europe produces little or nothing, and the western half produces only about one-half its former output.

"Russia, which once consumed 40 per cent of Europe's manufactures and produced 40 per cent of Europe's raw material, is essential to the building up of Europe.

"We need to have confidence in our Government. It is the best on earth. We need to get people out of the idea of putting their money into Government securities because they are afraid to risk it in business. There is lots of business here. All we need is to find a way to do it."

Vauclain Can't See Waterways Usage

President Vauclain of the Baldwin Locomotive Works was not converted to advocacy of waterway transportation during his stay in St. Louis. To him transportation means movement by rail, or by some even swifter agency.

"You can't make a race horse out of an ox," he said, in speaking of the Mississippi River. "The chief competition that the railroads will have to meet is not the competition of slow-moving river barges, but that of motor trucks, which are quicker than rail transportation on short hauls, and which do away with the labor and cost of reloading. This motor truck competition is getting to be a serious thing for the railroads on local freight business between New York and Philadelphia.

"The need for reloading is in itself a great drawback to water traffic. For this reason, the Baldwin plant has found it more satisfactory to get most of its supplies by rail, although we have wharf facilities. The ore and grain business on the Great Lakes is being handled in a way that overcomes these disadvantages as far as possible, but reloading and rehandling are always to be avoided, and this will be more true as labor becomes scarcer. Then, too, the whole spirit of the times is toward faster, not slower, movement. I used to go to my work, 40 years ago, at 2½ miles an hour; I now go at 25 miles an hour. We used to be two weeks in making a locomotive; now we make it in two days. The tendency of all business is the same."

AMATEURS LAYING PLANS FOR WORLD-WIDE RADIO

During next winter radio amateurs expect to lengthen their radio relay traffic lines to all parts of the world. For several years messages each night have been flashed from amateur station to amateur station in all parts of this country and Canada. With the increased use and efficiency of continuous wave telegraphy and the interest and energy that radio amateurs in China, Japan, Hawaii and European countries are showing, officials of the American Radio Relay League believe that when the summer's static storms and interfering vacation trips are over duplications of amateur short wave length spanning of the Atlantic which was accomplished in February will be nearly a nightly occurrence.

The announcement of E. H. Armstrong, developer of the regenerative circuit, that he has an improvement on this system, about 10,000 times greater in signal strength with practically the same apparatus and number of electron tubes, has brought the realization of world-wide amateur radio closer.

The thrill of long-distance transmission alone does not urge the amateurs on. They hope to put their carefully worked out radio relays to practical use. The American Radio Relay League has just been approached by a Buffalo athletic organization with the hope that a long-distance radio swimming meet with a Hawaiian swimming club could be arranged. All results, times and events both ways would be reported by amateur radio. This scheme will not be worked out now because of the poor sending conditions of summer and the fact that many of the relay operators are taking their vacations. The water contest by radio is scheduled for the fall.

FIFTY-ONE STATIONS AID IN BROADCASTING MARKET REPORTS

Since the first national broadcasting of official agricultural news by radio telephone in December, 1920, the national crop and market reports of the Department of Agriculture have covered more and more territory and increased in value to the farmer as well as the public in general, until today there are 45 governmental and private broadcasting stations handling this form of news. Six applicants, one each in Fort Worth, Nashville, Jacksonville, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Hutchison, Minn., for broadcasting crop and market reports have just been approved, bringing the total stations to 51, while 29 other applicants in several states are awaiting action.

The Bureau of Markets has official market stations at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha, as well as 73 branch offices in 46 large market centers, 16 of which are directly connected with the Washington office by direct wire; all securing vital agricultural news. At least 15,000 individuals, firms and railroads co-operate in gathering data on fruits, vegetables, grain and livestocks for daily use. Fifteen agricultural colleges are assisting in the broadcasting. Besides the telephone broadcast, the Bureau of Markets, through the co-operation of the Navy Communications Service, sends out daily market reports in code from high-powered stations at Arlington and at the Great Lakes Training Station.

SCHENECTADY WAS SOURCE OF MARCONI'S MESSAGE FROM MARS

The "messages from Mars," received by Guglielmo Marconi while cruising in the Mediterranean sea have been explained. The source of the extremely long radio waves, impossible of location then, has been announced as Schenectady, the home of the General Electric Co.

As a part of his visit in this country Senator Marconi visited the laboratories of the General Electric Co recently. There Dr. Irving Langmuir of the research laboratory told the wireless inventor of the experiments he had conducted with a wave length of 150,000 meters, five times as long as any previously obtained. It was at the time of these experiments that Marconi announced the reception of regular beats of an extremely long wave length. The report that the wireless genius had received signals from Mars was the result.

The current of this wave length was sent by Dr. Langmuir over the trolley wires between Schenectady and Saratoga Springs, 18 miles north of the Electric City. The experiment was unannounced, and the powerful current evidently spread itself over the world.

Senator Marconi denied the report that he had been in communication with Mars, and now proof is offered of the source of the "signals."

TRY TRANSCONTINENTAL DAYLIGHT RADIO RELAY

Radio amateurs will attempt relaying messages across the continent in daylight. Today a message from a Maine station will start on its way to the coast, and simultaneously a California station will initiate one for Hiram Percy Maxim, president of the American Radio Relay League, in Hartford, Conn.

Most radio relaying is done at night as the sending ranges are greater, although reduction of static during daylight favors day sending. Getting the message across the Rockies will be the hardest link in the relay, as amateur stations there are hundreds of miles apart. During the dark hours relays of 500 miles are now comparatively simple, but great difficulty will probably be experienced during daytime in covering over 200 miles at a stretch.

NINE MONTHS OF BROADCASTING

On June 30 the Department of Commerce licensed the three hundred and eighty-second broadcasting station, issuing 21 during the past week. Within nine months all these broadcasting stations have sprung up until today the air is literally charged with news, music and data of various sorts. The future of radio telephonic broadcasting seems assured, as the remarkable growth still goes on at the rate of about three new stations each day.

Since the advent of broadcasting only 10 stations have dropped out of the new and fascinating game, and most of those on account of the termination or transfer of a business or due to the death of the owner.

Among the new stations listed this week is the first department of the American Legion to take up broadcasting, the Nebraska department of this organization having been assigned the call "WGAT," the last three letters of which seem to have a special military significance and recall a weapon with which most veterans were familiar not so long ago.

From some of the more distant stations, listeners write to KSD that they not only heard the opera remarkably well, but even the laughter of individuals, occasionally, in the audience.

Repairs on the studio, which was damaged by fire and water last Monday, are being completed as rapidly as possible. It will be several days yet before more elaborate programs can be resumed.

ARLINGTON STATION TO MAKE TRADE RADIO TEST

Foreign trade news and dispatches by radiophone will be another means of informing the American business man of developments in foreign fields of industry and commerce if the innovation to be made by the United States Department of Commerce on July 11 and 12 is to be established as a permanent practice.

On those dates two large gatherings of business men will be held at Boston and Baltimore; the exposition of New England Shoe and Leather Association will take place at the former city, while an import and export exposition will be held in the latter. Arrangements have been made with the Navy Department to utilize the facilities of the Arlington radio station to send these meetings the latest cabled news of foreign markets and trade opportunities received from abroad by the Department of Commerce.

For the guidance of all receiving stations, the time of broadcasting will be at 8 p. m. (Eastern standard time) on two days, July 11 and 12, the station at Arlington (NAA), and the wave length 2650 meters.

Los Angeles will have radio in 20 of its public schools before the fall session begins. The problem of having material broadcasted that will meet the standards of the local pedagogues is a worrysome one.

The radio is greatly stimulating recruiting in the National Guard throughout the country. Under the new table of organization attractive openings are afforded to young men interested in wireless and a high grade of men is being obtained for these openings.

Radio outfits have become so numerous in the apartment houses in New York that it has become a problem to find space for the antennae on the roofs. A scheme is being developed to have community service rendered to tenants over the house telephone wires.

SOUNDING THE DEEP.

The destroyer Stewart, equipped with the Sonic range finder, used for sounding at sea, has made a practical test trip from Newport to Gibraltar. The new method is closely related to radio, depending on the transmission of sound waves through water, and is employed to measure depths of the ocean. Soundings are made by measuring the length of time required for sound oscillations sent out from the ship to travel to the bottom of the ocean and back again. Dr. Harvey C. Hayes of the Naval Engineering Technical Staff, who aided in the development of the new naval equipment, is making the trip on the Stewart.

Daily reports from the destroyer, during her trip across the Atlantic, indicate that the apparatus was a great success. Soundings were taken at regular intervals without stopping the ship, and indicated depths from 90 to 2500 fathoms. These soundings correspond to those taken by the old laborious method with the wire and lead, which required the stopping of the ship for one or two hours during the operation.

Armstrong's New
Super Regenerative Circuit

Demonstrated before the Institute of Radio Engineers on June 7th, by Maj. Edwin H. Armstrong, creator of the regenerative circuit.

Only two vacuum tubes are used, and do the work of eight!—securing undreamed-of amplification. Outside aerial unnecessary! More simple to construct and operate than regular regenerative circuit. Does away with all interference from spark stations!!!

Hints to the Radioist.

Grid leaks and grid condensers cannot be used in connection with the crystal receiver.

A crystal set cannot be made to regenerate.

The wave length has little to do with the distance received.

Low resistance receivers do not respond to weak signals.

Two or more receiver sets cannot receive from the same aerial at the same time.

A crystal detector, as well as a vacuum tube detector, can be amplified.

Do not burn the filmament too brightly for loud signals; it will shorten the life of the tube.

It is often better to buy a few accessories than to build them.

Do not expect too much from a home-made set.

Do not allow water from the facet to get into the battery.

Keep a rubber mat under the battery so that any acid will not get on the floor.

The positive pole of the battery generally sulphates first around the top of the case. Keep this terminal clean.

Spark Sets for Sale.

The Shipping Board is offering for sale 78 complete radio spark sets formerly used on its wooden war fleet and estimaed at a total valuation of $250,000. The sets are ½, 1 and 2 k. w. sets and include transmitters, batteries and generators. They are located at Norfolk, Va., where they may be examined by applying to B. N. WILLS SEES BASIC LAW IN CAR SALES REVIVAL

Commenting upon the extraordinary acceleration of motor car sales and production since March 1, C. Harold Wills, the designer and builder of the Wills Sainte Claire, says: "It all worked out according to the basic economic law. Transportation was one of the first of the great branches of industry to show the return of prosperity. It was inevitable that the steel business should be the first to recover. Then came the motor car business.

"One of the reasons for that is the fact that the motor car today is an economic necessity and is so accepted, because it is the most economical, comfortable and speedy means of transportation.

"For two years the public had not been buying motor cars, but had been driving them to the junk-heap. These cars had to be replaced. These people, as well as the new buyers, are now finding that, while the outward physical appearance of motor cars may not be greatly modified, yet the engineering, mechanical and metallurgical features have been materially improved, the life of the motor car thereby prolonged and the maintenance cost greatly reduced.

"The refinement of 'the unseen things' in a motor car is interesting, because the manufacturer finds that this is the foundation of his reputation. The conscience and farsightedness of the manufacturer in building up this transportation business on a sounder scientific basis is bound to be appreciated by the motoring public."

DORRIS ANNOUNCES NEW ONE-TON TRUCK

A new one-ton Dorris truck was officially announced July 1 by the Dorris Motor Car Co., a number of which have already been sold to local concerns, according to J. F. Culver, general manager of the Dorris Motor Car Co.

The new model, which is known as the K-2 series, is a four-cylinder truck with the Dorris valve-in-head motor, unit power plant and multiple disc clutch. The Dorris distillator is now being installed as regular equipment on the K-2 truck.

The new truck, it is claimed, averages from 12 to 15 miles to the gallon of gasoline. An option of either 120, 132 or 144 inch wheel base is allowed the owner. Semi-elliptic springs, all leaves of which are chrome vanadium steel, are used both in the front and the rear, the latter being underslung. The K-2 is equipped with 33x5 inch cord tires, Westinghouse starting and lighting system, Bosch high tension magneto and Stewart speedometer. Production of this model of truck is now in full force at the factory of the Dorris Motor Car Co., at Sarah and Laclede.

UNIVERSAL CO. OPENS NEW HOME SATURDAY

St. Louisans have good reason to be proud of the immense new home of the Universal company, incorporated, now undergoing the finishing touches on the northwest corner of Olive and Beaumont streets, which will be formally opened for public inspection on the 15th and 16th of July. A cordial invitation to attend the opening on these dates has been extended to all motordom by this firm.

According to M. Lovy, president of the company, this three-story sanitary plant will be one of the largest of its kind in the country, devoted exclusively to repairing, building, trimming and painting of motor cars and will house departments for every detailed operation necessary for this kind of work, such as nickeling, enameling, glass work of every description and painting. It will be the only shop in this section of the country where all work is done under one roof and management.

The Universal company began business in a small storeroom at 3951 Laclede avenue in 1917 with working space for about 10 automobiles and a force of four employes. Within six months it took a lease of the building at the northwest corner of Channing and Locust. This space soon became inadequate and it leased the building at the southwest corner of Washington and Vandeventer. The new home will carry a working force of approximately 150 employes.

NO-FLOAT CARBURETOR INTRODUCED HERE

The Huber-Morris & Co., 219 N. Channing avenue are introducing a new V carburetor for Ford cars, known as the "No-Float" Carburetor.

The new product obtains its name from the fact that it has no float or reservoir for fuel, and is entirely controlled by the vacuum of the motor.

There are no adjustments on the carburetor and according to the manufacturers is guaranteed to climb the steepest hill with but a quart of gasoline in the tank of the car.

RELIABLE TIRE CO. SERVICE LOT READY

The new service lot of the Reliable Tire Co., Cupples Tire distributors at 3121 Locust street is now ready for use according to an announcement made by Mr. Ben Sacks, of the Reliable Co.

The lot which is 50x150 feet will be used for changing tires and tubes and putting air in tires, water in radiators, etc. An arch which will have an illuminated sign exploiting Cupples tires will be erected parallel with Locust street at the building line.

The Reliable Auto Tire Co. has hitherto been obliged to use Locust street in front of its premises for changing tires. With the congested condition of the street the company considered this impratical and the service lot will provide the remedy.

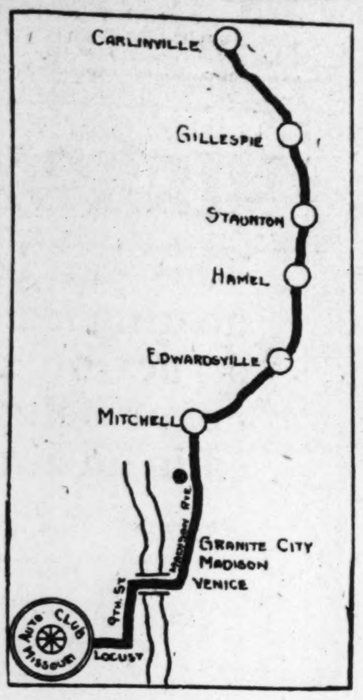
ILLINOIS AUTO TRIP



NEW GRAY CAR PUT THROUGH ROAD TEST

The first touring model of the new Gray car manufactured by the Gray Motor Corporation of Detroit, which was received last week by the Anderson-Strauss Motor Co., distributers for St. Louis and the entire Mississippi Valley, was put through a road and hill climbing demonstration Monday for the benefit of St. Louis newspapermen.

The test, which started and ended at the salesrooms of the Anderson-Strauss Co., consisted of a 49 1-10 miles jaunt over St. Louis County roads. Upon leaving, the car, carrying six persons, including Salesmanager H. L. Bagley, who drove, headed west on Lindell boulevard, thence through Forest Park to the Clayton road, which was followed as far as the Conway road; the route then continued over the Conway road to the Olive Street road as far as Gumbo. Upon leaving Gumbo, the Kehr's Mill road was traversed as far as the Clayton road, which was then followed back to the city.

During the entire trip, which consumed approximately two and a half hours, the car never faltered, carrying its load up and down the hills and over the rough roads with ease. The entire trip was made on approximately two gallons of gasoline.

The first carload shipment of the new Gray car, which sells for $490, f. o. b. Detroit, left the factory early last week and is expected here tomorrow.

WHEN YOU HEAR A HORN

You hear a horn—it may be a doctor on an errand of mercy. You would not willingly or knowingly take a life. But you may if you persist in holding to the center of the road. Let him pass, with a spirit of "Godspeed."

GIVE HIM A CHANCE.

It is railroad practice to haul a freighter off on the siding, to let the express go by. It is common sense. You are the freighter of the highway—the plugger, the worker, the money maker—a part of the nation's commercial system of transportation. Don't forget the express—Give him a chance!

INDUSTRIAL TRACTOR PARADE WEDNESDAY

Headed by Band, Fordson Tractors Will Parade Through Downtown Streets.

At the circus grounds, Sarah and Pine streets, billowing canvas, pop stands, a grand stand for the band and other preparations herald the approach of the opening of the Fordson National Industrial Tractor Show on Wednesday.

The rings, if there be rings in an industrial circus, are ready. The ringmasters, ready with gasoline, lubricating oil and the other whips of this advanced twentieth century type of carnival, are awaiting the announcer.

And true to form, the Industrial Tractor Show will proclaim its opening to the burst of music and the rumble of wheels over city pavement in a huge parade to be held on Wednesday morning.

New elephants will greet the bystander as the cavalcade sweeps by, this time breathing oil and gasoline and rumbling with steel shod feet over the stones beneath. Over 40 huge Fordsons, each one demonstrating in the parade some real industrial use for tractor power, will make up the impressive train.

Lime, coal, cement and other cold inanimate objects of commerce and industry will grace the trailer rumbling behind. Strange devices which later will whine and growl and grumble at the show itself, will disport themselves in holiday fashion in the parade.

Band to Lead Parade.

At the head of the parade a band from the Methodist Orphanage of Clayton will ride in a true enough circus wagon. And the tractor hauling the band wagon will be shod with rubber tires to show that even a brute of commercial life can pull along with the aristocratic and silent disdain of a limousine.

Direct from the parade the tractor will pull into place at the show grounds and the carnival of energy will be on.

Every one in commerce, industry, mining, development work, can see something which will strike home with real force at this show.

Rock crushers, tractor operated, will convert boulders into gravel, and tractors will operate air compressors and drills, rivet hammers, winches and derricks, concrete mixers, railroad equipment and a hundred other devices which the busy man of industry knows how and where to use.

Admission is without charge, and invitations have been issued to thousands of leading city and town officials, builders, contractors and others throughout the territory within 200 miles of St. Louis.

Exhibits Open Until 10 p. m.

The exhibits will be open and in operation from 10 a. m. until 10 p. m. for three days, and each exhibit will be attended by a man experienced in the type of work which is being demonstrated.

The parade will form at the Ford Motor Co.'s plant, Sarah and Forest Park boulevard, leaving there at 10 a. m. The line of parade will be as follows:

East on Forest Park boulevard to Grand, north on Grand to Pine street, east on Pine street to Twelfth street, south on Twelfth street to Chestnut street, east on Chestnut street to Fourth street, north on Fourth street to Washington avenue, west on Washington avenue to Twelfth street, south on Twelfth street to Locust street, west on Locust to the Lindell Cut-off, west on Olive street to Sarah and south on Sarah to Pine, where the show grounds will be, and the show will begin full blast.

MOVE TO THE RIGHT.

Courtesy is as cheap as the air you breathe. Practice it on those with whom you come in contact on the highways. It pays! When you are aware that a faster-moving vehicle is trying to pass, move to the right at the first opportunity. Give the passing vehicle a cheerful greeting as it goes by.

Touring Car In Road Use Confirms Show Triumph

THE beauty of line, smart style and rich appointments of the new Five Passenger Chandler Touring Car made it a dominating sensation in all the shows of 1922.

The admiration the car won on display is now being confirmed in performance.

Then, the body triumphed.

Now, the chassis is proving its superiority.

The combination of the body of beauty and chassis of might is profoundly satisfying to thousands of purchasers who are using this model over all road conditions throughout the United States.

Such a body and such a chassis make a value not to be duplicated at anywhere near Chandler's sensationally low price.

DAVIS MOTOR REPORTS RECORD JUNE BUSINESS

The continued upward tendency of automobile production is reflected in the announcement of the George W. Davis Motor Car Co., Richmond, Ind., that their June production this year was the largest in their history for that month.

The Davis company has recently announced a smaller six-cylinder car, and volume shipments are now being made on the five-passenger model known as the phaeton. A sedan will shortly be added, and distributors throughout the country report a tremendous interest in this new line.

The Monarch Auto are distributors for the Davis car in St. Louis and adjacent territory.

The same wonderful engineering that has kept The Dorris in the forefront among high class cars since 1905, the same materials and workmanship, the same beautiful body, design and finish—all these continue to be outstanding Dorris characteristics.

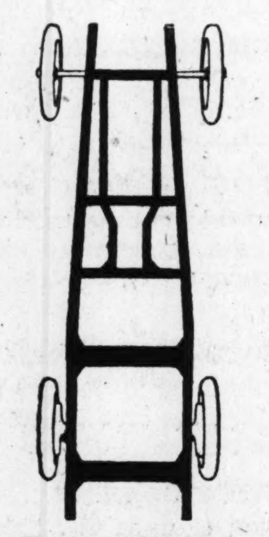
Studebaker Bodies Don't Rattle or Squeak



The Special-Six chassis frame is 7" deep. It tapers from a width of 29" in the front to 41" in the rear, so that the sides of the body fit perfectly without overhang. Five cross-members prevent the distortion that eventually causes bodies to squeak.

Studebaker bodies rest squarely on the chassis frame—not on the body sills. The body and the frame form a rigid unit that successfully resists the rack of the road.

Studebaker bodies are built in Studebaker shops by men, many of whom have been building vehicle bodies for Studebaker for upwards of 30 years—and their fathers before them. Studebaker has been building fine bodies for seventy years.

Studebaker Special-Six bodies, because of their quality and soundness, weigh more than those of other cars around the Special-Six price. You cannot skimp in material and build a body that will not rattle.

Freedom from rattle or squeak is just another of the fine-car refinements that emphasize the extra value of the Studebaker Special-Six.

THIS IS A STUDEBAKER YEAR

Oakland Wins!

OAKLAND wins the Sweepstakes Cup—grand prize for cars of all classes regardless of cost, size or weight—in the Sixth Annual Los Angeles-Camp Curry, Yosemite Valley Economy and Endurance Run. Oakland also wins the first prize for cars of its own class.

Fifteen other makes of cars yielded to Oakland's phenominal record of 49.2 Ton Miles per gallon, according to official A. A. A. records! The actual mileage per gallon for the Oakland car was 29.37. No oil was used and only two pints of water—and the length of the run was 360 miles!

Think of it! Nearly thirty miles to the gallon—through city traffic and over rain-soaked country roads; up steep mountain trails and through sand, hub-deep!

And remember—the New Oakland Car that accomplished this remarkable feat was a stock, five-passenger touring car. You can buy an exact duplicate—you can buy this same economy and dependability in any New Oakland model!

Truly, Oakland is the economy car. It is the only car, backed by 15,000 mile performance guarantee. It is the light-six sponsored by the resources and the prestige of the General Motors Corporation. Can you afford to overlook The New Oakland Six once you decide to spend around a thousand dollars for a motor car?

WHAT TO DO BEFORE YOU GO TOURING

"July marks the high tide of the touring season and is the great vacation month as well," says Mr. H. P. Fahrenkrog of the Kardell Motor Car Co.

"In case you are about to embark upon an auto trip of any length be sure that you are 'all set' before you go," he cautions.

"First of all, be sure your car is mechanically right. We do not mean that your car should have a general overhauling before starting, but if there has been any little noticeable (not imaginary) irregularities existing, consult a good mechanic.

"Don't judge the conditions of your car by the mileage it has covered. The number of miles registered on the speeometer of some cars may show a five hundred century mark, yet be in far better mechanical condition than some showing 50 or 75 per cent less.

"Careful and systematic lubrication is always necessary, but be sure your car is well lubricated before starting on your trip. Be guided in the lubrication of your car by the lubricating chart in your instruction book. Don't overlook a single point of lubrication shown on the chart.

"Tires are usually the bugbear of an extended auto trip. Your car should be equipped with the best tires in your possession, the poorer tires to be used as spares. Keep your tires inflated, according to the recommendations of the manufacturers. Don't run on partly inflated tires. This breaks the casing and the increased friction generates more heat.

CHAUDET SALES IS TO DISTRIBUTE GIVEN GAUGE

The Chaudet Sales Co., 1421 Locust street, formerly known as the A. C. Brake Co. of Missouri, distributors of the A. C. Brake for Ford cars, has been appointed distributors for St. Louis and adjacent territory of the Gwen gasoline gauge for Fords and certain models of the Chevrolet cars, manufactured by the Gwen Manufacturing Co. of Davenport, Ia.

The Gwen visible gauge tells at a glance how much gasoline is in the tank without lifting up the seat cushions, unscrewing the cap and measuring with a stick. The gauge is built in four models to fit all 490 Chevrolet 1922 touring model, Ford touring, roadsters and Chevrolet tourings with round tank, Ford touring and roadsters with oval tank and all coupes and sedans.

G. G. Morrison will have charge of the company's sales and service department on Gwen gauges.

BUICK CLOSED CARS TO BE BUILT IN DETROIT

On Aug. 1, the Buick Motor Company will start assembling all closed cars manufactured by them in the plant formerly occupied by the Scripps-Booth Company in Detroit, according to an announcement today by H. H. Bassett, president of the company.

The factory contains about 350,000 square feet of floor space and was originally designed for automobile production. For the past seven months the Buick Motor Company has been outfitting the plant, putting in enameling ovens, conveyor systems and making it strictly up to date," Mr. Bassett said. "This new assembly plant will have a capacity of 400 closed cars per day. The motors, transmission, axles, sheet metal work, radiators and other chassis parts will be manufactured at the plant in Flint and shipped in carload lots to the new assembly plant in Detroit.

JUNE BIGGEST MONTH IN FIRESTONE'S HISTORY

It is stated by executives of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. that June has proved the biggest month in actual number of tire sales since the founding of the concern, 22 years ago.

Officials report that demand has greatly exceeded expectations and is taxing production. Over 500 carloads, a total of 700,000 tires, were shipped in June, and there is no indication of slackening demand.

The company attributes much of the increase to a growing appreciation of tire values on the part of the motoring public. Unusual milage records are said to be reported in greater numbers than ever before in the history of the company.

BROOKE, SMITH & FRENCH OCCUPY NEW BUILDING

In occupying their new building devoted entirely to the various phases of national advertising and merchandising, Brooke, Smith & French, Inc., of Detroit, advertising agency, have established themselves in one of the most completely equipped agency plants of this country.

The new building contains more than 6000 square feet of floor area and is of striking appearance and centrally located. In addition to the executive offices, adequate facilities are provided for the specialized departments of Research, Copywriting, Media, Mechanical Production, Checking, Shipping and Auditing.

LAFAYETTE SOUTH-SIDE BANK ISSUES TOUR BOOK

"Where to Go and How to Get There by Automobile," a 24-page booklet containing a series of automobile trips with maps, road conditions about St. Louis, hints to motorists when in trouble, traffic regulations, and a list of the new boulevard stops and congested districts is being offered free to all motorists by the Lafayette-South Side Bank.

PAIGE OUTPUT HAS DOUBLED LAST YEAR'S

During the first six months of 1922 the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company has built and sold 50 per cent more cars than it produced during the entire calendar year of 1921. Comparing the first six months of 1922 with the same period of 1921 the increase is approximately 225 per cent, according to the figures issued by factory officials.

New Prices!

This is important! We are now able to deliver genuine Willard THREADED RUBBER Batteries for $26.60 and up!

Threaded Rubber Batteries always have cost less "per month" and "per mile". Now they actually cost less in DOLLARS AND CENTS.

The how and why of these remarkable prices make a wonderful story of manufacturing achievement. First cost as well as ultimate cost now argues in favor of Willard Threaded Rubber. Make no purchase, risk no money, on any battery until you have visited one of the service stations named below and heard the whole of Willard's astonishing price story.

PAVING TO BE LET TUESDAY ESTIMATED AT $717,150

Reconstruction of Russell Avenue From Broadway to Tower Grove Avenue, Aggregating $300,000, Principal Project.

Bids for street paving work in St. Louis estimated to cost $717,150 will be received Tuesday by the Board of Public Service, representing the largest single group of street awards to be passed on by the board this year. The letting, including brick, concrete and bituminous paving, follows the award last week of asphant, asphaltic concrete and bitulithic paving contracts aggregating $492,781.

Reconstruction of Russell avenue from Broadway to Tower Grove avenue, with bituminous paving, is the principal project in the letting of contracts scheduled for Tuesday, the estimates on the work aggregating $300,100. The contract will be let in three sections, Broadway to Jefferson, Jefferson to Grand boulevard and Grand to Tower Grove avenue.

Other projects are Elliot avenue, from Franklin to University, brick; Clara avenue, from St. Louis to Greer, brick; Knox avenue, from Wilson to the Frisco Railroad, brick; Watson road, from Southwest to Pernod, concrete; Sulphur avenue, from Columbia to Elizabeth, brick; Morganford road, from Chippewa to Fyler, brick.

Flood Affects 1000 Families.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., July 8.—More than a thousand families, 60 per cent of whom are Mexican, were affected by the recent flood in the lower Rio Grande Valley, according to a survey by J. M. Baker, disaster relief director of the American Red Cross. Baker estimated that a further survey of the flood-affected area will show between 1500 and 2000 families in need of relief. Funds for relief work will be supplied by the Red Cross and by subscription among citizens of the valley towns.

OPERA, NEW PICTURES and GOSSIP of the STAGE

TODD PHOTO

William J. McCarthy as Spaetling, in "The Spring Maid"—Municipal Opera

"Spring Maid", This Week's Operetta, Was Composed by a Critic

Heinrich Reinhardt, Viennese Journalist, Wrote It to Celebrate Virtue of Waters at Carlsbad Cure

A MUSIC critic, Heinrich Reinhardt, who during some years was reviewer for the Neues Journal of Vienna, is the composer of the municipal opera's sixth current production, "The Spring Maid,' which will open Tuesday night at the outdoor theater in Forest Park. The title, by the way, does not refer to a season of the year, but to a dispenser of waters at the Carlsbad cure. The German name is "Die Sprudelfee." Reinhardt has written a half dozen operettas, which were first produced in Vienna, Munich and Berlin.

"Die Sprudelfee" was imported into this country during the first decade of the present century, and had quite a vogue at the German Theater in New York The American rights went begging, however, until Miss Christie McDonald persuaded her managers to acquire them. The original text, by Julius Wilhelm and A. M. Willner, was adapted by the inevitable Smiths, Harry B. and Robert B., and Miss McDonald starred in the piece when it opened at Boston on Dec. 5, 1910. The New York premiere followed on Dec. 26, at the Liberty Theater. Comments on that occasion included the following:

"Refined, simple and charming. * * * The score, if not as deep as a well, has a pleasing lilt, a melodious fancy and a grace of orchestration which must please the average ear. * * * Reminiscent in spots. * * * An instantaneous hit. * * * Its most captivating number, 'Day Dreams,' is strongly reminiscent of 'Dearie.' * * * A quaintly pretty story, founded on one of Grimm's fairy legends."

Played Twice in St. Louis.

AFTER a year's run in New York, "The Spring Maid" took to the road, and was seen here at the Olympic Theater in March, 1912, with Miss McDonald as Princess Bozena. During the following year it was played at the Century Theater with Mitzi Hajos in the star part. Max Bendix, musical director of the municipal opera in 1920, was orchestra director of the original company.

The operetta has three acts, the last of which is divided into two scenes. The first act is entitled, "A Fountain Square at Carlsbad," and the second, "A Bee Farm at Bitterbrunen, near Carlsbad." The first scene in the last act is an allegory depicting the discovery of the Carlsbad Spring, and the final scene shows the annual al fresco fete at Carlsbad.

As the story runs, the young Princess Bozena and her bankrupt father, Prince Nepomuk, arrive at Carlsbad to attend the yearly festival. Her cousin, Baron Rudi, an officer in a crack regiment, is in love with Annamirl, a dainty attendant at the cure, known as "The Spring Maid." Rudi's friend, Prince Aladar, to whom the society of women of his own rank, is distasteful, wagers that he can win the fair Annamirl.

To punish Aladar's conceit, the Princess disguises herself as Annamirl and takes her place at the springs. Aladar begins his love-making, and Bozena agrees to accompany him on a day's excursion into the country, provided she may take her aunt along as cicerone. Prince Nepomuk is persuaded to don women's wear and impersonate the aunt.

Enter the Great Tragedian.

IN the meantime Rudi has followed the real Annamirl to Bitterbrunen, and induces her to pretend to be the Princess, in case they should encounter Aladar, Their plans are somewhat disturbed by the presence of Roland, a famous tragedian, whose favorite role is Othello; with a co-

'Leading Citizen,' 'Turn to the Right,' in Week's Movies

Former Stars Thomas Meighan, at Missouri; Latter, With Alice Terry, Shown at New Grand Central.

A GEORGE ADE screen comedy, "Our Leading Citizen," starring Thomas Meighan, and a picturization of a once popular play, "Turn to the Right," are the new releases at the moving picture houses—the former at the Missouri, and the latter at the New Grand Central, Lyric Skydome, West End Lyric and Capitol. The director of the new version of "Turn to the Right" was Rex Ingram, who filmed "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

The hero in Ade's piece is a lawyer in a small town whose consuming passion is fishing, and who spends more time at that diversion than in pleading at the bar of justice. An unusually strong cast has been assembled in Meighan's support, including Lois Wilson, William P. Carleton, Theodore Roberts, Laurance Wheat, Sylvia Ashton, Charles Ogle, Lucien Littlefield and others.

A reissue of a comedy dating from several years ago, "Spring Fever," is also showing at the Missouri. In the cast are Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels and Snub Pollard. Crossman and Ridge, vocalists, have a program of popular hits by Victor Herbert.

The principal actors in 'Turn to the Right" are Alice Terry, who was leading woman in "The Four Horsemen;" Harry Myers, who formerly starred in "The Connecticut Yankee," and Jack Mulhall. Buster Keaton's new comedy, "His Wife's Relations," will also be shown at the four theaters named above.

Beginning Wednesday a new star, Jack Holt, will be featured at the Skydome, and West End Lyric in "The Call of the North." Miss Daisy Jean, 'cellist, offers a program at the New Grand Central.

MUSICAL ACTS AND COMEDY PLAYLET ON COLUMBIA'S BILL

Pictures for First Half of Week Include "Seeing's Believing" and First Episode of Serial.

The Columbia's program for the first half of the week includes a musical act called "Yachting," with Harry Voltaire and Arline Lloyd; a comedy playlet, "A Perfect Day," with Antoinette Crawford, Stanley DeWolfe and Carl Blythe; Billy Kinkaid, bagpipe virtuoso; De Glen and Adams, in "After the Masquerade," and Duval and Symonds, in "The First Quarrel." The pictures will be "Seeing's Believing," with Viola Dana, and the first of 15 episodes of an outdoor serial, "The Timber Queen," starring Ruth Roland.

Beginning Thursday, the Columbia will offer Jimmy Leonard's "Five Fiddiolites," a musical and comedy act; Jack Polk, in "Still Polking Along," and other skits. The picture will be "Her Night of Nights," with Marie Prevost.

The Grand Opera House lists the Ja Da Trio, Leonard and Anderson, Mme. Jeanne Berzac's circus and six other acts.

Q. What screen actor fell 200 feet and escaped with a broken ankle?

A. Reginald Denny, while working in "Jaws of Steel," a story of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, was the lucky young man. The action required that Denny roll down a steep slope, but in starting to do so, he tripped and fell clear to the bottom, 200 feet below. Instead of being instantly killed as everyone expected, Denny was found to have suffered only a broken ankle.

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

In the impending picture, 'If You Believe It, It's So," written by Perley Poore Sheehan and directed by Tom Forman, Theodore Roberts in this second "Miracle Man" picture returns to whiskers as a protection against the Klieg lights. It is some time since Roberts appeared in a picture where the lower part of his face was so blanketed that most of the acting had to be borne by his eyes. Incidentally, Thomas Meighan, who is starred in this pictures, seems to be going in heavily for the uplift pressure of late—the sort of picture in which his hands have to be upraised frequently in soulful attitude. In addition to this vehicle, there is "Manslaughter," from Alice Duer Miller's story, and "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," in which Perley Poore Sheehan, assisted by Frank Condon, again undertook the sour stirring.

Meighan appears to have formed something of an offensive and defensive alliance with George Ade, for in addition to appearing in the latter's "Our Leading Citizen," he is going to amble forth in "Back Home and Broke," which is not, despite the suggestion of the title, a picture dealing with American tourists.

The United Artists' organization is going to split and yet continue in existence, thereby adding the talents of the amoeba to its other distinctions. According to a reliable report from the Pacific Coast, Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks are to leave the fold and immediately come back to it disguised as a subsidiary company. In other words, Mary, Doug and Charlie, as the principal figures in this distributing organization, are to become affiliated with themselves as their own subordinates. Just what is the particular purpose of this move would appear to be as clear as the foregoing statement. However, it would seem that these three largest money makers in the film world, having borne a large share of the overhead expense of United Artists, now feel that the other stars like Charles Ray and George Arliss who have come into the organization on a releasing basis, are getting a lot of the pie with very little of the indigestion afterward. So the trio plans to assume a more minor role in the conduct of the organization, but to make more money at it, which ought to be considerable compensation.

A report from Germany, via the New York Call, is that Ernest Lubitsch plans to give up historical spectacles for simpler themes—which raises hopes, and fears, too * * * Constance Binney is in England working in a screen version of "A Bill of Divorcement," which Dennison Clift is directing for the Ideal Film Co. * * * And Mae Marsh, says the Film Daily, has sailed for England to work in a Graham Wilcox production. * * * The Film Guide's second Glenn

"Spice of 1922" Is a Highly Peppered Show

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 8.

A NEW Winter Garden revue, "Spice of 1922," produced Thursday night, contains a lot of fun, and also a lot of coarseness and dullness. The book is by Jack Lait, and the music by Fred Hanley and F. Fred Coots. In the cast are Valeska Suratt, Georgie Price, James Watts, Will Oakland, Midgie Miller, Flavia Arcaro, Jane Richardson, Jimmy Hussey, Adele Rowland, the Ralph brothers, Evan Burrowes Fontaine, James C. Morton and others.

This is a series of skits and playlets, with one out of every two scenes worth while. It tries to be naughty at all times. For exhibitions of feminine undress, at least two surpass anything seen heretofore. The whole show moves at a mad pace. Fast is no word for it. If you go to the Winter Garden while the piece is there, prepare for anything. You will be likely to see and hear it.

Still, those parts into which Lait has refrained from cramming burlesque patter, decidedly off-color, become really amusing. Entertaining moments are those in which Georgie Price sings his few songs, Jimmy Hussey does Jewish impersonations, Miss Suratt wears beautiful gowns and Jane Richardson dances and sings. Among the female burlesques of James Watts may be mentioned his hilarious impersonation of "Mme. He-Ritzed-Her" in "La Tosca." A huge opening-night audience received good and bad with impartial favor. There was enough applause for two shows.

A new musical comedy, "Sue Dear," is scheduled to open Monday night at the Times Square Theater. The book is by Bide Dudley, Joseph Herbert and C. S. Montayne; the score is the work of Frank H. Grey. In the cast will be Olga Steck, Bradford Kirkbride, Bobby O'Neill, John Hendricks and others, with a chorus of 20.

New Kalman Operetta.

FROM Europe returns J. J. Shubert, with an imposing list of theatrical acquisitions, most of which he plans to stage next season. From London he brings a musical play, "The Lady of the Rose," in which Eleanor Parker will be starred. In Budapest was captured an operetta, "The Life of Offenbach," which is something of the same sort as "Blossom Time." A new operetta by Emmerich Kalman, "The Little Dutch Wife," will serve as a vehicle for Miss Tessa Kosta.

Hilda Woerner, one of the leading singers of the lighter stage in Germany, will be introduced to America in "Madame Flirt," a musical play by Wilhelm Steinberg, George O'Konkowski and Walter Broome. In Berlin was acquired a new operetta by Leo Fall, entitled "The Street Singer," together with two other musical productions, "The Millionaire's Supper" and "Der Vetter ans Dingsda." A serious play, "The Clown of God," said to have been unusually popular abroad, was also arranged for. The author is Hugo Wolfgang Phillip.

In London rights were obtained for Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's "The Enchanted Cottage," which is to be presented during the fall in collaboration with William A. Brady. The Shubert conquests in Italy were numerous, including dramas and operettas. The producer also arranged for the dramatization of a widely discussed novel, "The Whip."

Will Rogers to Revive "Wang."

IN appreciation of the Theater Guild's enterprise in producing "Back to Methuselah," George Bernard Shaw has extended to that organization an option on all his plays hereafter to be produced in New York. * * * Fortune Gallo wires from Rome that he has persuaded the Italian Government to subsidize an Italian theater in New York, where live more than 1,000,000 natives of "sunny It'." * * * Will Rogers now announces that he will appear in a revival of "Wang," in which De Wolf Hopper prospered for so many seasons. Eva Olivotti, soubrette of the Municipal Opera in St. Louis during 1920, is playing with an indoor municipal opera troupe in Syracuse. The company opened its season last Monday in Friml's "The Firefly."

Joe Jordan, orchestra director of the negro show, "Strut, Miss Lizzie," has composed a syncopated opera called "Lucinda." * * * "Liliom" endured only eight weeks of varying fortunes in Chicago, which, fearing for its fame as to culture, points out that the play was moved from the Garrick, one of the best locations in the loop, to the Great Northern, one of the worst; that the Theater Guild of New York withdrew its representative, leaving the company to shift for itself; and that the cast was deserted by Miss Eva Le Gallienne and two other important players, Harold de Becker and Hortense Alden.

The first American production of "The Passion Play," fashioned after the presentations at Oberammergau, will take place this month at the open-air amphitheater in Los Angeles. The role of Mary will be played by Miss Mary May, the Oberammergau practice being followed that the woman essaying the part must be named Mary and be unmarried.

"Blossom Time," the operetta with Schubert's music, closed its long run last week, but will reopen with the same cast and at the same theater, the Ambassador, on Aug. 1. * * * Tokio, too, has a Theater Guild, which more than a year ago produced "The Burghers of Calais," by Georg Kaiser, author of "From Morn to Midnight."

Miss Brice in "Legitimate."

FANNY BRICE is to make her debut in a legitimate production next season—something oldfashioned and homey, with plenty of tears as well as laughs. The comedienne believes she has a good sob in her system. * * * A widespread rumor that Lou Tellegen had moved back into the home of his

Why Be Fat?

The answer of most fat people is that constant dieting is hard, continual exercise is tiresome, exhaustive—then, too, it might be harmful to force the weight down. That was the old-fashioned idea. Today in Marmola Prescription Tablets all these difficulties are overcome. Just a pleasant, harmless little tablet after each meal and at bedtime causes fat to vanish. This modern method is absolutely harmless, entails no dieting or exercise and has the added advantage of cheapness.

A case of Marmola Prescription Tablets is sold by druggists the world over at one dollar, or if you prefer you can obtain them direct by sending price to the Marmola Co., 4612 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich. Now that you know this you have no excuse for being too fat, but can reduce steadily and easily without fear of any bad aftereffects.

GIRLS! LEMONS BLEACH THE SKIN

Recipe for a Lemon Lotion Used to Whiten and Beautify

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of harmless and delightful lemon bleach. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day, then shortly note the beauty and whiteness of your skin.

Famous stage beauties use this lemon lotion to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, also as a freckle, sunburn, and tan bleach because it doesn't irritate.

Also called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, Etc.

I believe eczema can be cured to stay. I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and NOT merely patched up to return again. Remember, I make this statement after handling nearly a half million cases of eczema and devoting 12 years of my life to its treatment. I don't care what all you have used nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to prove my claims. If you write me TODAY I will send you a FREE TRIAL of mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will surely convince you as it has me. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me today I believe you will enjoy more real comfort than you really thought this world held for you. Just try it, and I feel sure you will agree with me.

PARIS FACING PROBLEM OF EXTENDING LIMITS

Much of Population Crowded Into Suburbs by Encroachment of Business District.

PARIS, July 8.—Banks, movies and ministerial annexes have encroached upon the living quarters of Paris until the overflowing population has begun to crowd into the suburbs, raising again the oft-mooted question of enlarging the city. Transporation facilities must be extended to accommodate the people thus elbowed out of town, and it is argued that for various reasons the city limits must be extended correspondingly.

Boulogne, which will be the first suburb to be connected with the center of the city by subway, is expected to be the first to be taken into the fold, although Boulogne is showing no eagerness to become a part of the most expensive capital in the world.

The demolition of the wall around the French capital, now well under way, to permit these extensions, is also working other important transformations. When finished, a 20-mile circular boulevard will mark a new stage in the evolution of Paris, as did the other boulevard systems, which illustrated the growth of the city in the same way as rings mark the age of an oak.

The first wide streets in the center of the city were built on the side of the wall of Philippe August I. The ring of boulevards now called the "Grand Boulevards," took the place of the wall of Louis XIV and the system of "exterior boulevards," which are now far in the interior of the city limits, starting the foot of Mont Martre, superseded the wall of Louis XVI.

The old Latin quarter also gets another, and probably fatal, blow in these improvements. The University City to be built along the new boulevards, is expected to take students away from the St. Miehel and Mont Parnassee neighborhoods. American boys coming to Paris to study will find there up to date homes such as the Latin quarter never afforded. As for the old Latin quarter life, the little of it that still survived was buried the other day with "Last of the Bohemians"—Biart Degerandine.

Play By Lonely Club.

A postponed performance of "Little Wildflower" will be given tomorrow evening at Fraternity Temple Garden, Grand and West Pine boulevards, by the dramatic company of the St. Louis Lonely Club. directed by Miss Jessie K. Hopper. In the cast will be Frank Haffley, Lillian G. Roeder, Geraldine Kennedy. Girard Smith, William A. Salhow, Irene A. Roeder, George Kellor, Lucille Medina, Marie Arthofor, Dorothy Grimes, Dr. C. Calvin and Miss Hopper. There will be specialties by members of the company, and dancing will follow the play.

DR. HENRICH,
THE PILE SPECIALIST SAYS:
CONSTIPATION GOES WITH PILES

Each a Cause of the Other, but Both Disappear When the Piles Are Cured Without Operation by The Henrich Method.

Everyone knows what Constipation is, but it is not all who know or realize the evil consequences of irregular action of the bowels until it becomes chronic or causes some serious complication. Many lives are ruined by neglecting to attend regularly to nature's calls, and it is of vastly more importance that the bowels be evacuated regularly than that the meals be eaten three times a day—better miss the meals any time.

Constipation leads to Piles and various other Rectal Diseases and to absorption and the throwing into the blood stream a vast amount of debris that goes to derange and disease the entire body and muddle the brain into inaction.

Nearly all who come to me for the treatment of Rectal Diseases are bothered with Constipation; in fact, it is almost impossible for one who is afflicted with any form of Rectal Trouble to be free from Constipation, and where such is the case I cure practically every one of Constipation when I treat them for Rectal Troubles.

Constipation causes Piles and Piles causes Constipation. It works both ways, and one leads to the other. The habit of taking strong physic to move the bowels only makes a bad matter worse, and, like the man that drinks whisky, the more he takes the more it requires to have effect. I eliminate medicine in curing Constipation, and where my directions are followed the cure remains permanent.

Pile Sufferers, write today for a free copy of my folder, "Free Advice on Curing Piles," which also gives testimonials and names and addresses of many of my former patients I cured without the knife or scissors. Examination Free every day except Sunday, from 9 to 1 and 2 to 4. Call at once.

SYRUP PEPSIN IN OLD AGE

Much used by elderly people for constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc.

MANY men and women, as they grow older, suffer constantly from little ills. The cause is the poisons produced by chronic constipation, resulting in headaches, depression, bloating, sour stomach, bad breath, etc. A single bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will prove to you that you can so regulate yourself that elimination will occur promptly every day. Increased doses are not necessary. It is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin. The cost is only about a cent a dose.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been on the market 30 years and is today the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, the formula has never been improved upon. It is safer and better for you than salts, minerals, calomel, coal tar and such drastic purgatives.

Half-Ounce Bottle Free

Few escape constipation, so even if you do not require a laxative at this moment let me send you a Half-ounce Trial Bottle of my Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE so that you will have it handy when needed. Simply send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Write me today.

"SPRING MAID," THIS WEEK'S OPERETTA, WAS COMPOSED BY CRITIC

player, Ursula, he has come to take part in the annual pageant. The village sleuth, Spaetling, suspects the actors of being members of a criminal band led by "Black" Wenzel.

Rudi and Annamirl meet Aladar and Bozena in the country, and the two girls stage a mock quarrel and duel over the Prince's affections. Aladar is so impressed by this evidence of love on the part of the supposed village girl that he offers her his hand. Making known her true rank, the Princess refuses him. Later, however, she promises to marry him "when Carlsbad runs dry."

A ballet in the last act represents the legend of Carlsbad, which Grimm, in his "Folklore of Germany," relates as follows: "In olden times Carlsbad and its environs were the site of a dense forest, abounding in game, and much frequented by the nobles. One day a huntsman, pursuing a rabbit, penetrated far into the forest. Wood nymphs appeared and implored him to spare the creature's life. On his refusal, the nymphs conjured up a storm, in which the huntsman lost his way. When on the verge of exhaustion he encountered a water sprite, who struck a rock with her wand and brought forth a stream of sparkling water. She then guided him out of the forest that he might proclaim to the world the beneficial qualities of the Carlsbad Spring."

The Plumber Intervenes.

THE ballet is in progress and Roland is spouting blank verse when the flow of the spring suddenly ceases, and Aladar claims the hand of the Princess. Then Nepomuk proudly explains the marvel—he has simply hired a plumber to stop the torrent for a few minutes.

The principal characters will be taken as follows: Princess Bozena, Miss Elsie Thiede; Prince Nepomuk, Jerome Daly; Prince Aladar, James Stevens; Annamirl, Eva Fallon; Baron Rudi, Arthur Gaery; Roland, Frank Moulan; Ursula, Lorna Doone Jackson; Spaetling, William J. McCarthy; Mr. Lomax, who is trying to get thin, Ralph Nicchols; and Mrs. Skinner, who is trying to get stout, George Sweet. Several members of the chorus have parts—Miss Fannie Block, as Evakati; Peter Quinn, as Col. Boone, who objects to the water cure; and Guy Burgess, Joseph Bonelli and Charles Page, as creditors. In the ballet, Miss Margaret Moore plays the huntsman and Miss Fallon the "rabbit."

The concluding performance of "The Geisha" will be given tonight. Next week the management will undertake a famous operetta, "The Queen's Lace Handkerchief," by Johann Strauss II, notable not only for his stage pieces, but for his waltzes, including "The Beautiful Blue Danube," "Vienna Blood," "Artist's Life," and many others.

Hot Summer Sun Trying On the Complexion

How to Protect Your Skin and Bring Roses to Your Cheeks

New York.—Exposure to sun, dust, and wind has a very bad effect upon the skin and complexion. There is a way to overcome this. "It is my own discovery and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results," says Mae Edna Wilder when her friends ask her about her wonderful complexion and the improved appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing if you follow my advice," she says. "I feel it my duty to tell every girl and woman what this wonderful prescription did for me.

"Just think of it, all this change in a single night. I never tire of telling others just what brought about such remarkable results. Here is the identical prescription that removed every defect from my face, neck, hands and arms. Until you try it you can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription which you can prepare at your own home is as follows:

"Go to any grocery store and get ten cents worth of ordinary oatmeal and from any toilet counter a bottle of derwillo. Follow the directions for using oatmeal as given in every package of derwillo. If it is more convenient, you can use Derwillo-Oatmeal Soap instead of oatmeal.

"The first application of derwillo will astonish you. It makes the skin appear transparent, smooth and velvety, giving anyone a youthful appearance.

"I especially recommend this method for a dark sallow skin, shiny nose, tan, coarse pores, rough skin, ruddiness, wrinkles and in fact every blemish the face, hands and arms are heir to."

If your neck or chest is discolored from exposure, apply this combination and the objectionable defect will disappear as if by magic. It is absolutely harmless and will not produce or stimulate a growth of hair.

No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this oatmeal-derwillo combination will work a wonderful transformation.

Over a million girls and women are now using it in preference to face powder and other beautifiers. This is what two well known actresses say about it:

Dorothy Dalton, the beautiful actress, says: "The first application of this wonderful derwillo-oatmeal combination will astonish you. It imparts instant beauty to the skin and makes a rosy-white complexion everyone will talk about. It protects my skin in all kinds of weather. That's why I prefer it to all other preparations and am never without it."

Viola Dana, the well known star, writes: "I am often asked how I keep my complexion so fresh looking. It's a simple process for anyone to have a smooth, velvety, rosy-white, girlish complexion if she will use Liska cold cream to cleanse the skin and that well known toilet preparation, derwillo, to beautify it. I recommend these preparations to all my personal friends and they are just as enthusiastic over them as I am."

Note: To get the best effect be sure to follow the complete directions contained in every package of Derwillo. Druggists and department stores guarantee that there will be a noticeable improvement after the first application or they will refund the money. It is sold in this city under a money refund guarantee by department stores and all druggists including Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Johnson Bros. and the Enderle Drug Co.

MANY OLD RECORDS LOST IN FOUR COURTS DESTRUCTION

Documents Dating From Thirteenth Century and Wills From 1536 Were Without Copies.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 8.—Some conception of the confusion which may be expected to result from the destruction of the Four Courts in Dublin was given by Colonial Secretary Churchill when he told the House of Commons the other day that the Courts held legal, ecclesiastical testamentary documents dating from the latter part of the thirteenth century and some of earlier date, all wills from 1536 to 1899 and some later ones, the census returns from 1821 to 1851, and a large number of parish registers recording births, marriages and deaths.

Scarcely any duplicates exist, except some will books and the district probate registry since 1858. Churchill was unable to say whether any of the records escaped destruction in the explosions and fire which attended the capture of the place by the Free State forces.

SELF-TAUGHT COMPOSER AT 16 GIVEN OVATION AT PRAGUE

Emil Nemecek One of Season's Sensations—Critics Predict Great Future for Him.

PRAGUE, July 8.—One of the season's sensations was the first performance of a one-act opera, "The Queen's Error," by Emil Nemecek, 16-year-old composer, at the Czech National Theater. An astonishing thing about the lad's triumph is that he was absolutely self-taught in music. Critics predict for him a great future.

Trembling with excitement, the slight youth appeared at least a dozen times before the footlights to receive the public's ovation. Nemecek had previously written an opera in several acts, which has not been performed. It is based on a novel by Jirasek, the leading Czech writer.

Nemecek's music follows in the footsteps of Smetana and Fiebich, and the unschooled writer is betrayed only by certain exaggerations in instrumentation and coloring. Startling is the intuitive certainty with which he sets forth emotions he could never have experienced himself.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

Hunter-Frank Tuttle production, "Second Fiddle," is now undergoing its final editing, and plans are under way for the third, "The Lap of Luxury," from a story by Mr. Tuttle and Townsend Martin. * * * Laurette Taylor is in Hollywood working in "Peg o' My Heart," under the direction of King Vidor. * * * Maurice Tourneur, who went to England to direct the exterior scenes of "The Christian," returned last week with the work done. * * * To settle all disputes, and correct errors, it is officially announced that Marcus Loew pronounces his last name to rhyme with show. * * * Paramount will produce a screen version of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Ebb Tide," with George Melford directing a cast headed by Lila Lee, James Kirkwood, Raymond Hatton and George Fawcett.

They are busy at the Fairbanks-Pickford studio, it is reported, with Douglas Fairbanks halfway through his "Robin Hood" and Mary Pickford back from location work in "Tess of the Storm Country." Incidentally, the indications are that "Robin Hood" is the most ambitious film Mr. Fairbanks has ever attempted. He has built a Norman Castle, they say, that is imposing, even for California's filmland, and Nottingham is being built beside it on the lot.

The Goldwyn-Erlanger "Ben-Hur" will go into production as soon as the necessary preliminaries can be arranged, it is said. Work on the scenario will be begun at once, and the selection of a director and cast will proceed as rapidly as the various individuals concerned can agree on them. According to present plans, the personnel of the production will be American, but the exterior scenes will be made in Italy and Palestine.

The screen version of Balzac's "The Duchess of Langeais," in which Norma Talmadge is to appear, will come out as "The Eternal Flame." * * * Miss Talmadge's next work will be on Robert Hichens' "The Voice From the Minaret," under the direction of Frank Lloyd. * * * Mary Carr's next picture for William Fox will be "The Custard Cup. * * * Madge Kennedy is now at work on an adaptation of "Dear Me," but "this revue-like title," says the announcement, will be changed before the picture comes out. * * * "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" will be Miss Kennedy's next. * * * Ann Forest has been engaged for the part of Nona in "If Winter Comes." * * * George Arliss finished work in "The Silent Voice" before he sailed for Europe recently. * * * Rudolph Valentino and Wanda Hawley head the cast of Paramount's "The Young Rajah," which Philip Rosen is directing. * * * Virginia Brown Faire will be Guy Bates Post's leading woman in Richard Walton Tully's production of "Omar, the Tentmaker."

Recent bulletins of the National Motion Picture League recommend as family films, with certain cuts specified, "The Road to London," with Bryant Washburn (Associated Producers); "Nanook of the North," by Robert J. Flaherty (Pathe); "Our Leading Citizen," with Thomas Meighan (Paramount); "The Glory of Clementina," with Pauline Frederick (Film Booking Offices); "Watch Your Step," with Cullen Landis (Goldwyn); "A Case of Identity," English-made Sherlock Holmes story (Educational); "Horse Tears," Century Comedy (Universal); "Tips," Century Comedy (Universal); "Circus Days" (Educational); "The Cat and the Pig," based on an Aesop fable (Pathe); "Hindu Temple Dance," a music film; "The Maverick," a Kineto picture; "Screen Snapshots," 2 and 25 (Federated).

The North American Film Co. of Chicago has started the production of a series of one and two reel pictures designed, says the announcement, "to perpetuate the legends, stories and intimate historical events appertaining to the principal cities, towns and sections of the United States." The undertaking will require two years and approximately $2,000,000, it is added.

The motion picture editor of the London Post is wondering why, if prohibition has becom the law of the land in these more or less United States, the American film characters have not stopped drinking. He says:

"It is a curious reflection on the operation of the prohibition laws in America, that up to the present they have done nothing to lessen the amount of drinking in which the characters in film plays are made to indulge.

"It might be imagined that when the action of a film, supposed to represent the national life, is implied as passing today, that the question and influence of prohibition would have been treated more frequently, either seriously or as a joke. But no American film as yet has indicated that there has been any change. The saloons in the Wild West still inflame the "cow-persons'" minds with firewater, and the gentility of the superb New York mansion is increased in the ratio of the dignity of the cocktail mixer."

Maybe it's the unfaltering proclivity of the movies to idealize life that's responsible.

The Mission Film Corporation, with an aim, boasts or confesses the announcement, "oddly in sympathy with the Board of Censorship," has been organized in California. C. H. Geldert is the president and also the author and director of the first story to be pictured, "Science—or God?"

Elaine Hammerstein will have both Niles Welch and Mahlon Hamilton as her leading men in "Under Oaths."

Be Careful What You Wash Your Child's Hair With

If you want to keep your child's hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water, then moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

Sparkling Comedy by Tennyson's Descendant

LONDON, July 8.

FOR all her air of childish innocence, Miss Dinah Partlett—in Miss F. Tennyson Jesse's "Quarantine," at the Comedy Theater—is a good deal of a minx. It was all very well pretending to herself that by taking her married cousin's place in a steamer elopement she was saving Pamela and Tony Blunt from one another; but she had to confess in the end that her real motive was that she had fallen badly in love with Tony herself and wanted a few perfect days to remember him by.

Unfortunately, she had not reckoned with the quarantine laws; still less had she reckoned with the little isolation bungalow to which she and Tony, as the only honeymoon couple on the S. S. Angostura, were assigned. Her few perfect days lengthened out into 12 most distressing ones; for Tony was in no mood to let her down lightly, and kept up the married couple fiction with enthusiasm.

Funny Steamer Types.

IT was all highly improbable, but highly amusing, and it all came right in the end; in fact, the disgruntled and dispossessed Pamela gave Tony and Dinah the last push into each other's arms by her last "catty" remark, which was made with quite other intentions.

About the best things in Miss Jesse's unpretentious and gay little piece are her steamer types. The two elderly and gossipy ladies, their menfolk, the cheery ship's doctor, all show observation and a pleasantly malicious humor.

The silent passenger, too, is a stroke of real cleverness. He is a hopeless little man with a rug, with a perfectly infallible knack for appearing at the wrong moment. This knack—which really amounts to genius—he preserves intact even after he has got back on to dry land, and thereby enables Miss Tennyson Jesse to achieve a humorous last curtain when an ordinary sentimental one seemed inevitable. The playwright is a granddaughter of the poet Tennyson.

Play by Indian Author.

A MODERN Indian play, written by a native and performed by a company of Indian players, was a novelty offered the other afternoon at the Duke of York's. The work, entitled "The Goddess," is by Niranjan Pal, who is said to have a distinct sense for stage effect, handling

How the Process of Ironization Makes Yeast Doubly Effective

While Science admits that yeast is of wonderful value in building flesh, clearing the skin, and increasing energy, it is found that yeast alone is not enough to bring 100 per cent results. For while yeast contains certain vital elements—lacking in diet, yet essential to health—experiments prove that some other agent is needed in order to quickly CONVERT these important yeast elements into new firm tissue, energy and health.

Everyone knows the great value of iron in changing our food into living cells. So working on this problem, our scientists finally discovered the amazing process of ironization—the scientific process which enables you to derive from yeast ALL of the wonderful benefits it holds for you.

The Only Yeast that is Genuinely Ironized

This remarkable process of ironization is embodied ONLY in IRONIZED YEAST, the one scientifically correct yeast treatment. IRONIZED YEAST is superior, therefore it is widely imitated. You are cautioned against accepting cheap inferior imitations, which in most cases are merely mixtures of ordinary yeast and iron. Always insist upon the genuine IRONIZED YEAST. It is the only way you can be sure of getting the best.

SPARKLING COMEDY BY TENNYSON'S DESCENDANT

the various situations firmly. The story is interesting and might readily be converted into a grand opera libretto.

Ram Das, a Brahmin priest, has broken away from the faith, but still cunningly plots to supplant the vain and foolish high priest, Abhiram. The country is suffering from a long drouth and famine, and the people are on the brink of rebellion, in the belief that the Great Mother, the goddess Kali, is deaf to their prayers. Abhiram, instigated by Ram Das, boldly declares that as a further sign of her displeasure the goddess has slain all the animals in the land, and that the curse can be averted only by the sacrifice of a lamb.

One lamb remains alive; it belongs to Maya, a beggar girl, who loves and is loved by Ram Das. She defies the high priest and calls down upon him the vengeance of heaven, whereupon he is struck dead by lightning. Ram Das compels Maya to assume the robes of the goddess, and she is thus accepted by the populace. In remorse and horror over the sacrilege, she takes poison. The play offers ample scope for acting of a highly emotional and pathetic character. Four English characters appear in a prologue and epilogue.

A London Boudoir Comedy.

AFTER all the rumored trouble with the Lord Chamberlain about the bedroom scene, the bed is still there, in Monckton Hoffe's "Pomp and Circumstance," at the Duke of York's. And it remains, at any rate, during the progress of the play, a spotlessly innocent bed. Indeed, it might just as well have been a boot rack or a shaving glass.

Why have a bed there at all? Well, it was to be (always in perfect innocence) circumstantial evidence in a divorce fraud. Mrs. Doris Pageant had declared herself tired of Mr. Angelo Pageant, and to prefer Mr. Wilfred Inkstanley. Then let us arrange a divorce, said Mr. Pageant, but I insist, such is my delicacy, that the lady with whom I compromise myself shall be none other than my own wife. The fraud will be easy, for the Albert Hall is just around the corner, and fancy balls are of nightly occurrence.

Enter a Silly Maiden.

SO SAID, so done. But at the critical moment there is a "snag." A silly maiden, in love with Mr. Pageant, has hidden herself in the room before the entrance of the guilty, or rather pseudo-guilty, couple. Thus the friends in collusion, summoned to "detect" the couple, detect another presence that no one, not even Mr. Pageant, can explain.

Happily, Mrs. Pageant suffers a revulsion of feeling at the right moment, and comes out strong. She invents a story to save the reputation of the silly maiden, sends Mr. Inkstanley to the rightabout, and stays behind with Mr. Pageant. We are left to suppose that the bed will be slept in by its legitimate occupants, and that all henceforth will be well. The play was received with high favor.

Will Litigation Announced.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. — Illinois Wesleyan College here may lose a bequest of $125,000 made by the late B. F. Staymates of Clinton. Relatives ignored in the will have signified their intention of filing suit to set aside the will on the ground that the testator was of unsound mind.

Mr. R. Ellsworth Tells How Cuticura Healed His Scalp

"My trouble began with a sore and itchy scalp and my scalp was covered with red spots which caused restlessness and sleeplessness. Every time I washed my head it hurt terribly. My scalp was covered with dandruff. Then pimples appeared all over my face, and they caused itching, burning and disfigurement.

"I used every thing I could get to cure me, but the trouble grew worse all the time. I was advised to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Ointment, when I was healed." (Signed) Ralph Ellsworth, 112 W. 12th St., Joplin, Mo.

Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Talcum are all you need for every-day toilet and nursery purposes.

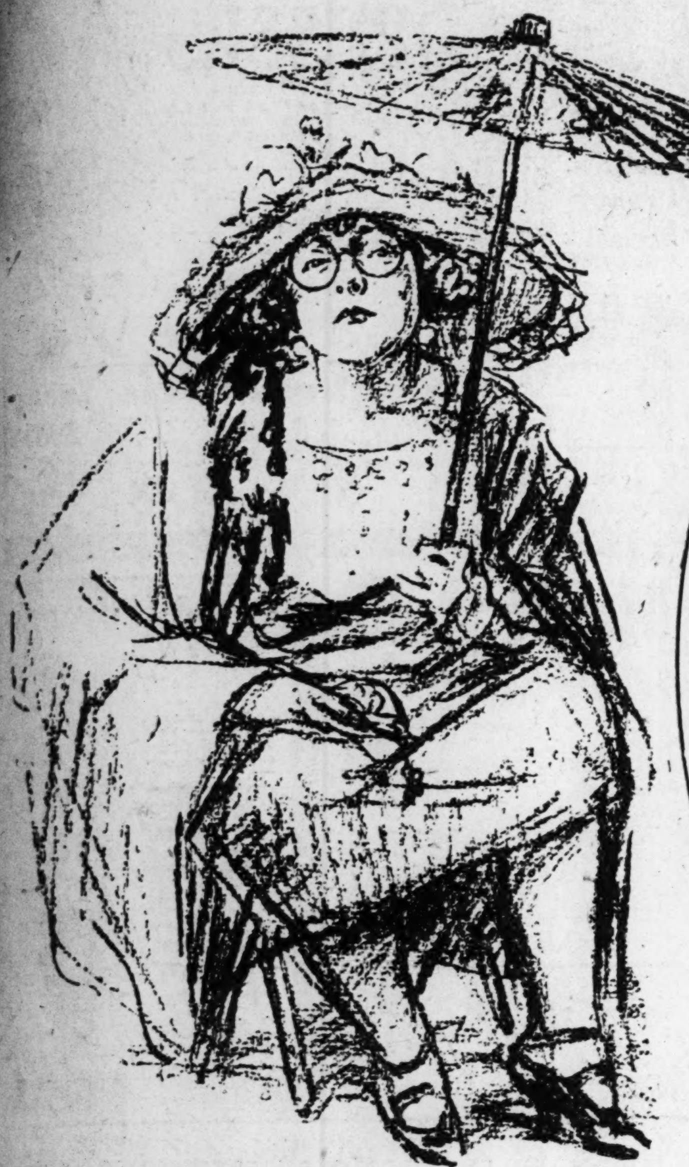
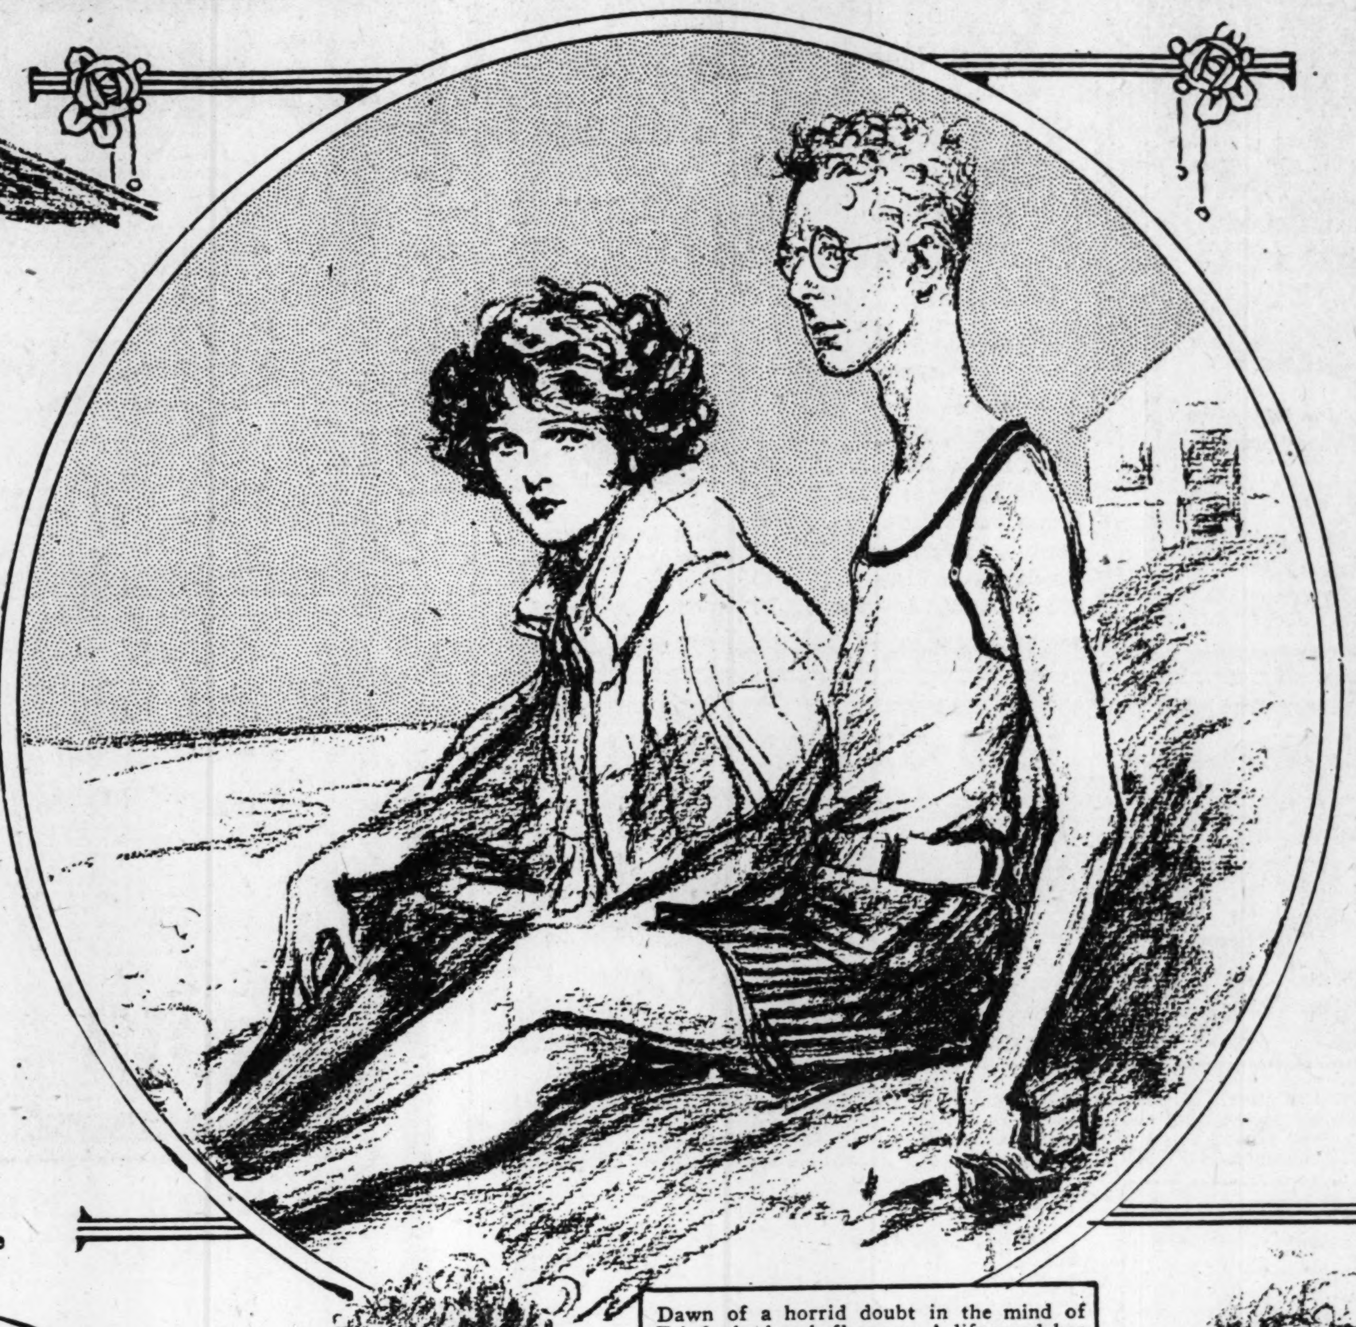
BEAUTY AND THE BEACH

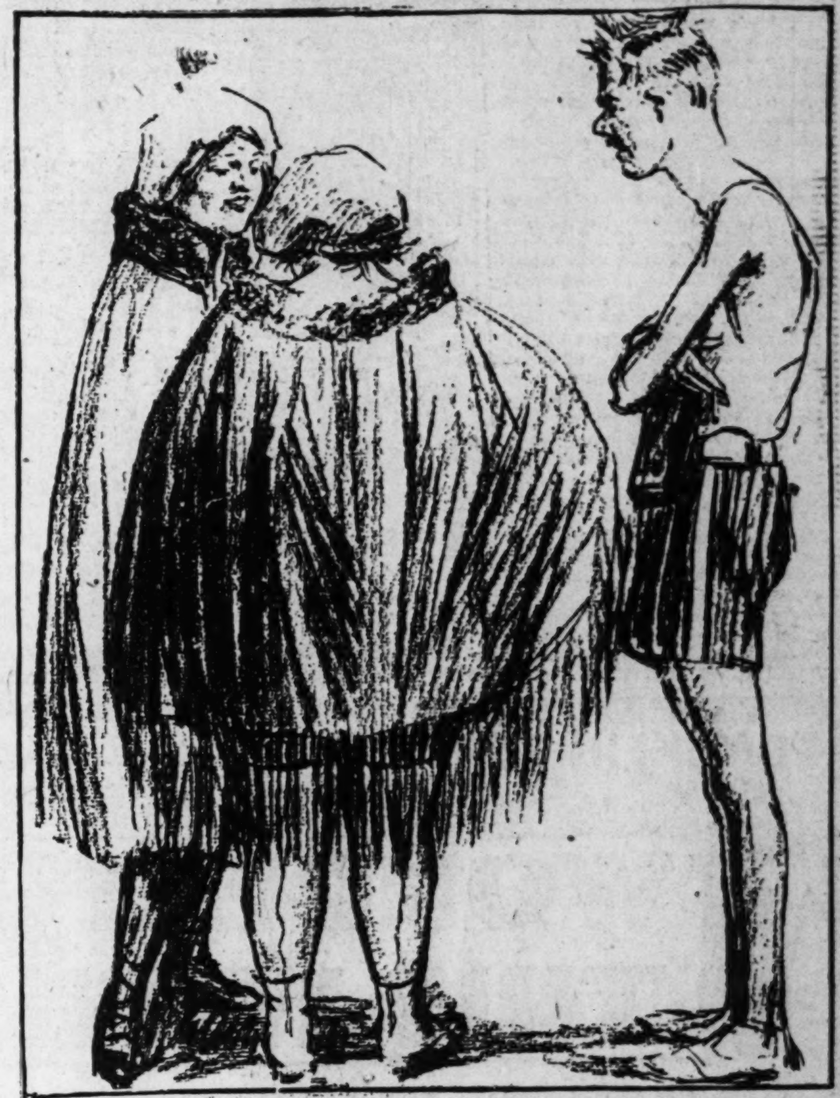
By W. E. Hill



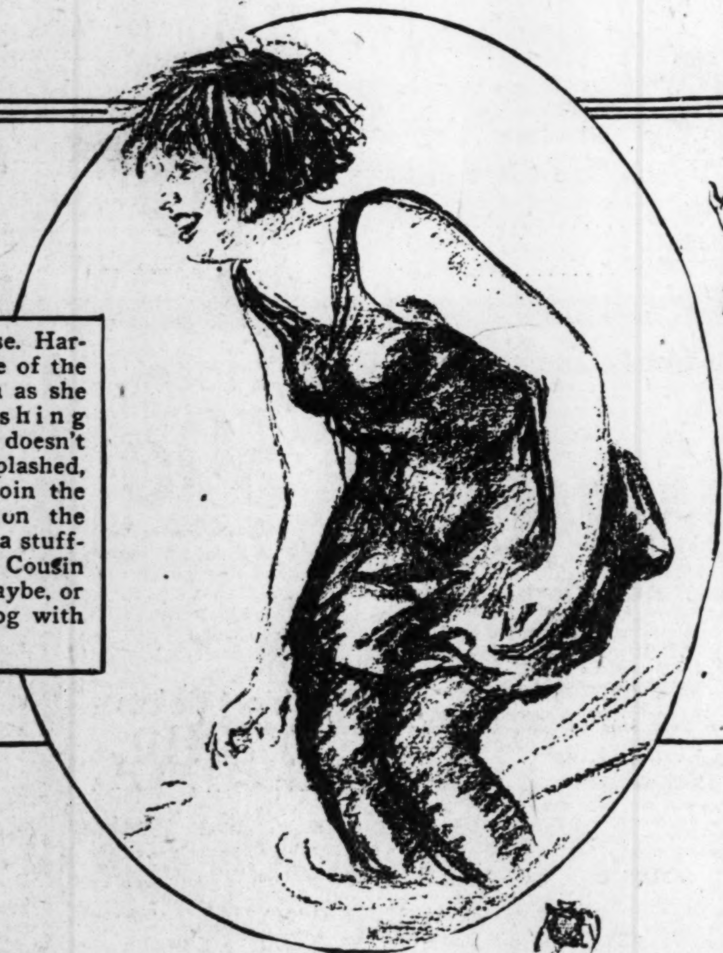
Just a beautiful beach mamma, watching to see that little Bently doesn't go too near the wild, wild waves.



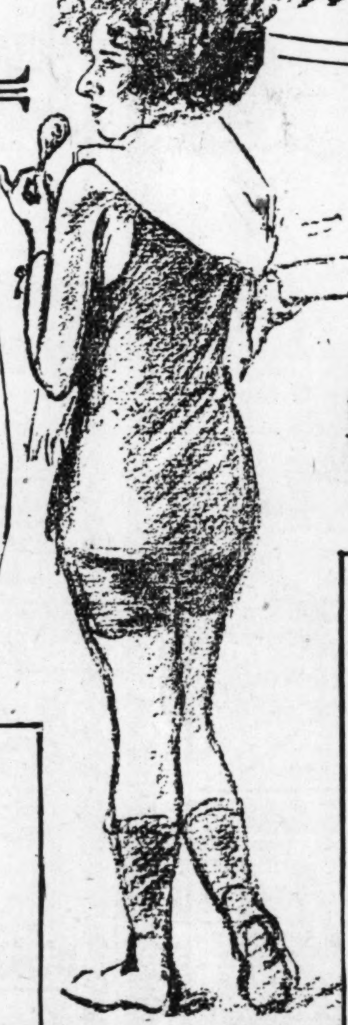
Dawn of a horrid doubt in the mind of Ethel, the beach flapper. A lifeguard has just come along, and Ethel is wondering if brains are everything after all. Her young man is awfully good and awfully kind, and all that—but, oh, what a gorgeous shape (we quote Ethel's thoughts) that lifeguard has!



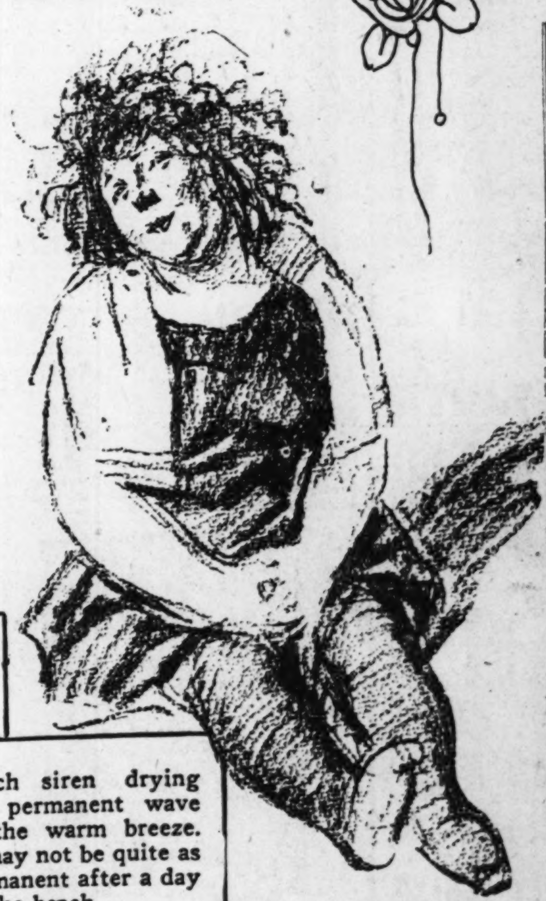
Something pretty nifty in fringe for beach wear.



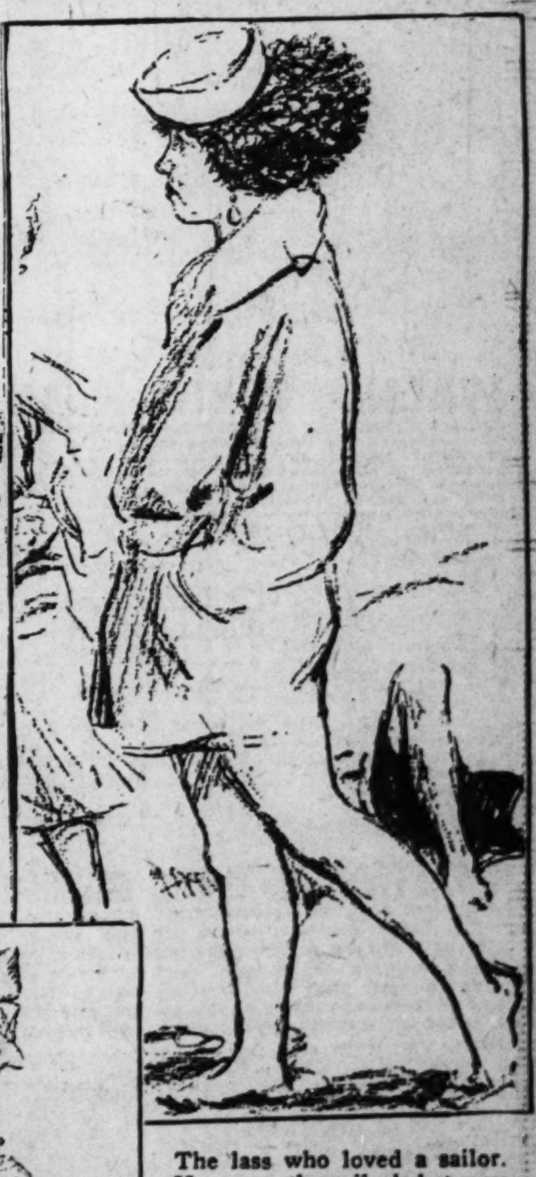
The little tease. Harriet is just one of the boys. As soon as she finishes splashing someone who doesn't want to be splashed, Harriet will join the picnic party on the beach and put a stuffed egg down Cousin May's neck, maybe, or play at leapfrog with Uncle Arthur



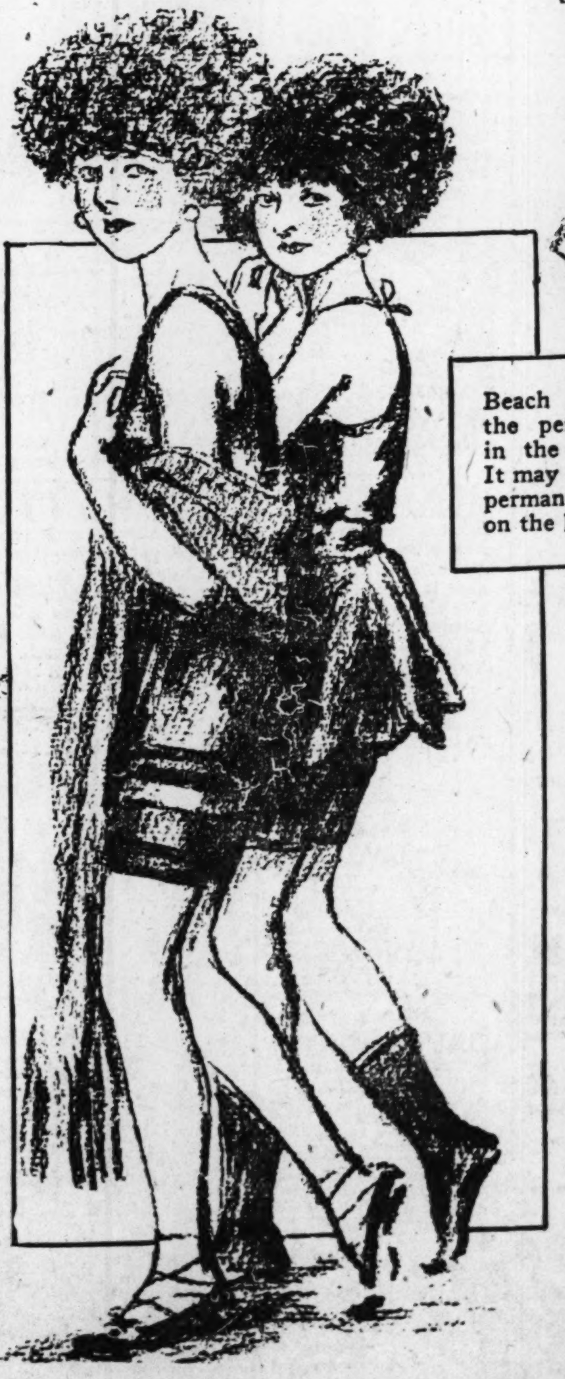
The picnic lunch. It takes a lot of finesse to nibble the leg of a fried chicken as daintily as Caddy is doing, and she isn't losing a bit of her magnetism with the boys while so doing.



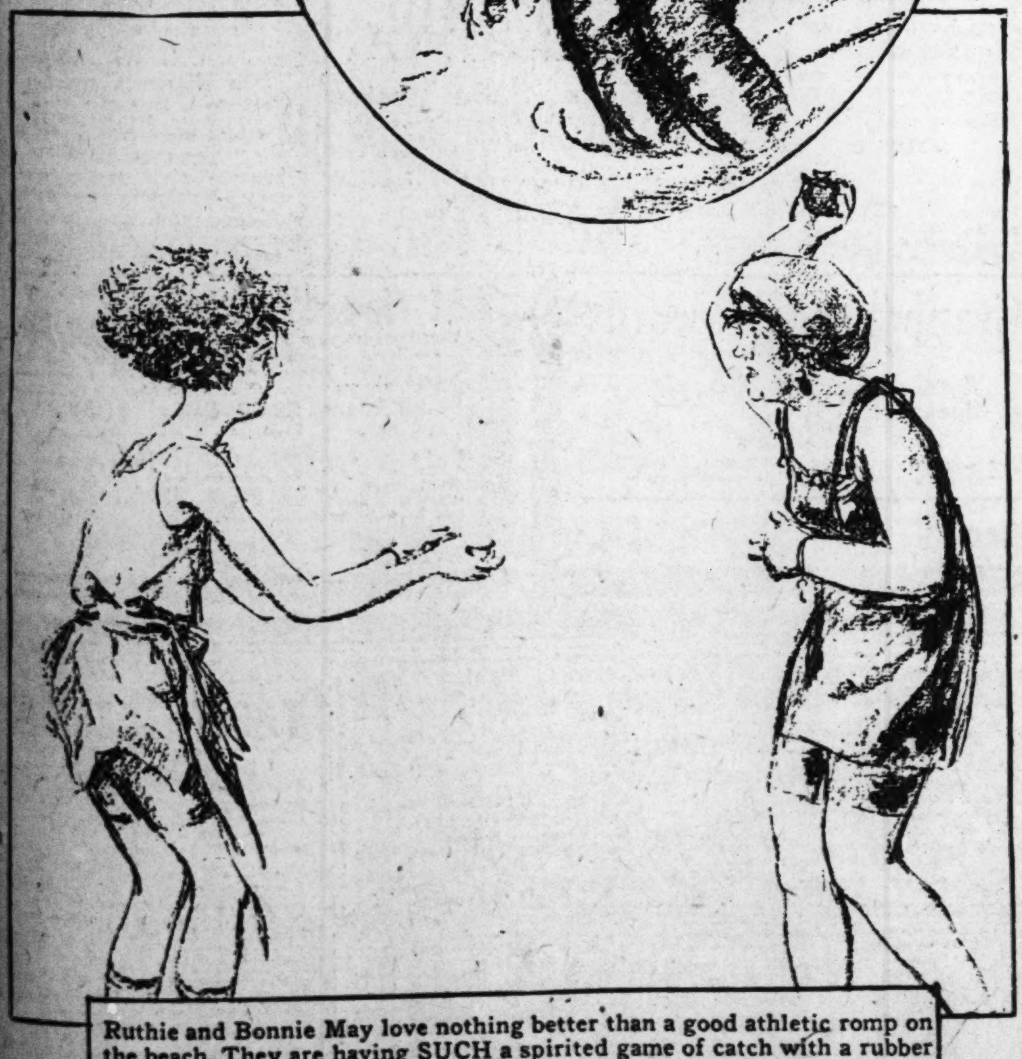
Beach siren drying the permanent wave in the warm breeze. It may not be quite as permanent after a day on the beach.



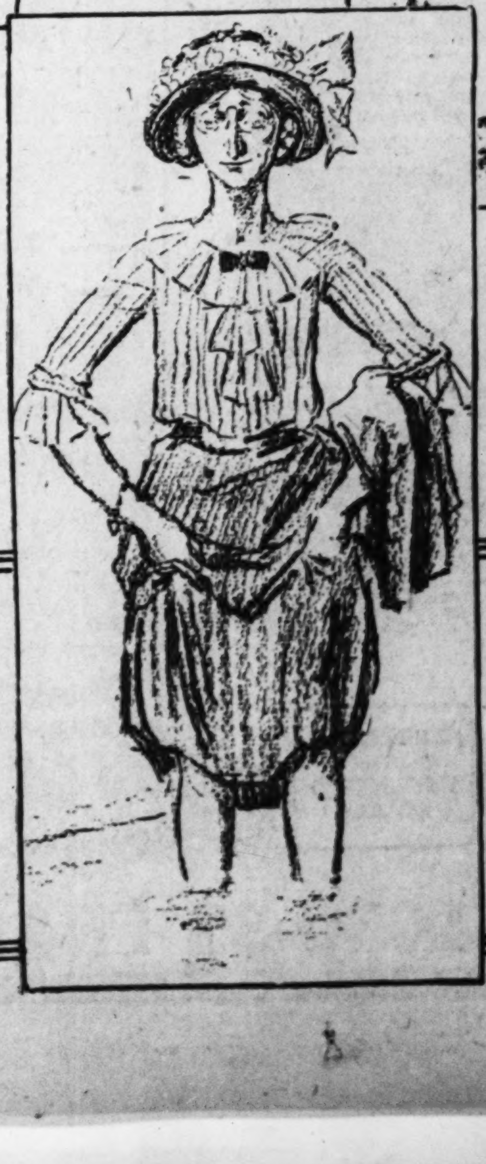
The lass who loved a sailor. However, the sailor's hat may have been a present from a girl friend. You never can tell.



Two modest and retiring beach flappers, with everything on but placards labeled "Follow Me."



Ruthie and Bonnie May love nothing better than a good athletic romp on the beach. They are having SUCH a spirited game of catch with a rubber ball. Ruthie is pretending she is Ken Williams and Bonnie May is making believe she is George Sisler, so you can easily see how much in earnest they are.



Back to normalcy is Jessie May's motto. Jessie May is having just as much fun as any of those awful beach flappers who show everything they have to show—the brazen monkeys!

HYDE TO PITCH FIRST BALL IN BENEFIT GAME

Contest Between Cardinals and Boston Braves and Athletic Carnival, July 19.

Gov. Hyde has accepted an invitation to pitch the first ball, and Mayor Kiel will catch it, in the baseball game between the Cardinals and the Boston Braves on July 19, when the annual benefit baseball game and carnival of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis will be held at Sportsman's Park. Archbishop Glennon has been invited to present cups to the winners of the various athletic events of the day.

The carnival will open with a preliminary game between the firemen of St. Louis and the letter carriers, at 1:30 p. m., and Postmaster Louis Alt will pitch and Fire Chief Panzer will catch the first ball in that game.

Novelties on Program.

A number of novelties have been introduced into the program this year by J. F. Oberwinder, general chairman of the committee in charge of the benefit. One is the shuttle relay race for girls which will take place in the outfield. The girls will enter in teams of six and run a shuttle race, relaying each other on each lap. So far, 20 teams are entered in this event.

Hotels, restaurants and clubs are assisting in advertising the benefit by distributing little baseball "cut-outs," carrying announcements of the game.

The committee in charge of the shuttle race for girls comprises Fred Voss, assistant director of Municipal Playgrounds; A. E. Kindervater, superintendent of physical education in the pblic schools; G. Heineman, director, Yeatman High School play grounds; Grace McHenry, swimming director, Tower Grove Turnverein; Sidora Murphy, girls' work secretary, Y. W. C. A., and Mary Hammerstein, director public school play grounds.

300 Boys in Marathon Race.

More than 300 St. Louis school boys are entered in the junior marathon which is to be run on the same day and finished at Sportsman's Park. Verne R. C. Lacy is chairman of the committee in charge of this event and 22 athletic and educational organizations of boys of St. Louis and St. Louis County are actively behind the promotion of the run.

Merchants and manufacturers have contributed many articles to be given away to purchasers of souvenir programs. The programs will be sold on the grounds by women and girls. The Cardinal's baseball team has, as in former years, presented an automobile to the Tuberculosis Society, which will be given away.

The admission tickets for the benefit have been placed on sale at 1002 Olive street, where presents also are on display. The entire proceeds will go to the Tuberculosis Society to finance its fight against tuberculosis in this city and county.

Grocer Thankful

"I had been sick nearly 20 years with stomach trouble and was slowly starving to death as everything I ate caused terrible gas and pain and my food did not digest. I was reduced to 115 pounds. A friend advised me to take Mayr's Wonderful Remedy about 4 months ago, which I did and now weigh 151 lbs., and can eat anything. I am very thankful for Mayr's Wonderful Remedy." It removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. STREET USE RESTRICTION

Ordinance Is Being Drawn to Limit Traffic on Some Thoroughfares.

An ordinance to restrict the use of a number of important thoroughfares in residential districts by trucks and delivery wagons is being prepared by Director of Streets and Sewers Fisk. It would allow automobiles and horse-drawn vehicles of this classification to use the restricted streets only between adjacent intersections. The object is to provide better facilities for passenger traffic, reduce danger and save the pavement.

Director Fisk has not decided on the streets to be restricted, but these will probably include Lindell and West Pine boulevards, and Waterman avenue between DeBaliviere avenue and Skinker road, and may include Washington boulevard, west of Grand boulevard. There will also be some restricted streets in North St. Louis.

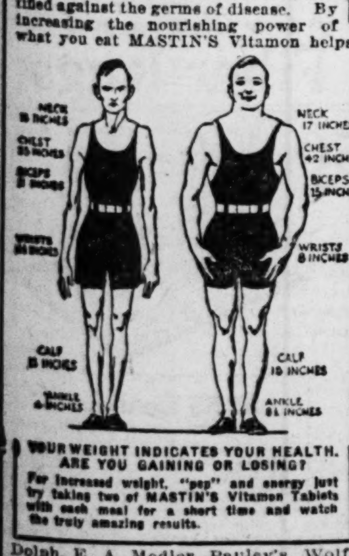
Do You Chafe?
Peterson's Ointment

To the multitude of friends who have used Peterson's ointment for eczema, itching skin and scalp, piles, ulcers and old sores of long standing, Peterson says, "Tell your friends that Peterson's Ointment will stop chafing in two minutes." All druggists, 35c, 60c, $1.00, $2.50, $5.00. Judge & Dolph, Enderle Drug Co. and Wolff-Wilson will supply you.



Take Mastin's Vitamon To Build "Stay-There" Flesh and Clear Skin

Easy and Economical To Take—Results Quick

Thin run-down folks should find this simple test well worth trying: First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Next take MASTIN'S Vitamon—two tablets with every meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week and continue taking MASTIN'S Vitamon regularly until you are satisfied with your gain in weight, "pep," energy and improved appearance. MASTIN'S Vitamon Tablets contain highly concentrated yeast-vitamines as well as the two other still more important vitamines (Fat Soluble A and Water Soluble C) combined with true organic iron and the necessary lime salts all of which Science says your body must have to keep you strong, vigorous, well-formed and fortified against the germs of disease. By increasing the nourishing power of what you eat MASTIN'S Vitamon helps supply just what your body needs to feed the shrunken tissues, strengthen internal organs, clear the skin and renew shattered nerve force without upsetting the stomach or causing gas. Pimples, boils and skin eruptions seem to vanish as if by magic under its healthful, purifying influence. But it is not only a question of how much better you look and feel, or what your friends say and think—the scales and tape measure will tell their own story. A two weeks' test will surprise you.

Of what use are fine features with an ugly, mottled skin, flabby flesh, sunken cheeks, pouches under the eyes, or a careworn, sickly-looking face? MASTIN'S Vitamon Tablets quickly help to clear your skin, put firm, healthy flesh on your bones, and increase your nerve force and power. Try them yourself and see.

YOUR WEIGHT INDICATES YOUR HEALTH. ARE YOU GAINING OR LOSING?
For increased weight, "pep" and energy just try taking two of MASTIN'S Vitamon Tablets with each meal for a short time and watch the truly amazing results.

WARNING! Your safety and protection depend upon getting MASTIN'S Vitamon Tablets—if it isn't MASTIN'S it isn't the Original and Genuine VITAMON—the World's Standard—now used by millions and recommended by doctors. Beware of imitations, cheap substitutes or so-called "yeast vitamine tablets." Insist upon MASTIN'S. At all good druggists, such as all Enderle Drug Stores, Johnson Bros., Judge & Dolph, E A. Medler, Pauley's, Wolff-Wilson Huger'ss.

Paderewski Plays
His "Minuet Antique"

ALL the fine delicate shadings of expression; the nuances; the phrasing; the dynamics and even the pedaling of the great artist are so faithfully retained, that the original beauty and artistry of his performance are heard again when this selection is played on

The REPRODUCING APOLLO PIANO
Trade Mark Registered

To hear this instrument is to concede that it represents a triumph of expression control. It reproduces with exactitude, the daintiest pianissimo, and all the finer shadings of expression. It is hard to believe that any instrument can be so human in its performance.

Among the noted pianists whose recorded music is played by the Reproducing Apollo, are: Paderewski, Hoffman, Leschetiz, Godowsky, Gabrilowitsch, Ganz, Busoni, Bauer, Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler, and many others.

Not only will it bring to the home the master's interpretation of the great music of the world, but also artistic renditions of the humbler music; old familiar melodies; loved folk songs and hymns as well as the popular melodies of the day played by well-known pianists.

It will be a pleasure for us to show what the reproducing Apollo will do. This demonstration will, of course, be without obligation.

Going away?

VACATION time is here! The Summer exodus is on! All America, young and old, is off to the lakes, the mountains or the sea.

No matter how far you journey you will find a Bell Telephone at the other end. Don't overlook the fact that you can pass back to those at home a goodly amount of pleasure by keeping in touch with them over long distance.

They will enjoy frequent reports of your pleasurable adventures. By taking advantage of the reduced "evening" and "night" rates on station-to-station calls you can minimize the cost. After 8:30 P. M. such calls cost about half the day rate, after midnight about one-fourth. A midnight station-to-station call from St. Louis to Atlantic City, for instance, costs but $1.40.

JOVIALITY OF TAFT CAPTIVATES BRITONS

Genial Chief Justice Dines With King, Dances With Queen and Attends Christening.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 8.—Few Americans have ever had such a spontaneous greeting or such affectionate farewell from the British as Chief Justice Taft has just received. The genial ex-President of the United States captivated all hearts during his three weeks' stay here by his joviality, his kindliness and his unaffected manner.

The Britons, who are accustomed to regard their own public men in high places with something akin to awe, were frankly surprised to find him so modest, democratic and approachable, and Mrs. Taft came in for a large share of their admiration.

The Chief Justice surpassed his own White House record in speechmaking, banqueting and public receptions. During his 20 days here he was the guest of honor at 19 dinners, 17 luncheons and 31 receptions. He officiated at one christening, attended one golden wedding, dined with the King, danced with the Queen, met all of official England and thousands of other people and was made an honorary member of the British bench and bar.

Oxford, Cambridge and Aberdeen honored him with degrees, which, with his American honors, gave him the total of 16 titles. In the minds of Englishmen he has been one of the most successful unofficial Ambassadors from the United States in the present generation.

Lady Beetles to Fight Fruit Pests.

AUSTIN, Tex., July 8.—The State Department of Agriculture has received a shipment of 200 Australian lady beetles or vedalias, insects to be used in combating the plant disease known as "cottony cushion scales." They will be distributed in the fruit-growing districts of the State, it was said. The plants attacked by the scales are oranges and other citrus fruits.

FRENCH FRANCS AT LOWEST OF YEAR, 7.81c, ON GERMAN SITUATION

MARKETS REFLECT UNCERTAINTIES OF THE SEASON

Sharp Contrast Evident Between American and European Industrial Conditions and Trade Prospects—Outlook for Autumn.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"With our domestic markets still reflecting the uncertainties of the season, a sharp contrast is evident between American and European industrial conditions and trade prospects. Despite our wavering markets, the industrial situation here is still encouraging. Steel production was at a high level, and the latest car loading figures have set a new high for the year. Failures continue to decline and commodity prices are firm. The menace involved in the railroad strike plainly is less serious rather than more so, and the prospects for a settlement of the coal strike for the coming month appear fairly good. There is no reason for doubting, in other words, that a further improvement in general business during the autoumn is probable.

"In Europe, on the other hand, a general revival is still blocked by the reparations impasse. Imperial observers have pointed out for some time that the German position, as present contituted, is impossible. The Bankers' Committee clearly indicated that an international loan to adjust the position is impracticable without a businesslike revision of the reparations schedule. France's veto on a free examination of the conditions essential to a successful loan, however, threw the whole German difficulty back into its vicious circle. As a result the mark has lost 50 per cent of its foreign value, the French franc has dropped a cent and a half, the uncertainty as to the domestic political situation in Germany has been greatly increased, and the prospects for better trade in Europe have been affected.

The German Situation.

"Just where the affair will end is a matter of conjecture. Reactionary elements in Germany may obtain the upper hand, although this seems rather improbable to the outside observer. These elements may, however, create a quite considerable disturbance. French leaders may, bowing to political exigencies, maintain an uncompromising attitude. On the other hand, the collapse of the mark and the pronounced weakness in the franc may impress these leaders with the necessity for a more reasonable attitude. There are signs, in fact, that events are shaping in this direction. Great Britain and the other allies may be relied on for renewed representations as to the importance of putting the reparations on a sound basis, and our own influence undoubtedly will be exerted to the same end. Quite possibly it may be necessary for Germanys' condition to become extremely bad before it can become better. The situation constitutes, however, a profound misfortune economically and a sad commentary on human management of great affairs.

"The effect on our own situation of a German collapse of a prolongation of European depression would be somewhat mixed. London observers infer that ease in money would be emphasized or extended. A similar effect might be produced here, although probably in a much milder form. We would lose, of course, from a diminuation of European purchasing power, but our domestic revival, which is furnishing the greater part of the motive power behind the improvement in business, doubtless would continue. One interesting aspect of the situation across the water which emphasizes the financial strength of England as compared with her continental neighbors is the reported shipment of £1,000,000 in gold as part of an operation to begin payment of interest on the British debt to our own Government. This step fits in aptly with sterling's comparative strength during the recent demoralization of the continental exchanges.

"Whether or not July is to see a further cheapening in money is still obscured by the holiday season. The reserve ratio of the Federal Reserve system is lower, but the event obviously is connected with the heavy demand for currency which normally occurs in connection with Independence day. The next week should go far towards determining the trend in this market."

Saturdays' Market Dull.

"The dullness characteristic of a warm Saturday morning in midsummer ruled on the Stock Exchange during the two-hour session. The volume of business done was small and traders were not inclined to attach particular importance to the trend of prices for this reason. There were moderate declines in some of the railroad shares and also in the speculative industrial issues which forced their way into new high ground during the week just past. The oil group showed somewhat pronounced weakness. A fair volume of trading was reported in the bond market with prices generally maintaining the firm aspect of the past few days.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House shows a further increase in surplus of $21,040,000, bringing the total up to $37,907,000. A decrease of $48,350,000 in loans and of $98,466,000 in demand deposits accompanied the increase in surplus. Time deposits rose $19,012,000. Cash increased $3,463,000.

"After a moderate rally in the late trading yesterday exchanges of the continental countries directly affected by reparations resumed their decline this morning. German marks sank to a new low of .18 of a cent as against a closing yesterday of .21⅝. The demoralization in marks brought a sympathetic fall in French and Belgian francs and Italian lire. French francs made a new low for the year at 7.81. Sterling, meanwhile, held fairly steady and at a late quotation of $4.44⅝ showed a loss of only ⅛ from the previous closing price. A feature of the market was the continued improvement in Czecho-Slovakian currency.

"Commodity markets also were hesitant as a result of uncertainties abroad. Although all cotton futures sold under yesterday's closing prices the quotations held up fairly well, all things considered. The forecast for unsettled weather and continued talk of boll weevil damage helped to offset other unfavorable factors. Wheat, on the other hand, showed less resistance to pressure. The July future found an early level around a cent below the previous close.

LONDON FINDS EVIDENCE OF GOLD MOVEMENT TO U.S. IN DEBT PAYMENT PLAN

STATES DRIFTING, BEST DESCRIBES EUROPE'S PLIGHT

London Reviewer Points Out That the Reparation Payments and International Debts Aggravate Situation at Every Point.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, July 8.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in today's financial review, says:

"Drifting, best describes political and economic condition in Europe inasmuch as the reparations payments and international debts aggravate the situation at eevr ypoint. The feeling increases that Great Britain should take the lead in unraveling the tangle by funding her debt to you and commencing service on the debt forthwith. For this reason, the evidences that gold shipments have started in this connection are gratifying.

German Moratorium Favored.

"The collapse of the mark undoubtedly is occasioning grave concern in France and may conceivably lead to further modification of the reparation arrangements already made. However, much discretion is left with the Reparations Commission, and that body, according to prevalent opinion, increasingly favors not curtailment of the total demands, but considerable leniency as regards time. Well informed and prudent advisers are suggesting that the allies should give a fairly long moratorium strictly conditional on Germany's effecting necessary fiscal and currency reforms. It is impossible for Europe to recover its status with so many European countries hopelessly inflated and completely rudderless as regards guidance and control by strong state banks. At the present juncture internal inflation in these countries is producing almost as many ill effects as though the war itself were still continuing.

"If the international trade depression continues it is considered that no country ultimately will be more adversely affected than yours. The danger is that profits arising from recent prosperity will tend to stimulate mere speculative activities, while should the rise in investment securities be overdone producing an unduly low interest yield it is sure to involve an overflow into speculative channels. If our bank rate falls to 3 per cent next week it is doubtful whether the private banks will follow suit with a reduction in depositors. In this the effect of the decline might be short-lived and even anticipations would then turn toward the next change being upward.

Outlook for Austria.

"Although attention is focussed on the German mark with much fear of disastrous political and social consequences the Austrian situation also commands attention. There is some comment to the effect that no apparent progress is yet reported in the possible loan by American and English interests. Trade moves slowly, but with so many European countries crippled it is wonderful that the position is not worse."

Wall Street News and Comment
—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The German request to the Reparations Commission for a moratorium acknowledging the inability to meet the next installment of the indemnity did not come at all unexpectedly. It had been clearly enough foreshadowed for a fortnight past in the steady decline in the German mark and in the heavy selling of French francs. Nevertheless, the announcement occurring toward the end of Wall street's business day had its effect upon all the markets.

German marks sank to a new low of .18 cent. Francs broke to 7.80¼c as against 7.98c where they left off Friday, 9.15c where they were just before the abandonment of the German loan project and 9.37c the high of the year reached in April. French Government securities were more sensitive than on any day so far. The 8-per-cent external loan listed in New York went down to 101, against Friday's close of 102¾.

The German troubles not previously much noticed in the security market became the overshadowing factor today. Stocks closed quite weak after a decline which set in soon after the opening and kept on through the remainder of the two-hour session.

The selling today was not urgent, but, with the withdrawal of professional support and no outside public to help out, it had a considerable effect on prices. The decline was particularly sharp in the last hour, when the leaders of the list fell away anywhere from a point to 3 points from the Friday's close. Railway shares were equally affected, with the industrials. The whole explanation for the swift reaction lay in the desire of the trading element to be clear of the market over Sunday on the chance that there might be unfavorable news from Germany by Monday morning. But the ease with which stocks went down showed how entirely professional operations on the buying side had been earlier in the week.

The Bond Market.

The feature of today's bond market was the decline of the French Government 8s to around 101 from their final price of 102¾ on the preceding day. This was directly due to the continued weakness of French exchange and the general apprehension over the German financial situation. French 7½s held their ground. The rest of the foreign external group also felt the effect of the lower rates in the exchange market and there were fractional losses in such issues as the Belgian 7½s and the Denmark 6s. United Kingdom bonds were quite firm, although toward the close the 1937 loan got below 104 again.

In the domestic quarter of the list the consolidated gas convertible 7s had a natural drop in sympathy with the reaction in the company's stock. Chile Copper 7s were soft. There was quite heavy buying of the Atlantic Fruit 7s at 40, a small gain over Friday's quotations. The railway bonds were steady and showed no disposition to react except fractionally in a few instances. Liberty bonds were heavily dealt in and steady.

The New York market for Canadian provincial bonds this week was steady.

Can Stocks.

American Can was one of the few stocks in which operations for the rise were in evidence. Estimates of American Can's earnings on the common are at the rate of between $10 and $12 a year.

Financial Notes.

Coal production was reduced by the holiday this week to an estimated output of 4,000,000 tons, which means that 4,000,000 tons were drawn from reserves to meet the weekly requirements of 8,000,000 tons. Reserves should last about five weeks at the current rate of production and consumption, it was said.

The Mother Lode copper mines of Alaska produced 2,149,671 pounds of copper in June as against 2,104,402 pounds in May, it was said.

The indicated consumption of sugar in the United States for the first six months of 1922 amounted to 2,781,218 tons, or at an annual rate of over 5,500,000, it was reported.

The N. Y., N. H. & H. Railroad has been garnted authority to issue $5,900,000 first and refunding mortgage bonds, Series D, to be placed with the Government as part security for a loan.

The St. Paul road has been granted authority to assume obligations as guarantor of $8,085,000 trust certificates, proceeds from which will be used to buy 2500 gondola cars, 3500 box cars, 500 automobile cars and 21 locomotives.

Mutual Oil resumed dividends declaring a distribution of 12½ per cent, payable Sept. 15, to stock of record Sept. 1.

The time at which holders of Northern Pacific-Great Northern joint 6½s may convert them into Northern Pacific refunding and improvement 6s will expire July 12. The joint bonds have been called for redemption July 27 at 103½.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today says:

"There were wide movements in the market for European exchange during the past week, with the collapse in French exchange demanding most attention and being retarded as one of the chief features in the market. Sterling exchange reflected a powerful buying all through the week, demand selling as high as $4.46½, a gain of about 8 cents from its low level of the previous week, but when French exchange yielded yesterday sterling sold off to a moderate extent. It still holds, however, within 7 cents of its high price of the year.

"The offerings of French exchange overshadowed every other feature in the market in the last half of the week. This selling was attributed to governmental operations and was accompanied by a good deal of discussion about the situation in France and Germany. Yesterday, while the selling was moderate, French exchange yielded to a new low level for the year, checks on Paris selling down to 7.88½. Belgian exchange was also extremely heavy yesterday, dropping to 7.44. The decline brought both these exchanges down to new low levels for the year. Italian exchange shared in the downward movement, lire checks selling as low as 4.43. Swiss and Dutch exchange held firm, while French declined and made good gains in the last half of the week. Greek exchange was in an unsettled condition, the Government representative here supplying exchange at 3.31, while it could be bought I London at equal to 2.62, but uncertainty existed as to what attitude the consortium would take on the English bills. Czecho-Slovak was a srong feature near the end of the week, advancing to 2.05. The tension in connection with German financial and political affairs caused a continued decline in the rates on Berlin.

"After a moderate rally in the late trading yesterday exchanges of the continental countries directly affected by reparations resumed their decline this morning. German marks sank to a new low of .18 of a cent, as against a closing yesterday of .21¾c. The demoralization in marks brought a sympathetic fall in French and Belgian francs and Italian lire. French francs made a new low for the year at 7.81c. Sterling, meanwhile, held fairly steady and at a late quotation of $4.44⅜ srowed a loss of only ⅛ from the previous closing price. A feature of the market was the continued improvement in Czecho-Slovakian currency.

OIL SHARES ARE LOWER ON NEW YORK CURB MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Dealings on the Curb Exchange today felt the effect of the German situation no less than those on the Stock Exchange. Standard Oil of Indiana was the most sensitive. It fell away to 110, a decline of nearly 6 points from Friday's high point. Toward the close, the stock had a slight rally. Other oils moved in sympathy with the Indiana shares. Standard Oil of Kentucky, Fensland and Cities Service bankers shares all went lower.

The Mexican seaboard issues did better.

Among the motors, the new Willys Corporation first preferred was bid up sharply. Packard Motor stocks were stronger, especially the preferred, which sold at 87 as against the last previous transactions of 85½. Other motors were little changed. Goldwyn Pictures had a slight further advance.

In the mining group, Boston and Montana had a little upturn. Bonds were only slightly changed as a rule. Mexican Government 4s which have been under pressure for a week, continued their decline and the Freeport Texas 7s broke sharply. These were the only exceptions, the rest of the curb bond market remained about where it left off on Friday.

Heavy selling in the last half hour caused some sharp reactions, carrying down some of the leaders throughout the list.

GERMAN SITUATION BEARISH INFLUENCE IN GRAIN MARKET

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Belief in the likelihood that black rust would meet defeat in the great annual race with the spring wheat crop led to lower prices here for wheat the past week. Although prices rallied at times, the general tendency was towards a lower level of values. Big world shipments were influential in promoting bearish sentiment, and so too was the fact that the railroad strike had been confined to shopmen. Breaks in foreign exchange did a good deal, apparently, to restrict export demand for wheat. New Orleans, nevertheless, was outbidding Chicago for new wheat in Illinois, and besides was rumored to be getting most of the wheat offered in the West and Southwest. Estimates that the European wheat crop would be 120,000,000 bushels less than last year seemed to make no lasting impression, and the same was true of reports that wet weather had been causing delay to threshing in Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska. Corn was upheld by active shipping demand here. For the first time in months, stocks of oats totaled less than at the corresponding date last year. Increasing warehouse supplies at Western packing centers weakened provisions.

Grain prices closed lower at the week-end session on the Merchants' Exchange, wheat showing substantial recession. The German situation, favorable crop news from the Northwest and favorable crop reports from corn section were factors in the market.

In the local cash grain market Saturday there was a good clearance of all grades of wheat, elevator people taking nearly 100 cars and country mill order buyers around 25 or 30 cars. Local mills took a little. Prices were 3 to 5 cents lower, heavy test saft milling qualities and garlicky No. 2 showing greatest decline and No. 3 and No. 4 mainly 3 to 4 cents off, but latter were steadier in late trade. Garlicky wheat sold mainly 3 cents below straight grades. Several cars of smutty sold at 1 cent discount. New wheat made up practically all the receipts. Larger receipts of new nearby hard and mixed wheats resulted in hard wheat being 3 to 5 cents lower.

Affected by lower futures, cash corn sold off ½ to 1 cent. Offerings were small and with fair demand at the decline offerings were cleaned up. Mills led in the buying.

Cash oats were a slow sale, prices being ½ to 1 cent lower. Receipts, which were of moderate volume, were not all cleaned up. Demands were mostly local. Shippers bought some oats.

December wheat showed the widest lower range in the fore part of the day. Liverpool opened 1d lower and closed 2d net off.

July wheat opened at $1.09⅝, September wheat $1.10⅛, December wheat $1.13½, July corn 62c, September corn 65¼c, December corn 64½c and May oats 38c. The latter was higher.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, July 8.—The wheat market was weak and despite the heavy commission house buying on the breaks the decline could not be stayed. The German financial situation with reports of reselling by that country because of the unfavorable exchange rate seemed to demoralize longs and encouraged bear pressure. Selling by export interests created the belief that further cancellations with the other side had been put through. The country sold new wheat heavily to arrive on overnight bids and this led to hedging pressure in greater volume than of late. Cash wheat premiums held firm. Milling demand for wheat was quiet, but exporters were trying to secure offers of big lots of hard winter wheat. In Minneapolis cash wheat premiums were 1c to 3c up on demand from mills. Market closed 1⅝c to 2⅛c lower; July $1.12@$1.12⅛, September, $1.10⅝ to $1.10¾, December $1.13⅛ to $1.13¼.

Corn suffered a sharp decline. Germany was reported reselling corn and this encouraged liquidation and bear pressure. Support was not so good as of late. Weather was generally favorable and some showers were forecast for Northern Illinois where they are badly needed. Shipping demand was good. Market closed 1⅛c to 2⅛c lower; July 61½c, September 64⅛@64⅝c, December 64¼c to 64⅛c.

Oats followed the trend of other grains. Liquidation and short selling was encouraged by reported resales by Germany. Domestic shipping demand was fair from the South, but the East is taking little oats. On the decline heavy sales of oats were made for shipment East. Market closed 1⅝c@1⅝c lower; July 34¼c, September 37c, December, 40c.

Provisions were lower on liquidation and short selling. Cash interests bought on the break. Germany was reported offering to resell product. Lard closed 25c to 30c lower and ribs 52½c to 55c lower.

Live stock prices took an upward turn at the St. Louis National Stock Yards the past week, cattle, hogs and lambs closing on a materially advanced basis. The market was closed Tuesday for the Fourth and receipts were only moderate for the period in the various departments. Advance in cattle average 50c, beef steers, yearlings, cows and bulls sharing in the rise. Stocker and feeder cattle moved up about 25c, possibly more in some favored cases. Trade was active in all departments of the cattle market virtually throughout the week. Receipts carried an unusually large supply of long-finished steers and yearlings. These sold at the highest level of the year. In all, about 35 cars of steers and yearlings were of sufficient quality to sell at $9 per cwt. or better. The top and highest price paid for cattle here this year was $10.10, this awarded Friday for three cars of choice Hereford yearling steers that averaged 822 pounds. Straight heifers out of the same feed-lots cashed at $9.50 and that figure was also paid for a drove of steers and heifers mixed earlier in the week. The best figure for weighty beeves was $10 paid Wednesday for a load averaging 1503 lbs. The bulk of all killing steers during the week passed through a range of $7.75 to $9.25; Numerous loads sold between $9.25 to $10. Grass steers from the South Texas range country numbered 37 cars, all of which were yarded in the quarantine division. Consignments cashed mainly through a spread of $4.75 to $6.75, with four good loads selling Thursday at $8.25, the top. The bulk of all lightweight yearling stock sold between a spread of $7 and $8.75, with common kinds down to $5 or under. The range for butcher cows was $3.75 to $7, with $4.50 to $5.50 taking most. Cutters late in the week were selling at $3 to $3.50 and canners $2.50 to $2.75. Good weight beef and bologna bulls closed largely around $4.50@5. All classes of stockers and feeders, in sympathy with beef classes, moved up 25c, more in some favored instances. Receipts were comparatively light and demand not particularly large. The majority of steers sold from $4.50 to $6.50. Veal calves opened steady Monday, top $9, and advanced 25c to 50c Wednesday, all of which and more was later lost. The closing top was $8.75, or 25c under the opening day's high figure.

Hogs Highest Since March.

Although lighter receipts were expected in view of a holiday the Fourth, the trade was hardly prepared for a cut of 26,000 hogs the past week and a shortage resulted, which boosted values to the highest mark since March 10, when a top of $11.10 was established in the final session. This was 30c above the final top a week previous. The week opened with a light run and a slight advance, with top of $10.85 in Monday's session. Tuesday being a holiday, the next market session was Wednesday, when, on continued light receipts, the top vaulted to $11, and then moved by degrees to $11.10 at the close. While the present top is but 30c higher than closing day a week previous, it will be remembered that the Saturday market broke sharply soon after the opening, and the bulk of selling that day ranged from $10.50@10.65, whereas the bulk on closing day the past week extended from $11@11.10, indicating an advance of 40c to 50c. Bulk of hogs for the week cashed from $10.70@11.05, as against $10.60@10.85 a week previous. Good-weight pigs sold from $10.25@10.75, medium weights, $9.75@10.25, and light stuff, 100 pounds and down, from $9@10. Rough hogs were in poor demand and only steady, sows bringing $8.75@9 and stags $7.25@8. Receipts totaled 45,024, comparing with 72,057 the previous week.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were fairly large each day, although, owing to a holiday on Tuesday, the total supply at 24,063 was about 6000 smaller than a week previous. Although the run included a good many Southwest Missouri lambs of medium quality, the offering as a whole was considerably improved from a standpoint of quality. Quite a few good Kentucky and Tennessee lambs were received and these sold practically the same as the best natives, at prices 25c to 65c higher than the close of the preceding week. Cull lambs, fat sheep and other aged classes little changed. One respect in which the market was more satisfactory the past week was that sorting was more to the advantage of the selling end, being the lightest in some time, whereas most of the time the previous week sorts were heavy. At the present time good to choice lambs are selling from $13.25@13.65, largely, whereas the top quotation was $13 the preceding week and most of the good lambs brought only $12.50@12.75. Southwest lambs topped at $12.75, with the bulk from $12.50@12.75, against $12.25@12.50 for the bulk last week. Culls are steady at $5.50@6, few up to $6.25 late. Best light-weight ewes are selling from $5.75@6.50, heavies $2.50@4, canners 50c and choppers and bucks $2@2.50. Best breeding ewes sell at $7.

Horse and mule receipts were again light in volume and demand was correspondingly small. There was no material change in prices, virtually all classes selling at previous quotations. Demand for horses centered on riding types and good wagon chunks. About 100 head arrived on commission, virtually all of which cleared at auction.

The outlet for mules was mostly for good, big, sound animals, 1300 to 1400 lbs., and miners and pitters. Local dealers and one or two outside buyers provided outlet.

COTTON PRICES OFF IN WEEK-END TRADE

German Situation Factor in Market — Japanese Late Buyers of Futures.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 3 to 12 points, with active months selling 12 to 15 points net higher after the call on continued covering and scattering support, which appeared to be based on the unsettled weather outlook and reiterated reports of increasing weevil damage in the South. October contracts sold at 22.82c, but there was considerable realizing for over the week-end and some scattered selling on the unfavorable German financial siuation or on a belief that weevil damange reports were being exaggerated. Prices eased back to about last night's closing in consequence with the early market comparatively quiet and irregular.

The early advance was checked by realizing for over the week-end and the market was weak later in the morning under more urgent general selling promotd by unfavorable financial and political news from Germany. October broke to 22.28, the lower price reached since the bureau and 40 points net lower, but rallied in the last few minutes on trade and Japanese buying; closed at 22.45. The general market closed steady at a net decline of 19 to 24 points.

Cotton futures closed steady; July, 22.48; Oct., 22.45; Dec., 22.25; Jan., 21.97; March, 21.83.

DOUBLE-HUMPED AFRICAN CAMEL TO BE GIFT TO ST. LOUIS ZOO

Members of Moolah Temple Will Make Presentation Next Sunday Morning at Forest Park.

A double-humped African camel will be christened and presented to the St. Louis Zoo by the members of Moolah Temple in Forest Park next Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

The camel, a year-old male, was bought for the zoo by the "Shriners" last May from the Kansas City Zoological Society at a cost of $750. He has been in Forest Park ever since, but has never been formally introduced. A procession of uniformed bodies of the Shrine and some of the new arrival's future mates will escort the zoo's latest dromedary from Jefferson Memorial to Sealion Plaza, where the christening and presentation will be held. "Sam," the big ape, will ride his bicycle in the procession; "Henry," the chimpanzee, will be wheeled along in a go-cart, and "Jim," the elephant presented by the children of the schools, and "Martha," the baby elephant, also will appear. Two white llamas will draw a small wagon in which the Sun Bear will ride.

Judge Victor H. Falkenhainer will preside at the christening, and Walter J. G. Neun will present the camel to the zoo. A concert by the Shrine Band will follow the ceremony.

LUTHERAN GOLDEN JUBILEE WILL BE CELEBRATED TODAY

The golden jubilee of the Evangelical Luthern Synodical Conference of North America will be celebrated by a religious service at 3 p. m. today in which all Lutheran churches of the city will participate, at the new grounds of Concordia Seminary, west of Forest Park. The meeting an open air service, is expected to be attended by 5000 members of the various churches.

The conference, of which the Rev. C. Gausewitz of Milwaukee, who will deliver the jubilee address, is president, was founded in 1872 by a number of synods of the Luthern Church throughout America. It includes 4000 congregations, with a membership of 1,200,000. Missions of the synod have been established in all parts of the world, and particular stress has been laid on negro mission work in the South.

PHYSICIANS PLAN BIG BUILDING ON GRAND BOULEVARD

Option Taken on Block Bounded by That Thoroughfare, St. Alphonse Street, Windsor Place and Bell Avenue.

DOCTORS TO OWN AND CONTROL IT

Upper Stories for Offices of Medical Men, Street Floor for Pharmacies and Supplies, in $400,000 Structure.

By BERRY MOORE.

The Ben Altheimer & Bro. Real Estate Co. has obtained an option to buy the block bounded by Grand boulevard, St. Alphonse street, Windsor place and Bell avenue, for $160,000, or on a basis of $1000 a foot for the Grand boulevard frontage, and is having plans made for construction on the site of a building for exclusive use of physicians. The building syndicate is to be composed of physicians.

The building is to be not more than eight stories in height and is not to cost in excess of $400,000, exclusive of the site. It is to be owned and controlled by physicians, or, in the broad sense, by members of the medical profession.

A total of 1500 shares of stock in the syndicate of a par value of $100, or of an aggregate face value of $150,000, is to be issued, to provide money for purchase of the site. The stock is to be sold in blocks of 15 shares. No member of the syndicate is to hold more than that number of shares. Money for construction is to be raised by a building loan, with the site given as security, in addition to the building.

According to Ben Altheimer, much of the stock already has been taken by physicians, medical specialists, etc., who appreciate the economic advantage of being a tenant of the building under the modus operandi of this enterprise, which is to be distinctly a mutual affair.

To Be Physicians' Building.

The structure will be a model of its type and will be known as the Physicians' Building. It will be confined to the use of the medical profession with the exception of the street floor, which is to be divided into stores for pharmacists and for medical supplies.

The site, which was listed for sale only recently with the Altheimer company, is owned by the Grand Avenue Masonic Temple Association, and is vacant except for an oil station with a temporary lease. It has 150 feet frontage on the west side of Grand boulevard by a depth of 150 feet to St. Alphonse street, a narrow street thoroughfare recently dedicated. Frontages on Windsor place and on Bell avenue, north and south boundaries respectively, are 150 feet.

The option, according to Altheimer, has been signed and sealed by the Grand Avenue Masonic Temple Association, and the success of the project virtually is assured. The site will be available for building operation as soon as the plans have been completed.

Plans for several other spacious structures are under consideration for Grand boulevard, which has received new life with the advent of the 14-story Melbourne Hotel of the Thirty-sixth Street Realty Co., at the northwest corner of Grand and Lindell boulevards.

Plans are being made for improvement of the northwest corner of Grand boulevard and Laclede avenue on a commensurate scale by Albert Ahern, president of the Funsten Bros. Fur Co., who recently purchased the site, 113x134 feet, through the Cornet & Zeibig Trust.

Progress on Skyscraper Plan.

As was announced recently in the Post-Dispatch, a skyscraper to contain an office building and a theater for moving pictures and vaudeville is planned for the site of the former Grand Avenue Presbyterian Church edifice on the west side of Grand boulevard, between Olive street and Washington boulevard.

The success of this project hangs largely on the outcome of negotiations whereby a large life insurance company would acquire control of the building under a long lease. Plans for the building have been made by Preston J. Bradshaw, an architect with offices in the International Life Building, who designed the Melbourne Hotel.

The church site is owned by Moses Schoenberg, who has gone to the [illegible] for the summer, but before his return in the fall it is believed that negotiations will have reached a definite stage. The building, if leased to the life insurance company, will bear its name. The insurance company now occupies large quarters in a building in the central business district, which it formerly owned. The new building is projected by a syndicate which is to take the site under a 99-year lease. The site has 147 feet on Grand boulevard by a depth of 155 feet, and is midway between Olive street and Washington boulevard cut-off.

BEERS HOTEL BUILDING NOW UNDER A 20-YEAR LEASE

Property Bought 50 Years Ago at $150 a Foot, Now Rents on Basis of $6000 a Foot.

The Shuttock Realty concern composed of Samuel S. Friedman and Edward S. Miller has acquired a 20-year lease of the Beers hotel building at the northwest corner of Grand boulevard and Olive street, for a term of 20 years. The rentals for the entire term will aggregate $600,000, according to Samuel Towman & Co., which arranged the transaction and the announcement. This has 100 feet on Olive by 152 feet on Grand.

The lease was made for Aaaron Fuller, president of the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., and the heirs of David Eiseman, joint owners of the property.

Grand boulevard and Olive street is generally considered the most important and valuable corner in St. Louis, being the traffic and amusement center of this city.

The new lessees of the hotel will make extensive improvements both on the inside and outside of the building and will restore the prestige and glory of the Hotel Beers of years ago. The Hotel Beers was erected by Mrs. Harriet eBers nearly 50 years ago and was considered the finest family hotel in its day.

Mrs. Beers purchased the ground on which the hotel was erected at $150 a foot while the present lease is based on a valuation of $6000 a foot, which thus gives a fair idea of the increase in values of St. Louis Real Estate during the last 50 years.

Messrs. Miller and Friedman recently announced having acquired a five year lease of the property, which of course, was automatically cancelled with the execution subsequently the 20-year lease.

PLEA FOR PARDON FOR MAGARIAN KIDNAPER

Alexis Droit, Sentenced After Boy Was Found Murdered, Has Served Four Years.

An application for the pardon of Alexis Droit of East St. Louis, who is serving a 15-year sentence in the penitentiary at Chester for kidnaping Alphonse Magarian, 3 years old, of East St. Louis, in 1917, will be passed upon Tuesday by the Illinois State Board of Pardons at Springfield. A. D. Magarian, father of the boy, has circulated a protest which will be presented to the board when it convenes, and he and other relatives will appear personally and protest against a pardon or parole being granted. Assistant State's Attorney Lindauer of Belleville, who aided in prosecutiong Droit, plans to make a personal appeal to the board against granting Droit's petition.

The decapitated body of the lad was found on a vacant lot about two weeks after his disappearance. It had been placed in a sack and was among the refuse on the lot, which was used as a dump. A few days later the lad's head was found on a vacant lot several blocks distant. Droit conducted a saloon and wine room close to the bakery conducted by Magarian, and the lad was decoyed into Droit's place. A demand of $3000 ransom was made of Magarian, and an effort was made to ascertain who had made the demand, and where the lad was held prisoner. While the investigation was still in progress, the lad was murdered.

Droit and several other men and women were tried on a charge of murder, but were acquitted. Droit was later found guilty of kidnaping and was sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary, where he has been about four years.

New Delmar Heights

7000 West—Delmar Avenue and North and South Road—7700 West

We are at the threshhold of a tremendous expansion in home building.

High rents coupled with cramped quarters and unpleasant surroundings, during the past five years, have turned thousands of habitual rent payers into prospective home owners. This condition has brought about an intense activity in subdivision property, and among the more favorably situated properties—notably New Delmar Heights—investors of but a few weeks' time have made most substantial profits on their purchases.

New Delmar Heights, because of its extremely favorable location—in the very center of the most rapidly rising values in St. Louis County—offers to home builders and investors alike ideal locations for homesites as well as an unparalleled opportunity for accumulating most satisfactory profits on the inevitable rise in values which year by year accompanies the westward expansion of the city along Delmar boulevard.

Don't delay. There is a deal of profit as well as satisfaction in a New Delmar Heights Homesite
Representatives on grounds at all times.

BARRETT CONCLUDES SOUTHEASTERN SWING

He Is Willing to Concede Only Kansas City and Part of Northwest to Opponents.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PERRYVILLE, Mo., July 8.—Attorney-General Jesse W. Barrett concluded his swing in Southeast Missouri by adressing the Republicans here this afternoon. He started the week in Wright and Douglas counties, and thereafter made speeches, frequently three or four a day, in New Madrid, Scott, Stoddard, Cape Girardeau and Perry counties. At each place his audiences were said by residents to be the largest which greeted any candidate excepting Senator Reed.

Asked for his personal opinion on the developments in the political situation, the Attorney-General said: "Missouri is going to repeat the action of Indiana and Pennsylvania. The people are going to take charge of the primary and the vote of the folks out in the State is not of the 'deliverable' sort.

Concedes Loss in Kansas City.

"In southwest and in Southeast Missouri I sincerely believe I shall carry every county. One of the metropolitan papers wired over to certain editors in Southwest Missouri asking for the first and second choice of that region. The reply was that I was the favorite and there was no second choice.

"In Southeast Missouri I have been assured in every county I visited that I would reecive a majority of the votes. My audiences have been several times as large as those of other candidates upon the Republican ticket.

"The only part of the State which I am willing to concede to my opponents is Kansas City and a portion of the northwest quarter of the State.

"My support is very sinecere and very real, and is not merely that illusion of support built up artificially by manipulation and money."

Introduced by Fenwick.

At Perryville Barrett was introduced by Frank K. Fenwick, Prosecuting Attorney, of Perry County Republican Committee, who said:

"Attorney-General Barrett is a real Republican upon whom all the party can unite. He is outstanding as a candidate because of his personal character and the record he has made. He has served as Attorney-General in a manner which has attracted the attention and won the approval of the people of Missouri, and that record will be of great value in the campaign if he is our candidate. The people of Perry County welcome him as their friend and this crowded courtroom evidences your interest in him."

The candidate for Senator was on his arrival met by a committee in which were County Chairman Ralph D. Killian, George Mecker, State Representative from Perry County; Prosecuting Attorney Frank W. Fenwick, Edward Cashion and Probate Judge Joseph B. Fenwick.

Points to Economies.

Barrett again today used his opportunity to point out to the voters of Perry County the enonomies in administration instituted at Washington and at Jefferson City. He asserted that taxes in Missouri had been reduced more than by any previous administration in the State's history.

He said the farming communities were not in rivalry with the city, but that their interests were interdependent, the welfare of one being the welfare of both. He promised to aid in the working out of the problems particularly affecting Missouri and outlined his economic policies which he said would contribute to that end.

SACKS TO SPEAK AT LUNCHEON

William Sacks, banker and oil man, candidate for the Republican senatorial nomination on a wine-and-beer platform, will speak at a buffet luncheon at Hotel Jefferson at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow. The committee in charge includes Louis H. Waltke, E. V. P. Schneiderhahn and Hugh K. Wagner.

Sacks plans to speak, in the next two weeks, in the cities and larger towns of the State, and to emphasize the wine-and-beer issue. He will also speak of the need for business methods and business men in the Senate.

FARMERS URGED BY PROCTOR TO ORGANIZE

Republican Senatorial Candidate Opposes Agreement on "Harmoney Candidate."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HIGGINSVILLE, Mo., July 8.—Speaking in the American Legion hall here and later in Concordia tonight, State Senator David M. Proctor, Republican candidate for the United States Senate nomination said the largest single industry in the United States is the farming industry and yet, owing to almost insurmountable physical difficulties, the farmers have never been adequately orgainzed properly and legitimately to promote their interests. Continuing he said:

"All of the other industries of consequence in this country are thoroughly organized and are represented at the various seats of Government. The farmers should be encouraged in their recent efforts to band themselves together in order to obtain ample opportunity to present their problems, needs and difficulties to the law-making bodies of this land.

"There is no reason why the Federal Reserve Bank board today should not include among its membership a financier with practical knowledge of and personal experience with the American farm."

Touching on the Republican senatorial campaign Proctor said:

"Several months ago I started in a campaign to submit my platform and program to the Republican voters of Missouri, who are in fact the stockholders of our Republican party. I adopted this course not only in response to my own personal inclination but realiaztion of the fact that those who are reputed to have the power of 'delivering' votes in blocks would not be successful this year. The recent primary elections in Pennsylvania, Indiana and Iowa have justified my position, this is not a year when four or five directors of the party, some self-appointed and others imaginary, can agree upon a 'harmony' candidate and 'deliver' to him votes sufficient to nominate. The people of Missouri have never been 'deliverable' like cattle and especially is that true at this particular hour."

BRIDGE BOND ISSUE VOTED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOONVILLE, Mo., July 8.—Cooper County voted by a ratio of three to one today for a $125,000 bond issue to complete payment on a $500,000 bridge now under construction at the foot of the principal business street in Boonville. One-half the cost of the bridge is borne by the Federal Government, one-fourth by private donations and the remaining fourth by the bonds voted today.

The completion of the bridge, which will be a fireproof structure of steel and concrete, will fill the only gap on the National old trails route between St. Louis and Kansas City. Work was started some months ago, and the bridge will be completed by the end of this year.

Philippine Banker Sentenced.

MANILA, P. I., July 8.—Isadore Lerma, former head of the foreign department of the Philippine National Bank today was sentenced to serve 11 years in prison and indemnify the bank in the amount of 42,000 pesos for embezlement and falsification of commercial documents.

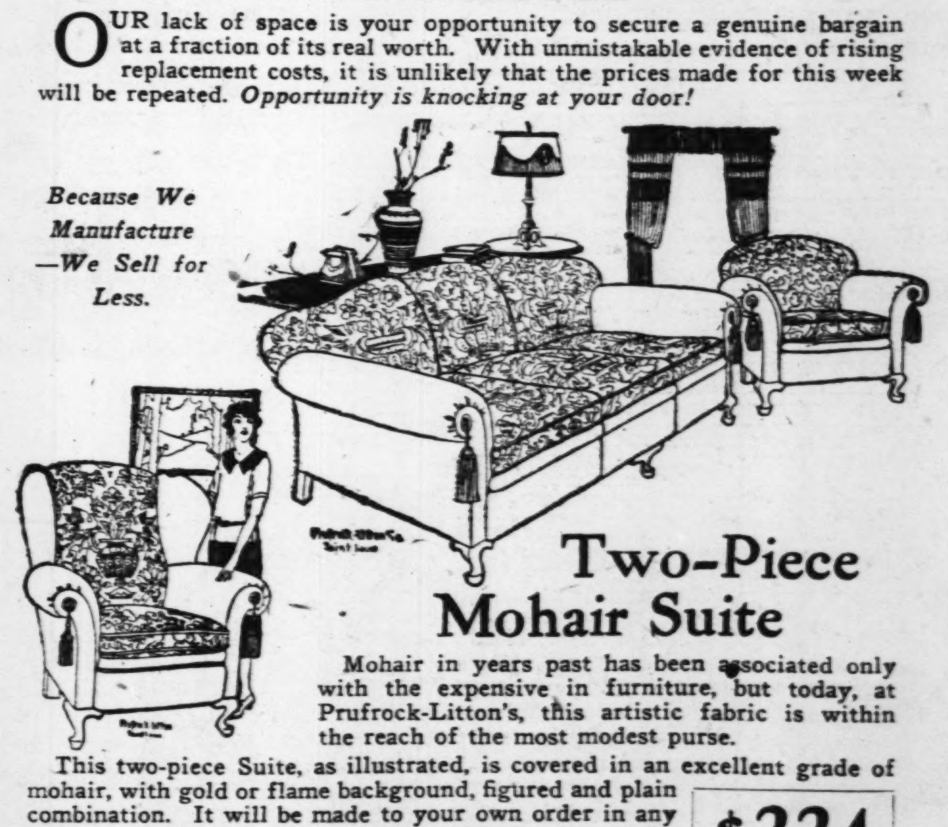
Opportunity Week Begins Monday

BEGINNING Monday—six days teeming with opportunities for home managers!

WE have just gone over our stock and re-marked many Suites with a view to disposing of them in time to make way for the furniture purchased at the market. Included in this reduced lot of Suites are patterns that have been discontinued by the manufacturer and some excellent Suites of which we have but one of a kind.

OUR lack of space is your opportunity to secure a genuine bargain at a fraction of its real worth. With unmistakable evidence of rising replacement costs, it is unlikely that the prices made for this week will be repeated. Opportunity is knocking at your door!

Because We Manufacture —We Sell for Less.



Editorial

"I Shot an Arrow Into the Air, It Fell to Earth, I Know Not Where." (PINSUTI)

Just so with countless thousands of us mortals!

Too feebly do we reckon with ourselves the consequences of our indiscretions.

Too often do we "act in haste and repent at leisure."

'Tis the painstaking, thoughtful efforts whereby we are benefitted.

Mankind husbands the industry of the bee but tramples that of the ant under his feet.

Both equally industrious; the bee with an objective beneficial, the ant with an objective of no benefit, but each furnishes us an example of perseverance worthy of our patterning.

PERSEVERE!

In memory of our dear mother and mother-in-law, Caroline Burger, who departed this life July 8, 1921. ROSE.—Tea-rose is simply a class name for the rose. They are any one of numerous subvarieties, from a tea scented variety of the China rose. The pink tea rose is of the hybrid variety. Go to the Missouri Botanical Gardens to study and learn the names of the various kinds of roses. It is only through seeing them that you can become familiar with the various types.

P.-D. READER.—Put the bantam hen in a small coop, not allowing her to get out to the nests. 2. If you have not already washed the pot black out of the cloth, then wash it with soap and cold water, later boil. If washing and boiling does not take out the stain, there is nothing that we know of to remove it, only continual boiling may help.

H. O.—To remove spots from drawings, place soapstone, fine meerschaum shavings or powdered magnesia on the spot, and if necessary lay on white filtering paper, saturating it with peroxide of hydrogen. Allow this to act for a few hours, and remove the application with a brush. If necessary repeat the operation. In this manner black coffee spots were removed from a valuable diagram without erasure by knife or rubber.

Water enough to make two ounces. The X-rays are beneficial in these cases, also the galvanic and faradic currents.

MRS. H. MARTIN.

In memory of our dear father, Franz Wieners, who departed this life 8 years ago, July 12, 1914.

Surrounded by friends we are lonesome,
In the midst of pleasure we are blue,
A smile on our face still a heartache,
Aching and longing for you.
There are griefs that cannot find comfort
And wounds that cannot be healed.
There are sorrows so deep in the human heart
That can't be half revealed.

DAUGHTER, MISS AMANDA WIENERS.

In loving remembrance of our dear husband and our dear father, Joseph Keller, who departed this life July 5 1921.

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we love so dearly,
In his lonely silent grave.
Just one year ago he left us.
Now we miss you, husband and father, dear,
And remember all your kindness,
As we drop a silent tear.
We have a kind word for each that died, beloved by all. Sadly missed by

HIS WIFE, ANNA KELLER, AND CHILDREN.

In sad and loving remembrance of our dear father and grandfather, Joseph Keller, who departed one year ago, July 5, 1921:

Oh, vacant is the fireside chair,
The smile that won no longer there;
From door and hall, from porch and lawn
The echo of that voice is gone,
And we who linger only know
How much was lost one year ago.

Automobiles For Sale—Miscellaneous

A MAN DOESN'T SNAP UP

a horse because it looks all right. As a usual thing that only makes him wonder what really is the matter that the other fellow wants to sell. So he leads the nag out into the middle of a ten-acre lot, where the light will strike it good and strong, and examines every hair of its hide. If the horse passes this degree, he drives it 20 or 30 miles to see if it rears, or balks, or shies, or goes lame or develops other horse nonsense.

That's the way to purchase a Used Car

USED CAR BARGAINS
By the STUDEBAKER Dealer

Our margin of profit on Studebaker cars enables us to sell USED CARS, which are taken in exchange (not bought) at prices far below those of any Used Car Dealer.

We can also sell you a much better car because we accept only good popular makes.

We think enough of our USED CAR BUSINESS to put them in good condition before they are sold.

We have a decent place to do business in—with tile floor and all (not a hole in the wall), but we do not charge you one cent for all that.

Our Show Room is for NEW STUDEBAKERS, of which we sell by the thousands (not hundreds).

Our Used Cars are priced at the lowest cash price possible to obtain a car of like quality anywhere.

Come and compare them with others, and if you are not convinced you don't have to buy.

Our Terms will enable you to ride and enjoy the car while you are making the monthly payments.

THESE ARE THE CARS:

1921 Chevrolet
1922 Hupmobile
1919 Lexington
1921 Studebaker Roadster
1921 Ford Coupe
1919 Oldsmobile Coupe

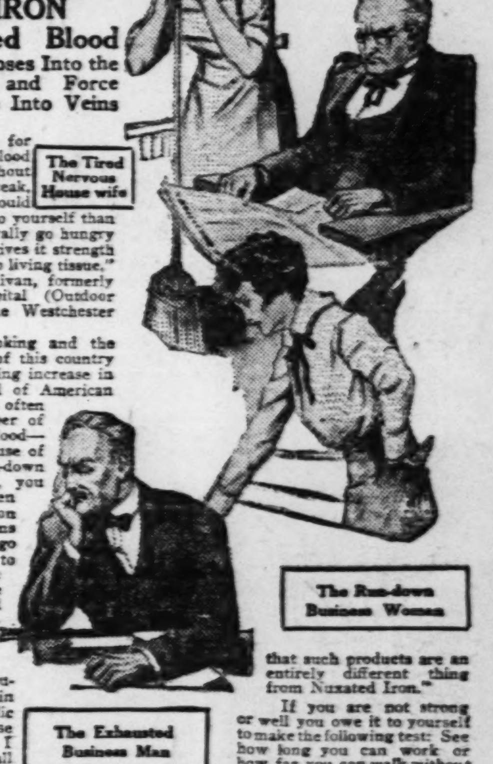
IS YOUR BLOOD HUNGRY FOR IRON?

Modern Methods of Cooking and Living Have Made An Alarming Increase in Iron Deficiency in Blood of American Men and Women

NUXATED IRON
Helps Make Red Blood

The Kind That Puts Roses Into the Cheeks of Women and Force Strength and Courage Into Veins of Men.



Who Should Take Nuxated iron
The Elderly Inactive Man
The Tired Nervous House wife
The Run-down Business Woman
The Exhausted Business Man

"Is your blood starving for want of iron? Iron is red blood food. If you were to go without eating until you became weak, thin and emaciated, you could not do a more serious harm to yourself than when you let your blood literally go hungry for want of iron—iron that gives it strength and power to change food into living tissue," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital.

"Modern methods of cooking and the rapid pace at which people of this country live has made such an alarming increase in iron deficiency in the blood of American men and women that I have often marveled at the large number of people who lack iron in the blood—and who never suspect the cause of their weak, nervous, run-down state. But in my opinion, you can't make strong, sturdy men and women by feeding them on metallic iron. The old forms of metallic iron must go through a digestive process to transform them into organic iron — Nuxated Iron—before they are to be taken up and assimilated by the human system. Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well-known physicians, thousands of people still insist in dosing themselves with metallic iron simply, I suppose, because it costs a few cents less. I strongly advise readers in all cases to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble, then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the packages. If you have taken preparations such as Nux and Iron and other similar iron products and failed to get results, remember that such products are an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron."

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have increased their strength and endurance in two weeks' time while taking iron in the proper form.

ONE HURT IN $250,000 FIRE AT PAINT PLANT

Blaze Was Preceded by Explosion at Factory of Benjamin Moore & Co.

Fire that started at 8:48 o'clock yesterday morning and smoldered until 2 o'clock in the afternoon caused damage estimated at $250,000 to the plant of Benjamin Moore & Co., paint and varnish manufacturers, which occupies the entire south half block between Second and Main and Soulard and Carroll streets. The four-story factory of the company and its four-story stockhouse were destroyed, while the one-story shipping department was badly damaged.

The fire, the origin of which is undetermined, was discovered by Walter Sanders of 1541 South Third street, a watchman, in the rear room of the shipping department. He sounded an alarm and ran with a fire extinguisher into the room. As he entered there was an explosion, flames leaped in all directions and he was severely burned about the hands and arms. The flames spread rapidly and a general alarm was turned in.

Firemen Kept Outside.

Because of the intense heat from burning oils and of repeated explosions, Fire Chief Panzer would not permit his men to enter the building. At 4:30 the floors of the factory buckled and the rear brick wall fell into the alley. A 100-foot smokestack on an adjoining boiler room toppled and was headed toward a group of firemen and spectators in a vacant lot across the alley, when it struck a factory wall and was deflected into the alley. Two firemen were bruised by falling brick.

The front wall of the factory fell later, as did parts of the side walls. The floors of the stockhouse also gave way, but the walls were left standing. The fire was under control by 8 o'clock.

Covered by Insurance.

Of the damage, all of which is covered by insurance, $100,000 is to the building and $150,000 to stock and machinery, according to the estimate of Richard Moore, vice president of the Police Board and local manager for the company.

Plans for rebuilding upon the site, which is owned by the company, will not be made until the arrival this week of L. P. Moore of Brooklyn, N. Y., president of the company.

Unitarian Delegates Named.

Five St. Louisans have been appointed as delegates to the institute to be held by the Laymen's League of the Unitarian Church at the Isles of Shoals, N. H., July 29 to Aug. 12. They are Clarke P. Fiske, 6237 McPherson avenue, and Ralph Fuchs, 3203 Lafayette avenue, from Unity Chapter, and Burt E. Christopher, 1231 Oak Court, and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Gummersheimer from the Messiah Chapter. The aim of the league is to qualify laymen for service in church schools, without obligating them for such service. There are 261 delegates registered for the institute.

Park Bridge Plans Approved.

The Board of Public Service has approved plans for a $10,000 reinforced concrete bridge to span the River des Peres for Stable drive, Forest Park. In recent years this drive has come into general use, and is an important route to the Municipal Theater. Opera goers have often wondered why this should be Stable drive. City officials are casting about for a more appropriate name. The name, "Opera drive," has been suggested.

THE FIRST MRS. VONSIATSKY

The Loser in a Romance of War, Riches and Revolution

Married in the Russian Crimea while the Red terror was hammering at the gates of Yalta, Liubov Mouromsky lost her soldier husband, Anastase Vonsiatsky—He came to America and married Mrs. Marion B. Stephens, heiress to many millions :: ::

CENTRAL figure in a war-time romance that outrivals the vain imaginings of fiction, Madame Liubov Mouromsky Vonsiatsky, a refugee from Russia, is in Paris with the documents through which she hopes to establish that she is the only legal wife of Anastase Andrevitch Vonsiatsky, who married Mrs. Marion B. Stephens, American heiress to a $40,000,000 estate, in New York Feb. 5 last.

Mrs. Stephens, daughter of the late Norman B. Ream, a Chicago multimillionaire, gave her age as 43 when she became the former Russian soldier's bride. Vonsiatsky is 23. The little Russian woman who claims a prior right to his affections is 21. Mrs. Stephens was divorced from a Chicago lawyer in 1918.

There could have been no more tragic setting for a romance than the Crimean city of Yalta in the early

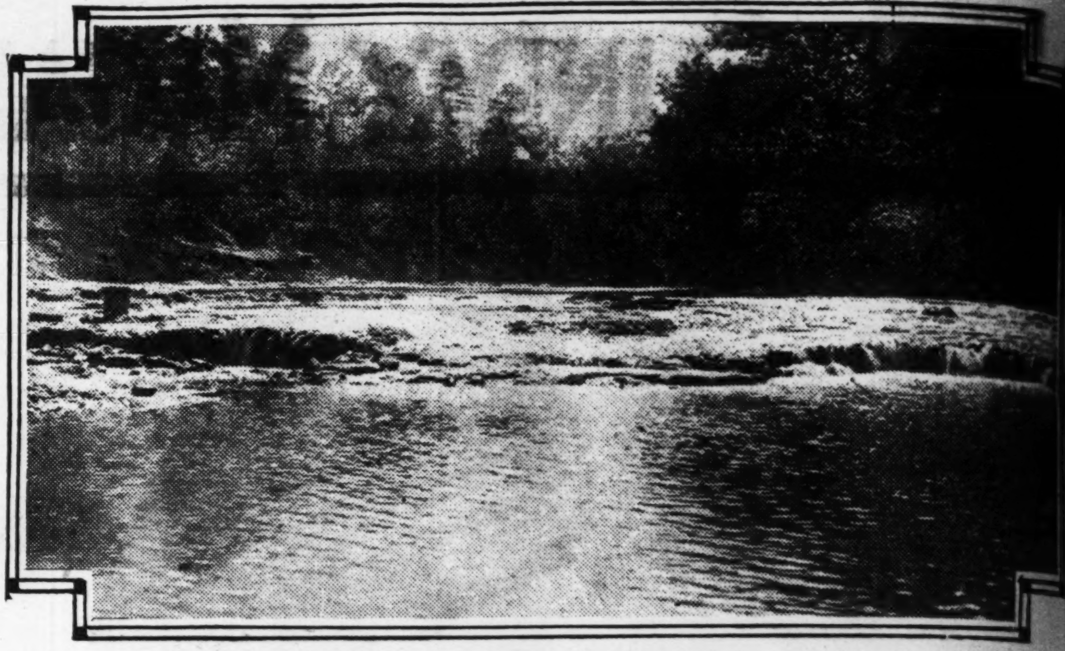
Mystic Music on a Texas River

Strange and seemingly unearthly harmonies are heard at a certain point on the San Bernard—Sometimes like a violin or again like wind instruments or an aeolian harp—Legend of the bride who was drowned and the lover who went away with his violin and became a hermit—One theory is that feeding oysters or drumfish make the music. -:-



Scene along the San Bernard River, in Texas, where mysterious music is said to be heard.

THERE is a spot on the San Bernard River in Brazoria County, Tex., where an ethereal orchestra plays and no one has ever been able to explain it. The natives have a legend, but legend or not, the music is there.

Whence comes this spirit music of the beautiful San Bernard nobody knows. Faintly heard by mortal ears, it rises and falls teasingly. At times it seems to come from the boat itself. Then, almost dying away, until you strain your ears thinking you have lost it, the melody floats back as if from far away. The moonlit air fairly pulsates to the exquisite harmony. And you hold your breath as though to still the noisy beating of your heart—for fear that one sweet note of its elusive cadence escape you.

Thousands have made the trip to the mouth of the San Bernard to hear this music. And of the many who have drifted across the spot where the melody vibrates in the night, not one has discovered its source.

The San Bernard is one of the most picturesque small rivers of Texas. Beginning in Colorado County, it winds its crooked way through Austin, Wharton and Fort Bend counties, finally cutting through the western part of Brazoria County and emptying into the Gulf. It is very shallow, only navigable for small craft some 30 or 40 miles up from its mouth. Its banks are covered by luxuriant trees on both sides and their drooping boughs in many places reach outward over the water, making a living arch of green festooned by drapings of Spanish moss.

The river is very clear. Being so little above sea level, Gulf tides run far up, rendering the water brackish and even quite salty at times. As a stream to delight the fisherman it is ideal.

Near the mouth of the river is a chain of salt lakes on both sides, all emptying into the river. They are literally carpeted with oysters which are said to rival in flavor those of Berwick Bay or the celebrated Blue Points of the East. In winter, ducks and geese flock there, while red fish at certain seasons of the year are so plentiful that it is no uncommon thing for them to crowd each other out of the water in an effort to pass through the necks connecting the lakes. At such times hook and line are not needed to catch them. A stout stick in the hands of one standing by the side of these little cuts and dozens of fish can be caught as they pass struggling and splashing by.

Except for the old ante-bellum plantation homes of Capt. Calvin McNeil and Gen. Bates and scattered beach cottages at the mouth of the San Bernard River, there is hardly a break in the wild jungle that borders the river nearly to its source. West of this little river is the great marsh "Old Ocean," in whose unexplored depths bear and deer, wolves and leopards, wild cats and other big game roam in countless numbers. In the murky waters of this big swamp thousands of alligators bask and drift along like sodden logs. From all parts of West Texas hunters go there for the yearly bear hunt.

About eight miles from the San Bernard are the three live oaks where the first Congress of Texas was held at the site of the capitol of the State—an old log cabin recently destroyed by a storm. It is through such land, originally granted to Stephen F. Austin and his connections, that the San Bernard runs its peaceful way to the Gulf.

To the west of its mouth is Matagorda Bay, in whose waters one of the fierce naval battles of the Civil War took place, while four miles to the east is the historic old town of Brazoria, and further down the sulphur mines of Freeport—all lie between the Brazos and the San Bernard Rivers, the two running almost parallel and about five to eight miles apart for some distance north. But the spirit music! Do you wish to hear it?

Is it the imagination or nervousness that makes you feel that about you, around you, in the air, above you there are whispering voices? As the boat nears the spot and everyone is cautioned not to speak or make other sound, you feel then an influence, a something puts a spell upon you. You feel as one who enters a vast and empty cathedral alone before the sun begins to touch the big stained glass windows or late in the day when only the rose-tinted western sky sends its ghostly fingers of light seeking the shadows in the great deserted aisles. Something like this feeling comes over you when you are told that soon you will be drifting over the spot of mysterious music.

A good catch from the waters of the Texas stream of mystic music.

Can you hear it? A hand is raised. And everyone leans forward straining to catch the elusive sound that comes from—where? At one time it seems to come from above you. You look toward the star-gemmed sky and the faint melody appears to emanate from the shadowy bank.

Describe it? You cannot. As nearly as you can come to doing so is to say that it sounds as if a violin bow is lightly—ever so lightly—drawn across the strings by a master's hand. Then again it seems like the low humming of a loving mother crooning over the sleeping child at her breast. Still again it might be the faintest notes of a flute heard from a great distance or the golden tone of some wind instrument. Most frequently, perhaps, it reminds you of an aeolian harp whose strings are being lightly vibrated by a dying zephyr. Almost in one key, yet to your straining ears you seem to hear modulations that hint of a dirge or lament.

The boat drifts past the enchanted spot and the music ceases as abruptly as it began. You draw a long breath as if you had not breathed while you listened. At first every one speaks in whispers as if in the presence of the dead, for you feel that from the other shore you have heard the angelic band. Something, or a Presence, keeps voices hushed until the lights of camp glimmer ahead of you and the spell is lifted.

There is a legend of the music of the San Bernard.

Once upon a time—do not all fairy tales begin so?—a young man roamed the banks of the San Bernard and there he lived all alone. The few who saw him say that he was very handsome, but oh, so sad! His great eyes looked out at you as if the soul behind them had never known joy, nor looked for happiness in this world. He shunned all friendly advances and of his past no one ever knew aught, for he never spoke of himself nor of what had been. Trappers, hunters and fishermen heard the sound of music from the direction of this lonely young man's camp. One, it is said, ventured near enough to see him with a violin at his shoulder. And he was playing softly, and oh, so sadly, but with the touch of a master. For many nights, for many months, this lonely hermit caressed the strings of his violin so tenderly that all those who heard the music felt the tears spring to their eyes. It was like listening to the despairing wail of a soul in torment, at times shifting to a faint sobbing minor cnord like the shuddering, rending sobs of a strong man.

One evening a fisherman passing the place where the hermit was usually seen, noted that he was not there. He landed, but found no sign of him, not even his beloved violin. It is believed that he sought a watery grave in the depths of the San Bernard and that it is he who plays on moonlight nights.

Of course the tales about him are as thick as the leaves on a tree, the one finding most favor being that he once loved a girl and that they were divinely happy. Their wedding day drew near. On its eve, clad in shimmering white and with roses twined in her hair, she strolled down to the banks of the San Bernard to be again near the scene where she had oft dreamed in her childhood of the day that had now arrived. And in its waters she met her death.

No one knows, so the legend goes, how it happened; whether she leaned too far over in an effort to see her sweet face reflected in the sleeping waters of the silent river, whether she tripped on a root or a mermaid beckoned.

At the great house where the guests had assembled and the impatient bridegroom waited, all was laughter and light and happiness. They sought the bride but in vain. Fear took the place of happiness, and laughter died as her strange disappearance was whispered about. Search was made and little footprints found leading to the water told the story.

When her poor dead face looked upward into that of her lover, his became as of cold marble. He could not be comforted, nor did a sob escape him. Something had gone from him, and his eyes looked out of a face emotionless and tragic. No one knew where he went. He left no word and he took nothing but his violin.

Naturally there are other theories as to the origin of this music. Some explain it by saying that it is the noise of the rippling water over the oyster beds. Others that it is the sound made by countless thousands of oysters feeding, as it is supposed that they do feed on moonlight nights. Another theory is that it is the call of a certain kind of fish, of the drumfish variety, as they pass over this particular spot. Still other explanations have been given. Some of them are accepted as satisfactory by those who can think of no better, but the majority who hear this mysterious music of the San Bernard credit the old legend—the spirit lover seeking in vain the soul of his lost love.

Whatever the cause of this music may be, it actually has been heard by the romantic, the practical, those who believe in spirit manifestations, those who do not, the ignorant, the learned and the merely curious. In the face of such testimony, there can be no doubt that the faint, weird strains of music really float across the waters of the San Bernard. From what source do they come? Well, that is another matter.

-- DROUTH IN ENGLAND -- CHARGED TO AMERICAN RAILWAY

Hypothesis advanced by scientists that 81-mile finger of concrete and coral rock built into the Florida straits to bring Havana a day nearer New York by railroad has diverted the Gulf stream, thereby causing unusual climatic results on other side of Atlantic — English officials issue warnings that water reserves are failing and that greatest economy must be exercised in use of remaining supplies :: :: ::

ENGLAND and Central Europe again are in the throes of unusually hot weather, sweltering temperatures that gradually have been forcing themselves on the appreciation of the peoples for the last fourteen years.

Great Britain is menaced by a water shortage exceeding that of last year. Notices are being sent out for the populace to save water. Water famine indicates consequent disease epidemics and great personal discomfort and hardship, the Ministry of Health bulletins admonish the people. An official survey of the nation's water reserves is being made.

Streams have dried up and rivers have fallen four feet in Herefordshire, and if the situation becomes more acute there is danger that entire villages and hamlets will have to be evacuated. Many towns already have resorted to the use of chlorinated water, such as was used by the troops during the war, because there is not sufficient pure water to make the ponds.

"We have not a drop of water to spare," said an engineer on the Thames Conservancy Board to a correspondent of the London Daily Express a few days ago. "The water at Molesey lock is dropping every day. Each time the lock is opened 256,000 gallons of water are lost and there is none to replace it. The tributaries are dry and we are receiving no water from the Kennet, the Laddon or the Wey."

"People must save every drop," said an official of the Ministry of Health.

A grave warning is that sent out by the Ministry: "Sources that have been satisfactory hitherto," states the letter, "may become liable to pollution in consequence of the drouth. There is danger that the shortage from deep sources will be felt in some places with little previous indication or warning."

With the breaking of the 90-year record for moderate summers last May the subconscious protest of the punished populace has forced itself, in the last couple of weeks, into a vigorous demand for the scientific reason.

The remarkable hypothesis is advanced by scientific men that the American engineering feat of Henry M. Flagler in bringing Havana, Cuba, one day nearer New York fourteen years ago, through the construction of an 81-mile causeway of concrete and coral rock jutting into the Florida straits, is responsible for this recent idiosyncrasy of climate across the Atlantic. John Harrison of the Meteorological Observatory, Clapham, expresses the belief that this railroad which connects a series of small islands at the tail of Florida, has obstructed the natural channel of the huge current. Narrower than formerly, the channel causes the generation of more force to the flow. This concentration of the power of the current has deflected it from its natural channels and forced it a bit to the east. The divergence of the stream thus brought about is believed to be the cause of the climatic changes which have given warmer seasons to Southern England and Central Europe and is causing the drying up of the water reserves. The Gulf Stream and its mists and fogs supply Britain with rain.

"The course of the Gulf Stream has been changed within the last few years," says Harrison, "by the construction of a railroad 81 miles long, from the lower mainland of Florida to Key West. Although some part of this railway is constructed on piles, a great and increasing part consists of solid embankment, and the whole effect is to narrow considerably on its western side, the Florida Channel, the outlet through which the Gulf Stream flows, and thus at once to concentrate the waters of that stream and to give them a somewhat more easterly course."

Harrison adds that the center of the Gulf Stream formerly struck the west side of Ireland and then went along the west coast of Scotland, but that it now passes south of Ireland and runs straight up the English and Bristol channels. This, he suggests, accounts for the recent remarkable summers, and for the heat waves in the South of England, while there is frost in Glasgow. It also explains "the phenomenally low temperatures in the Shetlands during recent winters," and the recent invasion of the Bristol Channel by sharks.

Harrison prophesies that the change in the British climate will become even more marked with the conversion of the open parts of the Key West viaduct into solid embankments or by the process of silting up.

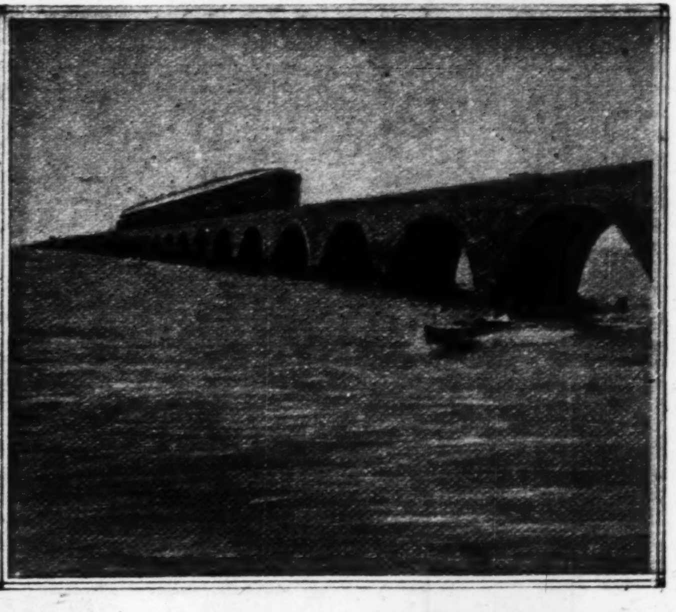
The viaduct spans 42 keys after leaving the North American continent a short distance south of Everglade, Fla., and starting on its way over the ocean. It reaches Kay Largo, which is 15 miles long, and from there jumps from key to key by means of massive masonry and embankments of cement and coral rock. The intervening water between the 42 keys varies from a few hundred feet to two miles or more and in depth from a few inches to 30 feet. The embankments are riprapped with rock to prevent washing and are defended by piles and every other device engineers could invent to protect the roadway from the attacks of the water.

The track on the causeway is 31 feet above high tide. Some of the keys which act as natural abuttments for the viaducts are very small, only an acre or so of sand that has been piled up by the action of the water on foundations of coral. Knight's Key, near the end of the causeway has a safe and almost landlocked harbor adding a formidable anchorage in the obstruction to the current. The longest of the viaducts of the causeway consists of 180 arches of fifty and sixty foot centers and 181 piers.

The work is a formidable barrier to the course of the Gulf Stream. For the last forty years the Gulf Stream has been an aggravating subject among scientists and the few who have attempted to explain its phenomena happily agree in their dissertations until they arrive with the subject off the Newfoundland Banks. There, in the physical fogs that lower and lift to the chagrin of navigators, they also enter a discursive fog that splits their course into opposed lanes of theory and conjecture. One school immediately drops the Gulf Stream as an effect on the climate of the British Islands and Western Europe, substituting the southwest winds of Europe, which they concede indirectly gain a certain warmth from the Gulf Stream. Another clan of theorists disposes of the idea of the ameliorating effect of the stream on the climate of Europe with the assertion that there are no facts to bear out the statements that any part of the Gulf Stream reaches the shores of Europe.

Another authority indicates that the warm waters from the Mississippi River, added to the stream, make their way across the Atlantic, radiating comfort to shores that otherwise would be frigid. And then offsetting the statement that there are no facts to prove the stream reaches the European side of the Atlantic, Sir Archibald Geikie contributes the assertion: "The Gulf Stream is distinctly traceable by its warmth into the Arctic seas."

Very little doubt is entertained at present that the current through the Strait of Yucatan into the Gulf of Mexico, one of the strongest on record, is due solely to the difference of the level between the Caribbean Sea and the gulf. But these waters do not tarry in the gulf, as its level is higher than that of the Atlantic. Consequently they are forced toward the Straits of Florida, where now they are said to be deflected by the Flagler engineering accomplishment. They continue to find an outlet, however, and enter the Atlantic as the Gulf Stream, a name first used by Franklin.



Viaduct that extends 81 miles into Florida Straits.

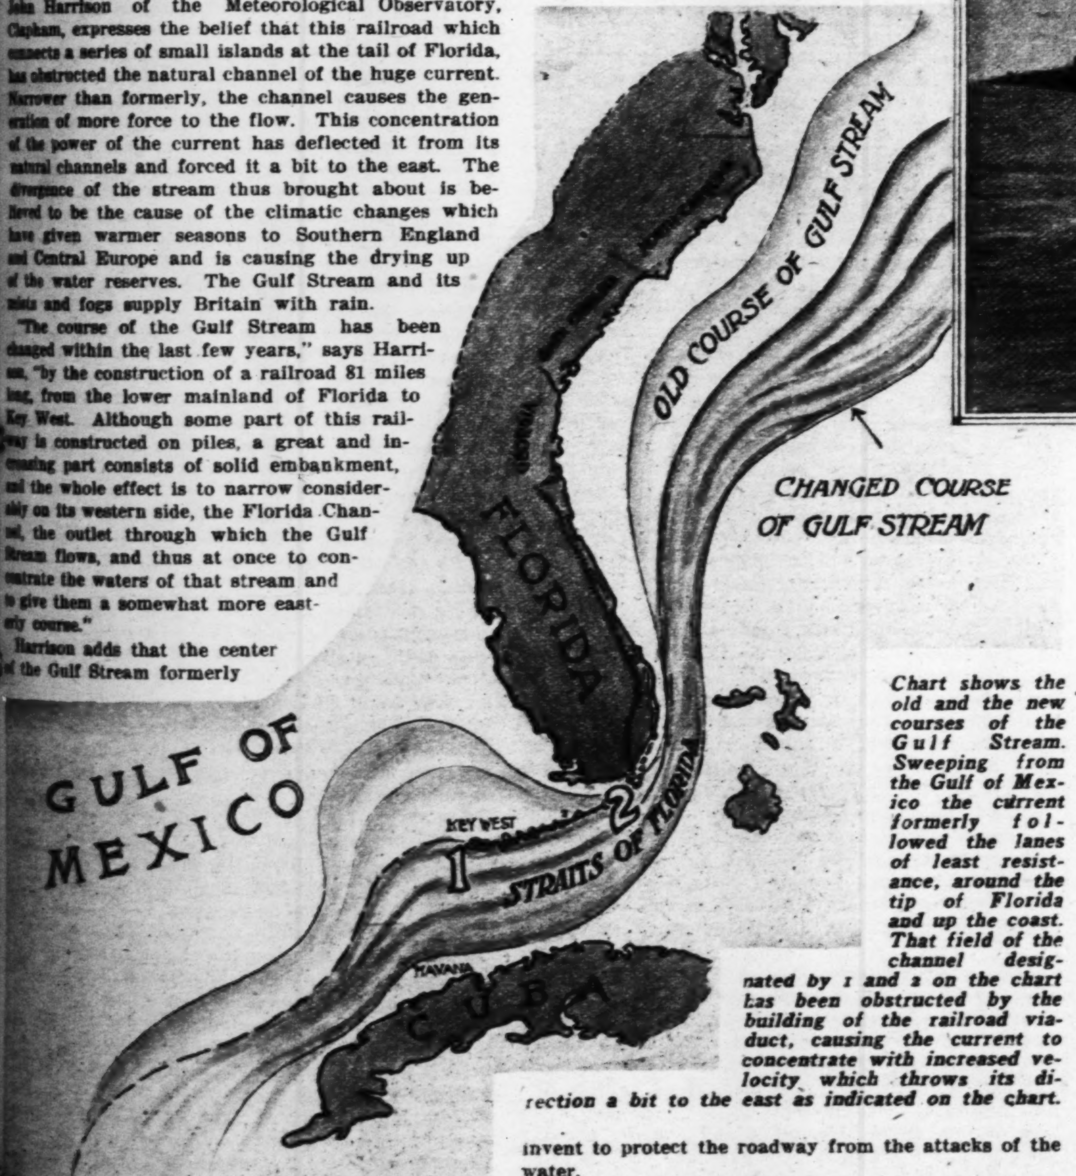


Chart shows the old and the new courses of the Gulf Stream. Sweeping from the Gulf of Mexico the current formerly followed the lanes of least resistance, around the tip of Florida and up the coast. That field of the channel designated by 1 and 2 on the chart has been obstructed by the building of the railroad viaduct, causing the current to concentrate with increased velocity which throws its direction a bit to the east as indicated on the chart.

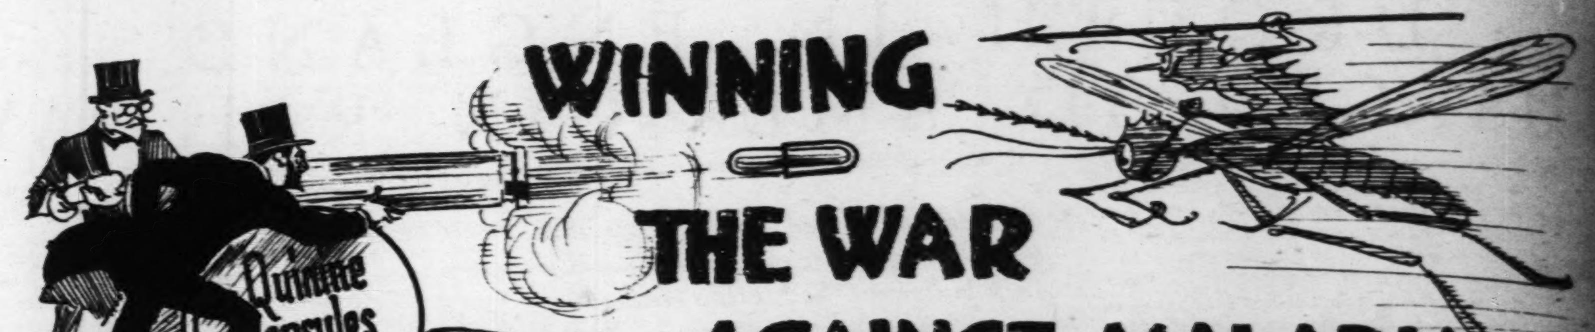
In the narrowest part of the channel, off Cape Florida, the current approaches the coast within 15 miles, occupies the entire width (forty miles) and depth (482 fathoms) of the channel and attains a velocity of 69 to 100 miles a day at the surface. After leaving the straits the stream moves northward with a depth of 460 to 270 fathoms and distant from the coast about 100 nautical miles. In latitude 34 degrees it enters the deep waters of the ocean; when off Cape Hatteras it again approaches the coast, being distant only 35 miles and in depths of more than 1500 fathoms. After leaving Hatteras it gradually changes its northeast direction into that of due east, with constantly diminishing velocity and temperature, until it reaches the southern edge of the bank of Newfoundland. Here it is no longer regarded as an ocean current but as a drift and is called the Gulf Stream Drift. The deflection of the stream toward the east is attributed partly to the rotation of the earth and partly to the prevailing winds.

The current leaves the Gulf of Mexico with a temperature of 86 degrees Fahrenheit. Off Charleston the temperature has dropped to an average of 75 degrees; off Hatteras, 72 degrees; southeast of Nantucket Shoals, 67 degrees; south of Nova Scotia, 62 degrees. In mid-Atlantic the drift is said to show a temperature of 75 degrees.

William Coles-Finch, resident engineer to the Brompton, Chatham, Gillingham and Rochester Water Co., in an article written previously to the Flagler construction, says: "The effect of this stream is that it brings us a temperature of 10 degrees Fahrenheit higher than we are entitled to by our latitude. Norway, by 16 degrees, and Spitzbergen, by 19 degrees, benefit by its warmth."



WINNING THE WAR AGAINST MALARIA

Health survey in which Rockefeller Foundation co-operates shows that agricultural drainage has done much toward eliminating the malarial mosquito in Southeast Missouri—House-to-house canvass of limited area proves that this ailment still leads all others in number of cases reported ::

LIVING in St. Louis is a middle-aged man who was born and reared in Southeast Missouri and who said the other day, when malaria was under discussion:

"When I was a boy I had chills and fever with almost clocklike regularity. If I happened to miss my every-other-day chill two or three times hand running, my folks would become alarmed lest something was wrong with my system and take me to the family doctor."

Most of us are familiar with the story of the man from Southeast Missouri who removed to Iowa and took part in a Republican meeting. A native Iowan, displeased at something the newcomer said, arose and denounced the latter as a Mugwump.

"I hain't a Mugwump!" protested the accused.

"Well, you look like a Mugwump."

"'Tain't so—I got malaria," explained the man from Southeast Missouri.

Malaria, however, is no joke. If you ever had it, you know! Some years ago a publicist circularized a number of professional men with this query:

"In your opinion, what single reform would be of most general benefit to the human race?"

The St. Louisan mentioned in the first paragraph of this article turned in this reply:

"The reformation, through elimination, of the malarial mosquito."

From which it is to be assumed that the Southeast Missouri native was a serious-minded man when he made that reply and a humorist when he uttered his boyhood reminiscence. In the latter instance he merely sought to emphasize the fact that in the old days malaria was such a common ailment in his native region that one who didn't have it regularly was something of a curiosity, which, very likely, was pretty much the case.

Now, in these more enlightened days, the world takes malaria altogether seriously—so seriously that the Rockefeller Foundation has been called upon to help Southeast Missouri, where the wiggletails have been wont to wiggle until they develop into the anepholine mosquito, which science recognizes as the carrier and distributor of the germ. The Rockefeller Foundation co-operated last year in a survey of the several counties constituting Southeast Missouri proper. It was a general health survey, but the bulk of the report filed at Jefferson City with the State Health Commissioner, Dr. Cortez F. Enloe, has to do with malaria.

The report shows up the malaria-carrying mosquito as a menace to health and life in this definite area. It presents facts and figures proving the indictment beyond doubt. It gives surprising statistics as to the prevalence of malarial ailments. It shows, happily, that the region known as "Missouri's Big Toe" and what may described as the foot and ankle of the State have done much in recent years toward elimination of the insect pest which causes all the trouble. It indicates, however, that much more is to be done in that direction.

Persons who lived in Butler, Dunklin, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Scott or Stoddard counties up to, let us say, a quarter of a century ago, will recall the universal ignorance as to the cause of malaria. Universal, in this instance, applied to the whole world. But it was in that section, the "Sunk Lands," topographically depressed by the great earthquake of more than a century ago, and corporeally and spiritually depressed by "ager," that malaria persisted with a vehemence perhaps more notable than was the case anywhere else in the Mississippi Valley. Our St. Louis commentator, who has been away from there long enough to crack a joke at the expense of his boyhood miseries, recalls that the chief article of diet at his family table was quinine.

"In many families," he states, "it was quinine and whisky, the latter being taken to make the former palatable. In our family, my father being a preacher, we had to take it straight—the quinine, I mean. My revered and reverend father used to eat it with his knife. He would come to the breakfast table and, immediately after asking the blessing, open the big bottle of quinine that stood between the butter and the sorghum molasses, insert the virgin blade of his case-knife, collect thereon a large quantity of the white powder, then do an expert sword-swallowing act, followed by a bracer of cold water from the spring. 'Now, children,' father would say, 'take your medicine!'

"Sometimes the children rebelled, and mother—good soul!—would wrap the bitter dose in apple butter, which made a quinine sandwich not altogether unpalatable, if you knew how to swallow it without breaking the cover. I remember vividly the day when father brought home from St. Louis a big box of capsules—I think ours was the first family in Southeast Missouri to discover that happy invention—and we children set to work filling the little receptacles with the hated medicine. At first we swore we couldn't swallow the capsules, but soon we learned the trick. Neighbors used to come in, when the capsule era was new, and watch us do it, after predicting that we'd choke ourselves to death. When they failed to see us die they bought some capsules for themselves. I recall one old codger who was happy because now he could take his quinine and whisky separate.

"There were several varieties of malaria, but you couldn't take your choice. You had to take whatever variety 'took' with you. My particular specialty was the 'chills-and-fever ager' of the every-other-day variety. Most of the folks in our section, I think, had 'em that way. When it so happened that you had your chill on Saturday you could go to church Sunday feeling fairly well, though the sure knowledge that you would be shaking on Monday till your teeth rattled in their sockets interfered somewhat with divine worship. Tuesday you could go to school, or work, or go fishing, but Wednesday you'd chill and shake, then feverize and burn up again. Friday was your unlucky day again.

"Some folks had what they called third-day chills—two days between for recuperation. That made 'em look less like Mugwumps than the rest of us. I don't think it was fair at all.

"And thus, for years on end, the thousands of us suffered, not knowing that the cause of the trouble was a pesky little buzzer that came around usually in the cool of the evening and deposited the virus in our systems by perforating our skins. Folks down there attributed malaria to various causes. Some thought that eating cucumbers caused it. Others declared that watermelons were guilty. Still others said the mists of evening and early morning caused it."

The survey in which the Rockefeller Foundation took part shows that since 1911 there has been in that area a gradual decrease in the ravages of the disease. Nevertheless, the report states definitely that the mortality from malaria in that area is much higher than in any other part of the United States, so that Missouri's Big Toe and its vicinity still hold the undesirable championship if the doctors and the statisticians are accurate.

The survey covers the last five months of 1921 and was made by the Division of Rural Sanitation of Missouri, which is operated jointly by the State Board of Health, the United States Public Health Service and the International Health Board. Dr. Mark F. Boyd of the last-named board signs the report. With him in the active work was Dr. V. M. Zeigler of the Federal Health Service. They had some aid from State Health Commissioner Enloe, Dr. Thomas Parran Jr., director of rural sanitation for this State, and Dr. L. D. Fricks of the Federal Health Service.

After a preliminary reconnaissance of the seven counties named above, says Dr. Boyd, "It was concluded that a strip of territory 24 miles long and six miles wide, extending east and west, with Sikeston at the middle of the southern boundary, would be a fairly representative area. Of the 144 square miles, 36 lie in the recently drained swamp lands of Stoddard County, where settlement and clearing are just beginning; 36 lie on the opposite side of Little River, in Scott County, where drainage, clearing and settlement cover a much longer period of time; while the balance lies in Scott and Mississippi counties, including territory which, while long reclaimed, is of entirely different character. It represents about 3.6 per cent of the area of this group of counties and includes about 2 per cent of the entire rural population. In this territory a house-to-house canvass was made of all the rural homes, the purpose being to collect accurate and complete information regarding the health of the residents and the sanitation of the homes. The data presented in this report was secured from Stoddard and Scott counties."

The population whose health census was taken in these two counties numbers 2110. It was learned that 443 cases of illness occurred during the first 10 months of 1921. Systemic infections were: Malaria, 267 cases, a proportion of 126 to each 1000 persons; typhoid, 6 cases, a proportion of 2.9; whooping cough, 5 cases, a proportion 2.9; diphtheria, 8 cases, proportion 3.8; chicken pox, 6 cases, proportion [illegible] Thus it is seen that malaria was so far in advance of all other systemic infections in the number of cases that it became at once the chief subject of the survey. All other causes of sickness also were considered, malaria still leading.

"It has been responsible," says Dr. Boyd, "for 60 per cent of the total illness, and has attacked 12 per cent of the population. If we bear in mind the fact that malaria has been constantly encountered in this region since its settlement, though greatly diminished of recent years, as well as the fact that but rarely do we encounter any single disease attacking so large a proportion of the population (except in periods of extensive epidemics, such as the recent epidemic of influenza), we get a clearer idea of its importance in this portion of Missouri, and must conclude that in public health importance it overshadows all other diseases."

After considering typhoid, diphtheria and other systemic infections, Dr. Boyd says: "Malaria is likewise a germ disease, but differs from those previously considered in that the germs are conveyed from person to person only by the agency of mosquitoes of a certain kind, known as anophelines. As you are all aware, these mosquitoes, as do all other mosquitoes, develop from the familiar wiggle-tails found in water, the eggs laid there by the female mosquitoes.

"There is an overwhelming amount of evidence to indicate that the present-day incidence of malaria in this region is but a small fraction of that observed in past years."

No data are available prior to 1911, and none for 1912. Statistics for each county in 1911 and 1920 are given here, being the death rate from malaria per 10,000 population: Butler, 1911, 21 deaths, 1920, 8.2 deaths; Dunklin, 33.3, 8.5; Mississippi, 4.9, 7.1; New Madrid, 14.4, 2.7; Pemiscot, 13.8, 2.6; Scott, 8.9, .4; Stoddard, 11.8, 2.7. These figures indicate the great improvement in malarial control in a decade. Mississippi County alone shows an increase, but for 1913 the number of deaths there was 12 to the 10,000 population, 1911 being for some reason a low-malaria year.

"Since, unfortunately, these data," says the report, "do not carry us sufficiently far into the past to give us an idea of the former prevalence of malaria in all of these counties, we shall have to judge its early incidence from one or two instances. Drainage for the purpose of agricultural reclamation was, as far as we can ascertain, first begun in Scott County about [illegible] and soon extended to Mississippi and New Madrid counties. The influence of drainage on the prevalence of malaria in these counties was therefore well marked several years before records of deaths were kept.

"On the other hand, drainage in Dunklin County on a large scale was initiated by the Little River [illegible] whose operations began in 1914 and reduced the area of swamp lands by 60 per cent. Prior to 1914 the malaria death rate was in excess of 30 per 10,000 population. Since that date it has declined steadily, the rate for 1920 being 8.3 per 10,000, a reduction of about [illegible] per cent. If judged by the effect of drainage in Scott County a still greater decline may be expected, as drainage is extended, to somewhere in the neighborhood of 2 per 10,000.

"As far as may be judged by the present evidence we may say in a broad way that agricultural drainage, as at present practiced in this district, has effected a reduction in the incidence of malaria, as judged by the deaths, of more than 90 per cent."

It is concluded that "further limitation of the numbers of anopheline mosquitoes is an impractical task, and proper building and screening of houses are recommended as measures of protection. The survey shows that people living in tight houses, with good screens, had only 5.9 cases of malaria to the 100 population, while those living in open houses, unscreened, had 21.8 such cases in the period covered.

"It is highly important," says Dr. Boyd, "that a person suffering from an attack of malaria receive sufficient treatment to destroy all the germs in the body, thereby preventing relapses, and also preventing the infection of any mosquitoes which may happen to bite them. Stopping the chills does not constitute a cure. The best authorities on malaria in the United States advise the taking of 30 grains of quinine daily until the chills are stopped, and thereafter taking [illegible] grains every evening for eight weeks, as the best means of insuring a cure."

Back to Adam and Eve in 1922

A Canadian Major, D. S. O., and his wife find Eden on Scottish coast, live in a cave, garb themselves scantily in rush-kilts, find their own food and cook it by friction-made fire, but they get cold feet long before the end of their ten days of living the primitive life of the "first pair"—London newspaper reporter goes along to record the experiment in a journalistic joy-log :: :: :: ::

BACK to Methuselah is a phantasmagorial fancy flight by George Bernard Shaw, but back to Adam and Eve is an accomplished fact. It has been done! It was done in the merry month of June, this year. It was done by Maj. and Mrs. John McEwan; and Mrs. McEwan. to say nothing of the Major, is mighty glad it's done and over with.

Maj. McEwan is a Canadian. He led one of the famous charges at Vimy Ridge and was honored with the D. S. O. He is in his middle forties; his wife is 39. Since the war they have been living in London. About a month ago they grew so weary of the grime and grind of civilization that they determined to chuck it all.

"Let's go out and find the Garden of Eden," suggested Adam, "and live happily ever afterward."

"Let's," assented Eve. "Whither thou goest I will go, and thy home shall be my home. even though it be but a camp under the open sky or a cave in the rocks."

As it happened, Eden turned out to be the latter. Accompanied by a newspaper reporter—now what do you think o' that?—Adam and Eve went forth into the wilds and discovered Eden. On the coast of Scotland they found it, far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife; so far, in fact, that it was several hours' voyage by rowboat from the nearest human settlement.

The theory, of course, was that Adam and Eve were the only humans anywhere. They tolerated the reporter, a bright young man representing the London Daily Express, only because they had to. Journalism refused flatfooted to permit the story of the "first pair" to go unrecorded. The record in Genesis has seemed inadequate ever since it was written, there having been nobody present to take notes.

Adam and Eve and the reporter arrived at Eden by rowboat. Adam carried a knapsack containing a skin carriage rug, an ax, hanks of horsehair and a few fishhooks. These concessions to modernity they kept for use in Eden. All their present-day garments and other appurtenances they packed in the knapsack, not to be opened until the Serpent should drive the pair from paradise.

In a cave of the rocks Adam and Eve disrobed, and when they reappeared in the open they were clad only in girdles of rushes, with abbreviated kilts made of the same native material, and in the case of Eve with what may be described as a rush job covering her bosom. That was all. No footgear, no headgear, legs, arms, backs bare, tender toes left naked to the cruel shards of the harsh Scottish coast.

The reporter, late each afternoon, rowed back to partial civilization, where he got lodgings and meals. Adam and Eve, the first evening in Eden, were left busy in pursuit of food and planning furniture for their cave apartment. They floored it with pine stems and carpeted it knee-deep in dry bracken.

When the reporter boated back to Eden next morning he found Adam and Eve preparing their breakfast. It was a rather late breakfast, too, but that was not because Adam and Eve had slept late. They hadn't. Bugs got in the bracken bed, bugs of the sandcrab variety and of other varieties not known to indoor life. Moreover, Adam and Eve found it necessary to get up early, leaving aside the bugs: they had to go out and hustle for their breakfast.

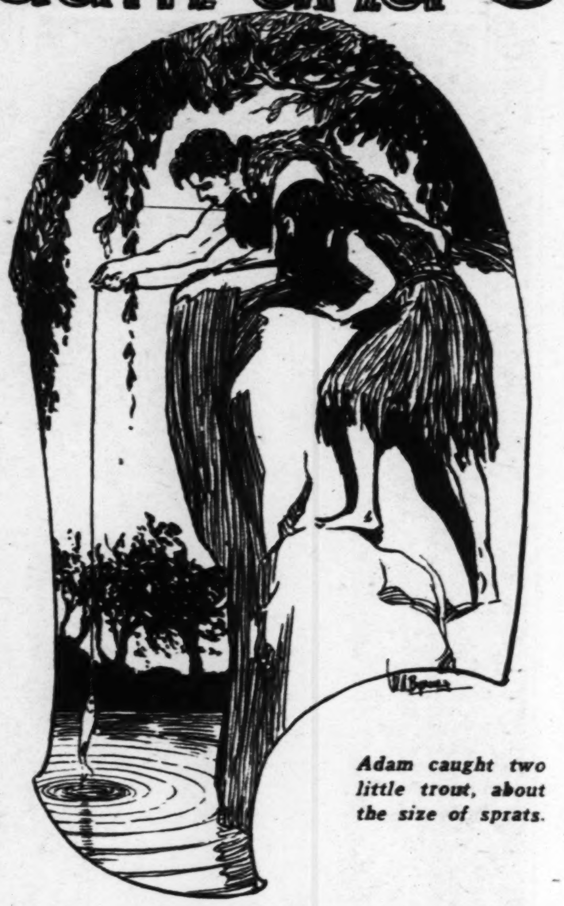
Adam caught two little trout, about the size of sprats, however sizeable sprats may be. Then there was the kitchen fire to be lighted. Adam, dutiful husband, was lighting the fire when the reporter arrived. He was rubbing two sticks together, to produce fire by friction. The operation required about twenty minutes.

Meanwhile, the reporter, just out of a downy couch and full of a savory breakfast, stood by. In his pocket was a box of matches. He produced a cigarette case, took one, struck a match and lighted his smoke, blowing the aroma in the direction of Adam, down on hands and knees trying to get his fire started.

"Have one?" said the reporter, proffering the cigarette case.

"No," protested Adam; "and please be considerate enough to blow your smoke the other way."

"Oh, I remember," said the reporter. "When Adam was in Eden, Sir Walter Raleigh had not returned from America with the smoking habit. I forgot. Beg pardon, Adam."



Adam caught two little trout, about the size of sprats.

"If you offer me another cigarette, or stand there again with that box of matches when I'm trying my d—my best to make a friction fire, I'll brain you with my ax!" threatened Adam.

Finally the fire blazed up, the twigs having caught, and presently there was a bed of red coals. Eve came forward. bearing two mud pies. She had encased the two fishes in mud. Adam put the pies into the bed of coals to bake. It was a tedious process, and several times Adam burned his fingers when he lifted out the mud pies to test them and see if the fishes were done. Ultimately they were ready to serve, and Eve served them daintily, on a flat stone for Adam and a piece of bark for herself.

"They're great!" cried Adam, after eating his fish.

"Couldn't be better," agreed Eve.

"I had oatmeal porridge, ham and eggs, hot biscuits, coffee with cream and sugar, and a side dish of flapjacks for my breakfast," remarked the reporter.

"Shut up!" yelled Adam.

"Oh, I beg pardon," said the reporter. "Too early thus to introduce the snake of temptation into Eden, eh?"

Adam, using the back of his hand—the hand that he had waved at the head of his charging legion at Vimy Ridge—as a napkin, wiped the fish scales from his face and then went off into the woods to set some traps. Rabbits were the expectation. Eve ran down seaward and found a couple of mussels. These were baked for noonday luncheon, the embers of the breakfast fire having been tended carefully. Noonday luncheons in Eden are light.

And there's no afternoon tea at all! Eve, who had the habit, looked a bit pensive about 4 p. m., but Adam made a cup out of a curly piece of bark, scooped up some water from a nearby spring and brought the draft to his helpmeet.

"Hey, Adam!" called the reporter, "I've got a flask of native Scotch in my pocket—the real article. Have a swig?"

He produced the flask. Adam turned up his nose.

"Is it possible," asked the reporter, "that Eden was the first prohibition country, instead of the United States of America?"

"Avaunt, foul fiend!" screeched Adam. "Avaunt, ere I heave this prehistoric boulder at your base head!"

"Well, how do you like Eden, Mrs. Adam?" politely inquired the reporter.

"I find it charming here," Eve replied. "Such glorious sunrises and sunsets! Living near to nature's heart, where all is natural and unsullied, is delightful. I have always yearned for this kind of a life."

"It's great!" put in Adam. "Tomorrow we'll have rabbit stew for dinner."

"But, Jack," said Eve, "how in the world can we have rabbit stew when there's nothing in which to stew the rabbit?"

"Never thought o' that," Adam replied. "Well, baked rabbit, then. We can bake it in mud, as we did the fishes. Tastes fine that way."

"At the little Scotch inn, where I put up," the reporter blurted, "they're going to have roast goose for dinner tomorrow, with all the trimmings—you know what! The landlady told me so this morning. She's a cook that could teach the Hotel Savoy chef his business, too."

Adam, when the journalistic wretch began this revelation, had shouldered his ax and gone into the woods to chop fuel for the morrow. Eve, if a newspaper man is to be believed, winked at the reporter as Adam strode off.

"I begin to fear, Mrs Adam," said the tempter, "that you are weakening. You belong, as you know, to the weaker sex."

Eve flared up. "Woman is not the weaker sex," she declared. "That is a fiction, male-made. Woman votes now, anyhow."

"In Eden?"

"No. in England."

"Madame Eve, what do you, in Eden, know of England? My understanding has been that you are not supposed to be conscious of any country or anything else outside of Eden."

"What a fawnciful young man you are!" was Eve's sole comment; and she darted down the rocky road to the beach, hoping for at least one mussel for the next meal.

When the reporter reached Eden the second day thereof, he found Adam and Eve shivering, blue with cold. During the night the mercury had gone down many degrees.

"I fancy," remarked Adam, "that if we had chosen some warmer climate for our return to nature, it might have been wiser."

"Yes. no doubt," admitted the reporter; "but don't upbraid yourself, Adam—you're young, you know, only two days old, and long before you get as old as Methuselah you'll have learned wisdom."

The reporter, being humanitarian, rowed back to his lodgings and got two bearskin rugs. These he presented to Adam and Eve, who accepted them and donned them for cold-weather wear.

"You see," defended Adam, "we couldn't think of all contingencies."

A day or two later when the reporter arrived at Eden he found Adam and Eve dripping wet. They had built their home in a dry channel. Rain had fallen. The water rushed through their rushes—nighties, you know—and made their dry-bracken bed exceedingly wet.

After half a dozen days in Eden the reporter was invited to spend the week-end with Adam and Eve. He was to fetch along his own food; the hosts were to provide the bedchamber and the bed. They put him up in a section of the cave where chipmunks, snakes and other vermin overran him. Next morning the Serpent entered Eden at last. Adam was discovered chasing a snake, with Eve—we were going to say with Eve holding up her skirts in horror; but there were no skirts in Eden. Adam dispatched the Serpent, which was about a foot long, with a stout stick, and tossed the remains at Eve.

"Wow!" screamed Eve. "Jack, however could you do it?"

"You seem," Adam had said to the reporter when the latter arrived the evening before, "to have brought along a considerable supply of food for yourself. You must be a rather hearty eater, don't you know."

"I thought maybe"——

"Now, look here," said Adam; "if you offer us any of your food you're not welcome here. Get thee behind me, Satan!"

Nevertheless, when the reporter spread out his layout of choice viands at breakfast time, Adam and Eve were prevailed upon to accept a few tasty morsels. They ate gingerly at first, but owing to the fact that fishing and trapping were doing quite poorly they had no breakfast for themselves, so in the end they fell to and devoured the surplus.

According to Genesis, the universe was created in six days. Eden, the Eden of 1922, was created and ran its course in ten days. When the reporter arrived on the morning of the tenth day he found Adam and Eve garbed again as Maj. and Mrs. McEwan.

Leaf from the journalist's joy-log:

"These people went to bed Adam and Eve and awakened Maj. and Mrs. McEwan. They went to bed thinking about tomorrow's half-cooked rabbit. They awakened thinking about two tickets to London. Such is life, even in Eden!

"'Glad you've come early!' cried Maj. McEwan. 'We want the boat; we're off home.'

"'Then all this wild, hairy business is over, and you really mean to see a barber?'

"'Yes,' smiled Adam.

"'Then there's no rule now against smoking?'

"He made a mad, cave-man dash at me and sat down to enjoy his first smoke for ten days.

"'It's like this,' he explained. 'We have stuck it for ten days out here, mostly in vile weather. We have lived on what I could trap, we have slept out covered only by skins, and I think that we have proved what we set out to prove—that a healthy modern man and woman can shake off civilization and return to the hard life of our earliest ancestors. Modern life has not destroyed the ability to fight the elements and to fight for the daily bread.'

"I asked Eve if she were sorry to say good-by to Eden.

"'It will be wonderful,' she replied, 'to sleep in a real bed tonight, to use face cream tomorrow, and a brush and comb and soap; but many a time in London I shall catch myself thinking of all this. It's been all, and more than, I hoped for.'"

THE LOSER IN ROMANCE OF WAR, LOVE, POVERTY

days of 1920. The Red fury was sweeping over Russia. Revolution and counter revolution had been sweeping over the country. Thousands had left their homes in Central Russia and fled to the southern provinces along the Black Sea and the Sea of Azov, where there was some measure of safety for refugees so long as Gen. Wrangel could continue to hold the bolshevist armies in check.

Suffering incredible hardships the Mouromsky family traveled 800 miles, mainly on foot, from Moscow to Yalta, arriving there at a time when the Wrangel forces were still in control but hard beset by the Red fighters.

Here there was a menace that haunted the waking hours of the family and disturbed their rest with frightful dreams at night. The girl, Liubov, was the burden of their conscious and unconscious thoughts. Terrible things might happen to a young and inadequately protected daughter of strangers during that last desperate fight between the old and the new regimes for the mastery of Russia. The peril might come from either quarter, for the fierce and fiery Cossacks of the Wrangel command were not less ruthless than those who battled under the Red flag.

It was while the stress of this fear bore strongly on the members of the Mouromsky family that they met a young officer, Lieut. Vonsiatsky of a Cossack Uhlan regiment, who at once struck them as being different from his compatriots. He was young, handsome and chivalrous and, more to the point, he was of Polish birth, a young man of good manners and refinement wholly alien to the natures of most of his hard-riding, reckless fighters.

Here was a natural protector for the attractive young woman whose safety had given her family so much concern. He cheerfully agreed to see that no harm was done to the Mouromsky family. This guardianship necessitated frequent visits, and a friendship sprang up between the fine-looking young officer and the fair daughter of the house. It soon appeared that the best guarantee of protection would be a marriage between them.

Primarily it was a marriage of convenience so far as the Mouromsky family was concerned—a measure which would relieve them of the horrible anxiety for the well-being of the daughter of the house. At the time she also may have so regarded it, but, now that she has lost her husband and another has won him in a far-off land, she finds that she really loves him and she will resist his threatened effort to have the authorities of the Greek Orthodox Church in America annul the ceremony which made her Vonsiatsky's wife in Russia.

She has kept in close touch with the movements of Vonsiatsky since he went to America and she is familiar with all that has been printed about the strange romance which in that land of opportunity transformed him from a factory hand to the husband of a woman of great wealth.

It was in Paris, in 1919, that Mrs. Stephens first met young Vonsiatsky when she was doing war work there. Through her influence and that of other Americans then in Paris an arrangement was made by which he emigrated to America and found a job waiting for him at the Baldwin locomotive works in Philadelphia.

The Russian wife, living in Paris in humble quarters, smiles rather ironically when she recalls having read that when Vonsiatsky went to work at the locomotive plant he arrived there in a limousine and accompanied by a stylishly gowned woman, presumably Mrs. Stephens. This was early in 1920.

In Paris she learned of the American marriage before the fact of the Russian marriage became known in America. She at once made known her status as Vonsiatsky's wife.

Vonsiatsky, when besieged by American reporters and asked about the first marriage, did not deny it, but asserted that the bride whom he led to the altar in Yalta was a Jewess. He explained that the city had just been captured from the bolsheviki and the feeling against the Jews ran high. There was danger of a pogrom, he said, and he decided to give the beautiful young Jewess a Christian name to save her life.

An interview with the young Russian woman was a difficult matter for a Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine writer. She is perfectly willing to talk of her marriage with Vonsiatsky, which she says took place two years ago at Yalta, Crimea, but she speaks only Russian—not a word of English and only the slightest of pidgin French which she has picked up during her short stay in Paris.

The charge made by Vonsiatsky himself and friends of the former Mrs. Stephens that Mlle. Liubov Mouromsky is a Jewess and therefore could not have legally married a Christian in Russia is easily disproven. Documents seem to show that the couple were married in the Crimea on Jan. 31, 1920, in a perfectly orthodox Russian manner. There is proof, too, that the girl's father gave, on several occasions, stained-glass windows to various Christian Russian churches in Russia and their relatives in Europe have always been known as orthodox Russians and never as Jews.

Let it be set down, then, that on Jan. 31, 1920, Anastase Vonsiatsky, at that time a young and very minor officer—described as a "Juncker of squadron cadets of the Nicola Cavalry School"—in the forces of Gen. Wrangel which were seeking to overthrow the Reds, went through some sort of a marriage ceremony with Liubov Manielovna Mouromsky in the Russian Cathedral at Yalta and afterwards lived with her as his wife there. Later, from Paris, he wrote her and ordered her, as his wife, to join him, if letters which she has are authentic. At the time of the ceremony the bride was 19 years of age and Vonsiatsky 21.

Granting that the ceremony took place—and there seems no reason to doubt it did—Vonsiatsky apparently must rely only upon the chaotic conditions in Russia at that time to make any sort of a contract, marriage or otherwise, binding. In all probability it would be extremely difficult for the young woman in Paris calling herself his wife to actually establish her claims legally in the courts of a foreign country, whatever moral and legal rights she may have in Russia. If Mrs. Stephens-Vonsiatsky stands by her husband financially in any battle in the courts the Russian girl will have a hard time getting anywhere. In Paris her story is thoroughly believed by the extremely clannish colony of Russian refugees and by the American friends she has made.

So much, then, for the matter as it now stands. Just what the Russian girl says took place is best told by herself.

A Post-Dispatch correspondent found her and her father in the little room on the top floor of an unpretentious building on Boulevard Haussmann. Let it be understood that the word "boulevard" in Paris does not of itself carry any distinction as to neighborhood. No. 177 Boulevard Haussmann is not a residence section of the wealthy and the one room in which the girl and her father live is really an attic room such as is given over to the servants of the people who live on the lower floors and who can afford servants. Through a rather complicated system of translating from Russian into French and from French into English the girl talked freely to the correspondent. Her father, who is always present when she discusses her affairs with strangers, remains always quiet.

"I met Vonsiatsky in Yalta," said the girl, with a toss of her rather head, which is with a mass of brown hair. "We were both very young, more than children, and I was swept off my feet by his appearance. He was handsome and dashing an ardent love maker he was fighting to the horrible revolutionists who had driven my father and me from our home who were destroying country.

"We had escaped the revolutionists with a little money and jewelry and we were living very quietly and tired when Gen. Wrangel came there. He was be the savior of Russia and his officers were ous. In a short time Vonsiatsky and I were but by no means secretly, married in the cathedral the regular Russian orthodox manner. You will from my marriage certificate that this is true."

Here she displayed the document in question, she permitted the Post-Dispatch correspondent tograph, always, however, keeping a close watch it. The document is duly witnessed and signed declares that the contracting parties are entering their first marriage.

"Then came Gen. Wrangel's terrible reverses were forced to flee again, this time to Constantinople, where Vonsiatsky went with us, always as my band," she continued. "There was no work for Vonsiatsky there and after a few months he went to In the meantime my father took our little money and started in the business with which he familiar—making jams and sweets. prospered in a small way, but soon the sugar supply failed and the business became very bad.

"From Paris Vonsiatsky wrote me. First he asked me to join him and then he ordered me, as his wife, to come to him. I wrote my husband I would come if he could secure the necessary passports for myself and my father, but he had had some sort of financial difficulties with the Russian authorities, such as they were, in Paris and could not make the arrangements.

"I heard from friends that he had met and become very attentive to some rich American woman in Paris, but this he denied. Then he went to America and I understand his landing in your country was made possible by influential Americans who got him through your immigration offices easily enough.

"From America he wrote me frequent denials of any attachment for the lady, whose name I learned was Mrs. Stephens."

Here the Russian girl produced letters which she said were from Vonsiatsky and which contained such phrases as: "Live happily. There is nothing between me and Mrs. Stephens." "Be faithful, even though you have had time to forget your husband in America."

"And then I read in the papers of his marriage. At first I did not believe it, but soon there came another letter from him which confirmed all."

This letter the Russian girl also produced. "You know the awful struggle in life I am trying to overcome," it ran. "I am forced by necessity into this marriage. Keep our secret forever and destroy all letters. If you are questioned just say that it is all a mummery."

"Later representatives of someone in America approached my brother-in-law, Edouard de Braz, who lives with his wife, my sister, in Prague, and offered him money to make an affidavit that I was a Jewess, to permit the annulment of my marriage by the Russian church. A letter from my husband offered me $40 a week for the remainder of my life to keep quiet.

"But I cannot keep quiet. I am still very young and my whole life to come, my reputation and everything which is dear to me depends upon my establishing the fact that I am really Mme. Vonsiatsky and that Mrs. Stephens has no moral or legal right to call herself by that name. It may take a long time, but I will never give up. The courts move slowly, but before long I will be established. I have been told that I can get justice in the courts of America and I will leave no stone unturned to do so. I do not think the Russian church in America will ever annul my marriage, now that the facts are known."

The marriage of the Russian girl to protect her from the license of war recalls a famous instance of similar chivalry which, however, had a happier ending. One of the most gallant officers in the English army in the Peninsular War from 1808 to 1814, was Gen. Sir Henry George Wakelyn Smith, more familiarly known to his comrades as Harry Smith.

In April, 1812, after the storming of Badajos, Spain, a well-born Spanish lady presented herself at the British lines asking protection from the soldiery for herself and her sister, 14 years old, who accompanied her. The sister's name was Juana Maria de Los Dolores de Leon. She had but recently come from a convent. The requested protection was given. A few days later Gen. Smith and the girl were married. She remained with him throughout the remainder of the war, accompanying the baggage train, sleeping in the open on the field of battle, riding freely among the troops and sharing all the privations of campaigning. She accompanied her husband later when he campaigned in Africa. Ladysmith in Natal was named for her and Harrismith in the Orange Free State was named for the General.

Our Middle West as It Impressed an English Writer

An article by IAN HAY in the London Express

I WAS greatly struck in America with the large numbers of young people, both boys and girls, in the audiences which witnessed "Tilly of Bloomsbury" during the run of that play in New York and Chicago. Finally, I asked some of them why they were there, and the answer was:

"We know so little about English home life," they said, "especially the life of English boys and girls of 18 or 19."

"Almost as little," I replied, "as our boys and girls know about you."

It is strange what distorted notions Young England and Young America harbor about one another. Our homes, especially. I think very few of us realize that Americans have homes at all. We picture them working in offices, or flying up and down in elevators, or shouting at baseball matches. The trouble is that few Englishmen, old or young, can ever visualize the America that lies beyond the skyscrapers of New York. New York is not America at all. It is a cosmopolitan excrescence. Not 50 per cent of its inhabitants are American born. To know America you must look right past all this—to the country districts of Massachusetts, with their old colonial atmosphere still jealously guarded; to the great Middle West, with its innumerable small towns; to the South, with its ancient class distinctions; to the perpetual sunshine and democratic equality of California—to the whole provincial life, in fact, of a nation of a hundred million people.

I wish I could show you one of those small towns. I am acquainted with some hundreds of them; and some of the most kindly, simple and unworldly people in the world live there. They are none of them rich, as our ideas of American riches go. They all live in houses of about the same size—comfortable, white-painted, wooden houses, with broad verandas—set on either side of a wide street, well shaded by trees. Each house stands in its own plot, or lot—usually a plain grass plot—and there are no fences or divisions between one lot and another. Everyone knows everyone else. The Americans are essentially a stay-at-home race. Except in the wealthy society of the great cities, American boys and girls are never sent away to boarding school. There are such places on the English model—but for the very few. Brothers and sisters stay "right home," as they say, until they marry.

Home life in America is simple and unpretentious. In the first place, there are very few servants to be had. That means that housekeeping and cooking are kept down to a simple basis.

All meals are early meals. Breakfast is never later than 8 o'clock; usually sooner. Lunch is at noon. There is no such thing as afternoon tea (as I know to my sorrow), and the evening meal is usually taken about 6. Butcher's meat is very little eaten in America; in that invigorating climate no one needs it. The staple articles of food are chicken, in every form; eggs, in every form; hot bread, ice cream and strong coffee.

The American boy has no imperial duties or leaning. So he lives at home, where his mother sees that he gets at least enough to eat, and attends the local high school, where boys and girls are educated together. Here he learns no more and no less than any schoolboy ever did, and develops into a fine, healthy, very athletic specimen.

The main difference between the American and the British schoolboy is the difference between the American soldier and the British soldier—differences which I was able to study from personal observation during the war. The American soldier is very brave, full of initiative, and admirable at indirect attack. The English soldier, on the other hand, excels in his extraordinary endurance under conditions of hardship, and his ability to stick his toes in and let his opponent tire himself out. Physically this parallel is the same. The American has the physique, the Englishman the stamina. That pretty well describes the difference between the English and the American schoolboy.

In manner and bearing the American boy differs from his opposite number over here by his self-possession in the presence of women and girls. He is much more used to female society than we are, because he rarely gets away from it; consequently he is much more dependent upon it. He marries early—and with less preliminary tribulation than we do. In fact, at the age of 21 or so he usually marries the girl from next door, and there is an end of it. You might almost say that the outstanding features of American small-town life are young married couples and Ford cars.

A Castle Which Cost Twenty Cents

With materials washed up by the sea, Louis Dart has constructed a stanch dwelling above beach near Los Angeles, and he calls it Flotsam Castle — The one cash purchase was of shingle nails, when needed in a hurry — Now he bakes pies, on a small stove salvaged from wrecked yacht, and serves them on round tables made from the ends of cable spools, also brought by the tide opportunely—Sick and penniless, this former Nebraska lawyer found everything he needed, free ::

THE cost of building, high or low, has no significance to Louis Dart. He has demonstrated that it can be overcome though material magnates boost prices to the limit. At the edge of the Pacific Ocean, above Redondo Beach, near Los Angeles, he has reared himself a towering citadel, thrice reconstructed and enlarged it, and laid out but 20 cents in actual money! Because of the character of its composition he calls it Flotsam Castle, and it carries the name with dignity. Everything that entered into its makeup he culled from the booming sea, and the same element cast up not only the exterior trimmings but all the interior furnishings. It afforded Mr. Dart the opportunity to prove the adage "All things come to him who waits." His evidence is conclusive.

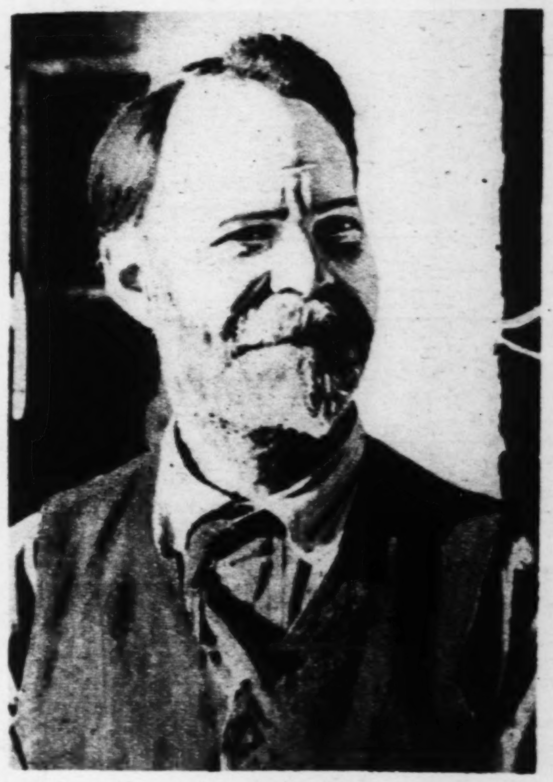
Not only did Mr. Dart acquire a strange and comfortable driftwood domicile, but in the course of assembling it he built himself up from a near corpse to a man so vigorously healthy that he avers he "couldn't be killed with an ax." His health shattered and his savings in the pockets of doctors, he lay himself down to die in the very cove where his home now nestles by the rock buttresses of a lofty sandhill shore. He "came back" and likes to relate his experience. It has been an inspiration to many; and his visitors' book shows that they have come from every state in the Union except South Carolina, every great city of the world, and various remote countries—for through the tourists the fame of the bizarre castle and its philosophical laird was swiftly spread. Pie had something to do with it, too.

Louis Dart, graduate of an Iowa law college, practiced his profession in Nebraska and the Middle West until he fell ill, lost his voice through weakness and no longer was able to plead at the bar. Then the doctors had their inning for years, he says. They told him he had Bright's disease, and gave him up when his funds were exhausted. He drifted further West, cooked in mining and construction camps when able, even serving in the army in this capacity at Camp Funston, and finally went to work on a great Southern California ranch. There, on the sands near Redondo Beach, came his crisis. When unable to toil any longer, hopeless, "broke," barely able to stand, an old Spanish woman looking for clams found him on the beach. Pointing to a little spring that gushes out of the rock she told him to drink plenty of the water and he would get well.

He decided to try this simple treatment, found a shabby tent somewhere, pitched it near the spring, drank often and ate nothing—because he had no food. He lived a month on spring water and sea air, his system got a housecleaning, and the sickness disappeared. Goaded by a fierce appetite, he found strength to climb the bluff, came upon some ripe tomatoes growing wild in a grain field, and physical salvation! He ate his fill, then and many times afterward, and soon was sound from head to foot. That was three years ago, but he's still at the wonderful spring. He determined that his home should be there, and there he built it. The breakers brought the lumber free for the taking, and a structure soon appeared—first a rather tiny habitation reminiscent of a Sicilian peasant's precipice-hung hut, but since expanded into a four-story pile. Lithe, upstanding, muscular and powerful, Dart labored with prodigious energy from dawn until night, placing even the heaviest timbers alone.

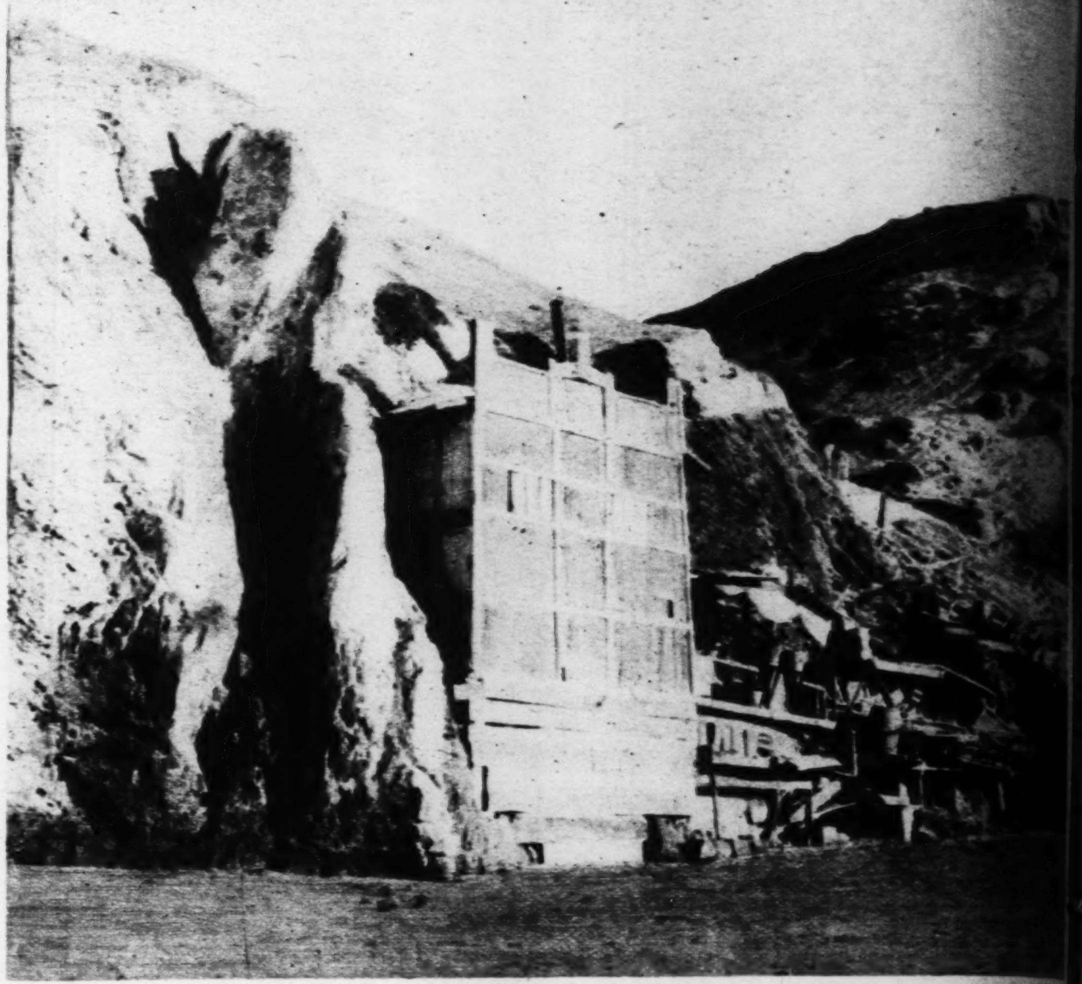
Coastwise vessels pass in numbers about ten miles out, and many lumber carriers dock at Redondo Beach, but when it came to furnishing the picturesque castle there was a dearth of flotsam that would serve the purpose. About this time the 45-foot yacht Genevieve of Los Angeles, a fine craft, well equipped, was wrecked a few hundred yards offshore from the Dart house and a wealth of necessaries was virtually tossed into his arms. In the debris—and this appealed to him particularly—was the frame of a small stove from the galley. Piece by piece the various parts rose from the ocean's bed, but nearly two years elapsed before an extremely high tide rolled up the last lid, rusty but serviceable. Neptune's "white horses" laid it at his very steps.

Because beach strollers, and there are hundreds of them, pass the castle of necessity it soon attracted much interest. The Boy Scouts, always climbing and signaling alongshore, made it their rendezvous. Artists came to paint it. They wanted something to eat. Dart, being a cook, began to make and serve pies, "for a fellow has to make a living," he remarked. The pies "took"! He has baked nearly 8000, three at a time, in that one little galley stove. Of these he admits he has himself consumed 500 and not only survived but thrived, hence they must be good. He serves them on huge circular tables, made of the four ends of two cable spools still bearing the stamps of ports on all the oceans, which were washed up just when most needed. And so with everything, from paint to window glass, stairs to stools—even canvas for awnings. The 20 cents expended on the castle was for shingle nails, needed in a hurry to roof some exposed portion when rain threatened. The billows brought all the other spikes and nails requisite for solid construction.



Louis Dart, whose interesting story is told here.

Flotsam Castle boasts a comfortable living room on the second floor, where the laird often sits at his window to enjoy the organ-roll of curving waves and restless tides, watch the sun sink in a cauldron of molten gold or see the sails of a distant boat flash silver in the quivering moonlight. Under this window is a homemade homely sign that reads: "This building cost but little money but much work, without which life affords no satisfying kick!" It is a typical bit of Dart philosophy. His only home companions are a large gray cat, ever ready to unsheath ugly claws, and a smart, friendly guinea pig. A sign introduces them to visitors thus:



A photograph of Flotsam Castle, which homeless and penniless man built out of driftwood, on a California beach.

"My family—
Outside its appetite—
Is not so very big.
Just a brindle Thomas cat
And a black-nosed guinea pig."

The hermit of Flotsam Castle thinks of many things, as his placards indicate. Conspicuously displayed in the "dining room" is a print of a pretty, laughing mother fondling her babe, and in a corner of the [illegible] frame, in Mr. Dart's bold handwriting, these lines:

"Parenthood is a physical thing:
Motherhood a state of mind.
There are but few mothers these days."

"Don't pay someone else to do your thinking," was Louis Dart's advice to a group of his Boy Scout friends. "Do it yourself. You have been provided with a brain. Develop it and you will command all the forces of nature. Don't be a mental clam and close up at every approach. Think. And life for you will be one long drawn-out joy. Think for yourself and think of the other fellow—not for him."

Fear often has been expressed that Flotsam Castle and its doughty master would some time be swept out to sea, but he is unafraid, and it has withstood the severest buffetings without a tremor. When storms come the water swirls about its foundations and the spray flies over the roof, but it is so substantially set between the rocks and so strongly reinforced at the base that the ocean cannot well reach behind it. "The sea can't hurt me, no matter how far it comes," says Dart. "The waves would simply push me up against the rocks, and there would be no danger of drifting away." Serene and snug, he dwells beside the Pacific, believing, like the crippled but splendidly virile poet Henley:

"I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul."

SWIMMING GIRL SLAIN BY SEA TIGER

Fate of Florida high school champion, bitten to death by a big fish, the great barracuda, proves truth of naturalist's statement that this voracious monster is "sometimes very dangerous to bathers"—Girl who risked life trying to succor her chum is acclaimed as worthy of Carnegie hero medal :: ::

THE "sea tiger" has found what is said to be its first human victim in Florida waters. A beautiful young girl, swimming in the ship channel off Tampa Bay, opposite St. Petersburg, was maimed and killed the afternoon of June 17 by a fish known to naturalists as the great barracuda. Because of its ferocious nature this marine monster is known to many fishermen, seamen and bathers as the sea tiger. Sometimes attaining a length of eight feet and a weight of 40 pounds, it is common on the Florida coast, where it is dreaded by bathers.

"Such large fishes," a naturalist has written, "are said to be as much dreaded as the great sharks, and their formidable armature renders them well capable of inflicting severe and even fatal wounds. The great barracuda is as fierce as a shark and is sometimes very dangerous to bathers."

Most tragically was this description justified in the recent incident off the ancient town of St. Petersburg. Utterly without warning to its happy, healthy, athletic prey, the sea tiger suddenly attacked. The lamentable result leaves no vestige of doubt that it is easy for a fish of this species to slay, in a twinkling, in quest of food to allay its carnivorous appetite, an adult human being.

Incidental to the fate of Miss Dorothy McClatchie, 18 years old, is a story of heroism worthy to be recorded as a classic; and for what she did and dared in her efforts to save her chum there can be no doubt that Miss Mary Buhner, 17, will receive the Carnegie hero medal and be acclaimed long as one of the bravest of the brave. Happily, she escaped attack by the great barracuda.

These two were swimming champions of Florida in the high-school girls' class. Strong and graceful swimmers, they were at home in the surf and in the deeper waters beyond. Confident in their prowess, the deeper water lured them. Frequently they swam together, far out beyond the seaward end of the municipal pier, which extends for half a mile over the water. More than a mile beyond the pier's end is anchored a channel buoy, marking the limit of a course followed by swimmers in performing long-distance stunts. Many times the two girls had rounded this buoy and swam back to shore.

On the sunny June afternoon when Dorothy met swift and terrible death and Mary proved that a high-school girl may possess presence of mind and a heroism of rare quality, they had finished the outward swim and just had rounded the buoy for the return. Clad in the abbreviated bathing toggery which leaves the legs bare and free for speed trials, with long, easy, rhythmic strokes they cleft the water. Through the huge swells that tossed about them a silvery spray they plunged, laughing gayly.

The only concern of these merry nymphs of the mere was for the time it would take to retrace their course to the shore. They had heard of the sea tiger, and that it was supposed to attack bathers now and then. But they were young, and youth is fearless. They were mistresses of the sea so far as they could conquer its waters with rounded white arms that flashed in the sunshine and with lithe legs that kicked their lissome bodies forward in metered propulsion. No thought had they of sharks, or of tea tigers, or of other dreaded monsters of the deep.

Swimming not far apart, the girls presented moving pictures of grace and beauty such as have inspired the brushes of painters and thrilled the pens of poets. Daughters of Nature and of Neptune both, the world was theirs, and life for them was laughing onward.

Suddenly up out of the deep water darted another swimmer. A natural swimmer, born to the track of the deep, a swimmer of incredible perfection. This one was slim, much slimmer than the girls, a long, gray, sinister thing, a pikelike body, covered with silvery scales, brighter below, darker above. Dorsal, anal and ventral fins black, except at margins, which were of silvery gray. Here and there some inky splotches on the posterior body, denoting maturity and marvelous power. A long, narrow set of jaws, studded with two parallel rows of triangular teeth, opening and closing with the precision of a pair of deadly shears. In the apex of the jaw, separate from the parallel rows, were three prongs, sharp as a giant's needle, slanting inward—a horrid, barblike arrangement. The streamline head of the swimmer thrashed from side to side as he propelled himself forward in the midst of the ship channel, probably searching for animal food thrown from a gulf steamship Tampa-bound.

This sinister apparition thrust itself up slantwise from the deeper water, silent, unseen, a monster avid for the taste of living flesh.

Suddenly beneath the surface disappeared Dorothy McClatchie, and Mary Buhner thought at first that her chum was diving. But a moment later she knew that something dreadful must have happened to Dorothy. Gasping in agony and in terror, the girl came to the surface. Mary plunged toward her. Just then she saw the third swimmer, whose fanlike tail cut slightly through the surface as he dived to deeper waters. She recognized him as a sea tiger, the great barracuda, of whom fearsome seamen putting in at the port of St. Petersburg had told the townspeople, who had scoffed at the idea of a mere big fish—not a shark—attacking a human.

A great barracuda photographed under water, showing its shadow as it swims.

But Mary plunged ahead to the rescue of her friend. Afloat and ashore, she and Dorothy, who to her was "Dot," were comrades inseparable. Playmates from childhood, twin champions in the class that had beaten swimmers from all high schools in Florida located on waterways, upon the verge of womanhood, they were twins in a beautiful friendship. Mary forgot the sea tiger, forgot herself, remembered only Dot, and plunged forward to her side.

"Oh, Mary, I've been bitten!" gasped the girl. "I think my foot is gone!"

Mary grasped Dorothy's shoulders, to support her. Reaching down, she sought the foot, which she found intact. But up about the victim of the barracuda's cruel jaws welled a crimson dye. Dorothy went limp in her friend's embrace. She could not assist in her own rescue.

"Mary, kiss me—I'm going," she whispered.

"Dot, don't now! Buck up! I'm going to get you ashore," reassured Mary.

But Dorothy, already in utter collapse, spoke no more. Mary saw that she was bleeding profusely and tried to tear her own bathing suit to make a tourniquet. The material was too tough. She tried to use her cap, with no better success.

"Lean on me, Dot!" she pleaded.

But Dot was silent, limp, apparently lifeless. Holding the girl in her left arm, Mary waved aloft her right, hoping that somebody on the pier more than half a mile away might see the signal of distress. She cried at the top of her voice, to attract attention.

George Rowe, a boatman, was fishing at the end of the pier. Willie Mexis, a Greek restaurateur, was at his stand on the pier. Faintly they heard Mary's call, and they saw her signal. They ran the half-mile to shore, got a motor boat and put out to the rescue. The craft had to fight the incoming tide, now bringing in heavy rollers. Keenly the two men watched the vicinity of the spot a mile seaward where they had seen the waving arm. Now and then as the boat sank into a trough the signal was obliterated. But as it rose upon a swell the men could see again the upraised arm of Mary Buhner, as from time to time the heroic girl repeated the signal.

For more than half an hour Mary supported Dorothy—or that which had been Dorothy—in her left arm, using her right both as a signal and to aid in keeping afloat. She was exhausted when the rescuers reached her, but she clung to Dorothy McClatchie's unconscious form until the men lifted it into the boat. Then Mary was drawn aboard, and she collapsed. Before the craft touched shore she revived and sought to render first aid to her chum. There was nothing that she could do.

The sea tiger had left his dreadful marks in that finely developed form of a girl athlete. On the left leg and hip great red slashes told the story of the attack. More than twenty wounds were visible. Thirteen marks, made by the scissors-like teeth of the great barracuda, disfigured the girl's hip. One wound in the thigh was 14 inches long; another was 13 inches. The femoral artery had been severed.

At the hospital to which the victim of the marine assassin was taken in an automobile, a physician made a brief examination of the injuries.

"She is dead," he said.

It was believed that the girl died immediately after she asked and received her friend's last kiss out there in the ship channel.

Two days later they buried Dorothy McClatchie in the beautiful, palm bordered cemetery in Ingleside Heights. Thousands gathered to testify to her popularity. Always kind and courteous, happy-hearted, hopeful, generous, no girl in St. Petersburg had more friends than she. Her schoolmates, companions in the swimming team, formed a guard of honor for their champion—defeated at last by the third swimmer, the sea tiger, the great fish that slew and swam away.

And in a little bungalow home, shaded by semi-tropical trees, lay Mary Buhner until she recovered from the nervous shock and the physical exhaustion incident to the tragedy. Today, on the lips of every St. Petersburger, is the declaration that Mary Buhner deserves the Carnegie hero medal.

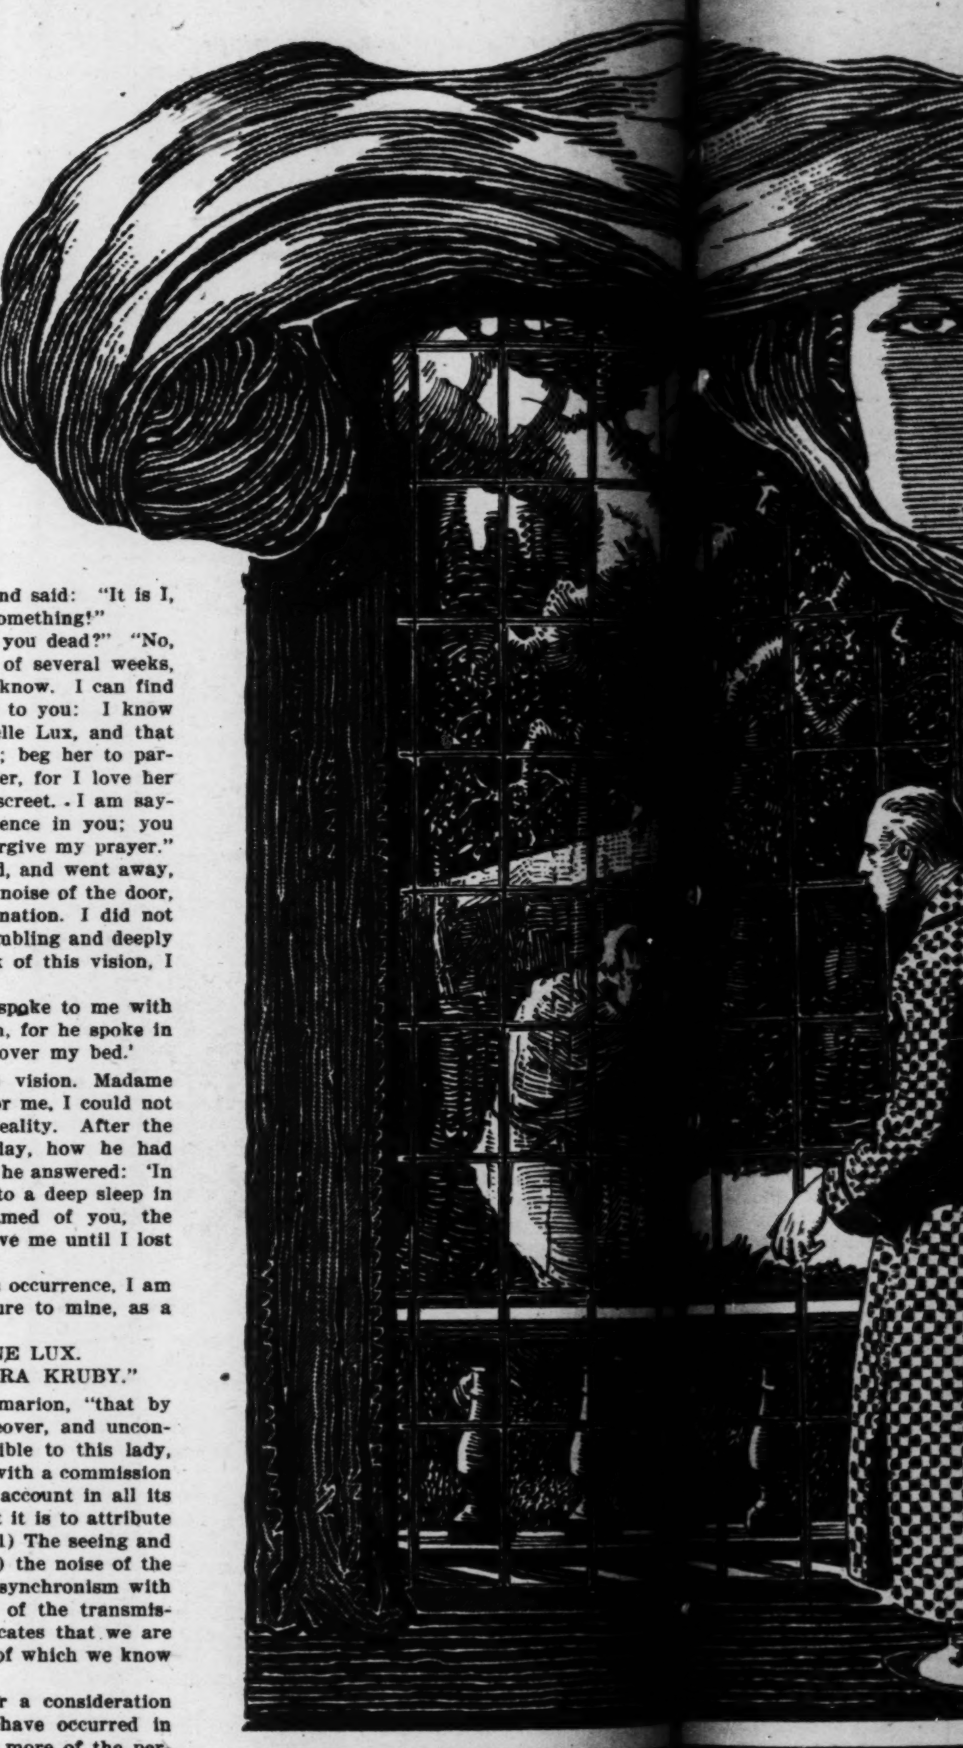
DEATH, THE DRAMAIST

After twenty years of investigation, Camille Flammarion, the noted French astronomer and spiritualist, tells about apparitions, noises and portents that were recorded at places far from the death-bed—"Invisible forces, and even invisible beings, are about us," he declares—The music from newly installed organ, in locked church, which was heard by pastor and schoolmaster as the organ's builder lay dying in distant home—Apparent warnings of accident and death :: ::



WHAT happens at the moment of death? As the spirit leaves its earthly home and passes into the Other World, what strange new powers are conferred on it? Can the departing soul send warning to its loved ones left behind? Is it sometimes permitted to finish up an engrossing task before the final departure?

These are some of the questions which people are asking, as interest in the alleged communications from the dead continues to grow. Of course, a vast number of people believe in a hereafter who give not the slightest credence to any of the alleged spirit communications. To many of them, indeed, such attempts are a profanation of mysteries with which, they feel, the hand of man should not meddle. Their belief is founded on faith.

But a great many others, including a list of scientists with some very eminent names thereon, are investigating spiritualistic phenomena with the same care that they would give to any other mysterious phenomena. Upon the work of these men and of other honest and intelligent students is based the hope that definite knowledge will be obtained of death, both the inescapable moment of dissolution and the life beyond the grave.

No, even the mystery of death does not appall investigators as a problem, in this age of science. So it is with the eagerness of adventure, and with the confidence which a great name inspires, that one takes up the volume entitled "At the Moment of Death" (The Century Co.), written by Camille Flammarion, the eminent, aged, French astronomer and psychic investigator.

For more than twenty years, Flammarion has been collecting evidence on the phenomena of death, from a multitude of sources. He has received more than 4000 letters and other documents from people who have personally had what seem to be glimpses through the awful veil that divides the living from the dead. All these accounts he has numbered, classified, tested, digested and assembled with critical comments in a series of three volumes, with the general title "Death and Its Mystery." In the first volume, called "Before Death," Flammarion confined himself to the realm of the living, attempting to prove the immortality of the soul, but in the second, which is now published, he presses on across the mysterious frontier between the seen and the unseen worlds.

It is a journey full of excitement, due to the authenticated experiences of hundreds of persons who have come in contact with bizarre happenings: strange visions, apparitions and ghosts, noises and portents, that have accompanied the passage of spirits into the beyond.

The book begins with a discussion of phantasms of the living. Here is one of the most interesting preliminary documents, a letter received from a woman residing at Prague in 1902:

"My Dear Astronomer: I am taking the liberty of telling you of an occurrence worthy of your investigation, the absolute truth of which I guarantee on my word of honor, and on that of my friend, who had the vision. This friend's name is Flora Kruby. We have no secrets from each other. The lady is married, and is my truest friend. We see something of a gentleman whom we know, who is a physician.

"For a certain period Madame Kruby was prevented from taking part in our reunions, and I had not seen her for several weeks, during which time she had no news of me or of the doctor. One day, when I found myself, without Madame Kruby, with this doctor and several other people in society, I had a discussion with the physician; he is very good-hearted, but easily flies into a violent temper. I was so angry that I made a resolution to break with him and never again to speak to him.

"That same day he was to undertake a long trip, to fill the place of a professor for several weeks.

"The other day, Madame Kruby (who knew nothing of his departure) arrived at my home breathless, and told me, trembling all over, her face agitated, and with an air of consternation, about a strange thing which had happened to her during the night:

" 'Mademoiselle, I had a vision last night! I had never believed in such things. On the contrary, when people came to tell me this sort of stories, I would burst out laughing. Hear me, then; listen. I had not yet gone to sleep; all the doors were locked. Suddenly the door of my bedroom opened softly and someone came in! I thought, of course, that it was my husband. For several days he had had a toothache, and I supposed he had come to look for a remedy. I asked, "Is that you? Are you suffering?" No reply. But a shade approached my bed swiftly, leaned toward me, and said: "It is I, Dr. B——. I have come to ask you something!"

" ' "Good heavens!" I cried. "Are you dead?" "No, I am alive; I am leaving on a trip of several weeks, and as we are all mortal, one can't know. I can find no rest without addressing a prayer to you: I know you are a good friend of Mademoiselle Lux, and that you have a great influence over her; beg her to pardon me; I did not wish to offend her, for I love her without her suspecting it; but be discreet. I am saying this only to you; I have confidence in you; you are loyal; the others are not. So forgive my prayer."

" 'After these words he disappeared, and went away, but my husband, who had heard the noise of the door, woke up and asked me for an explanation. I did not have the courage to speak; I was trembling and deeply agitated, and even yet, when I think of this vision, I tremble anew.

" 'I saw the doctor distinctly; he spoke to me with animation, as usual; I felt his breath, for he spoke in a low voice, very near and bending over my bed.'

"Several weeks passed after this vision. Madame Kruby and I kept it secret and, as for me, I could not help remaining skeptical as to its reality. After the doctor's return, I asked him one day, how he had spent the night after our dispute, and he answered: 'In spite of my great irritation, I fell into a deep sleep in the train, thinking of you; I dreamed of you, the thought followed me, and did not leave me until I lost all consciousness in sleep.'

"Dear Master, in telling you of this occurrence, I am asking my friend to add her signature to mine, as a more complete guarantee for you.

"ANNE LUX.
(Letter 1039) "FLORA KRUBY."

"We must note," comments Flammarion, "that by some means—unknown to him, moreover, and unconscious—the doctor made himself visible to this lady, made himself heard, and charged her with a commission which she carried out. Analyze the account in all its details, and you will see how difficult it is to attribute it to an hallucination, to an error: (1) The seeing and hearing of the doctor by the seer; (2) the noise of the door, heard by her husband; (3) the synchronism with the doctor's obsession. It is a case of the transmission of force to a distance, and indicates that we are surrounded by a psychic atmosphere of which we know very little."

Many similar cases prepare us for a consideration of still stranger phenomena which have occurred in connection with the death of one or more of the persons concerned. Here follows a letter taken from a group classified as "manifestations other than apparitions":

"My great-grandfather was an organ builder and had, as such, worked at his craft in different regions of Alsace, when he undertook to install an organ in the Protestant village of Ernolsheim; this was to be his last work. Before the instrument was quite completed (all that remained was the tuning) he fell desperately ill, and was borne, dying, to his native land. His death was expected from one moment to another. Silent and sad, relatives and friends surrounded the dying man's bed.

"Suddenly the latter, who had for some time given no sign of life, sat up and said in a clear, calm voice: 'Nothing is the matter; everything is all right.' After this he fell back on the pillows and breathed his last.

"No one, it goes without saying, understood these last words of the dying man; but light was soon shed on them. Two days later the relatives of the deceased received a letter from the pastor of the parish in which the organ remained uncompleted, telling them of an extraordinary phenomenon which had taken place in his church on the preceding night. Sounds had been heard, suddenly, from the new organ, which had not, so far, been played; he and the schoolmaster had been awakened and had run to the church; but they found no one there, despite a lengthy search; the keyboard was locked, even; it was inexplicable.

"What they had been able to hear distinctly was that the organ was being played wonderfully, though it was not tuned. The pastor then had an idea that there might be some connection between the organ builder and this phenomenon, and it was und pression that he had written.

"This letter opened the eyes of those who present at the death of my great-grandfather, them grasp the meaning of the dying man's words.

"Indeed, if such were the occurrence, we deny that we had in this case a most asto ample of a manifestation on the part of the dy —the uneasy spirit of the artist detaching his body before death, traversing space, and convince itself of the perfection of the work completed! What an unfathomable mystery act of this sort!

"CH. HOFFMAN (Student of philosophy, Strasse, Strasburg)."
(Letter 977)

The book passes on in methodical prog the visioning of death scenes at a distance. servers whose testimony we are about to clares Flammarion, "have watched death place far away, by telepathic transmission; no effects without causes, and the god Chance these occurrences are always attributed, to do with them."

In support of the latter statement the calculations made by Monsieur Marrilie ured that the part played by chance is auditory hallucinations, to 1-20,000,000,

Suddenly (it was 3 o'clock), the young woman

'What I have seen is dreadful. Dreadful!'
The family, affected by the poor woman's intense upon the second day following, when she seemed a little calmer, that she told them she had seen, abruptly unrolled before her eyes, a terrifying field of battle, horrible slaughter, and, in the midst of it all, her dear husband, falling dead!

"Some days afterward they learned that on Aug. 25, at 3 o'clock, this soldier had been mortally hurt.

"The young woman's mother and several members of her family furnished me confirmation of this dramatic scene. The coincidence of the vision and of what happened on the field of battle is beyond question."

One of the most remarkable and suggestive chapters in Flammarion's book is headed "Warnings Announcing Death." If one can bring himself to accept the implications that follow the accumulation of occurrences here collected, he must become convinced that we are living in a world in which every happening is controlled by mysterious beings or forces, both good and evil, whose unfathomable powers are only occasionally revealed, and then referred to the hand of Destiny, or God or Satan. Here, for instance, is a fantastic adventure related by the distinguished psychologist, De Maratray.

"One night when Lord Dufferin had accepted, in Ireland, the hospitality of a friend, he awakened suddenly, preyed upon by an indefinable restlessness. He got up, went to the window, which was lighted by the moon, and saw distinctly in the shadow below a man bearing a large burden on his shoulder. This man was walking slowly. When he passed before the house, it became manifest that he bore a coffin; he lifted his head; his face was so repulsive that Lord Dufferin was greatly struck. His gaze followed the apparition as it drew away, and he went back to bed, where he had great difficulty in going to sleep once more.

"The morning of the next day, he questioned his host, but the latter could give him no enlightenment. He knew no one corresponding to the description of the person carrying the coffin, and no burial was expected in the village.

"Some years later Lord Dufferin was appointed Ambassador to France. Determined faithfully to discharge the duties of his high position, he went one day to a diplomatic reception that was to be held in the Grand Hotel in Paris. His private secretary conducted him to a large lift, before which there were several state officials standing respectfully in line. Lord Dufferin, passing them, bowed, and was about to step into the lift, when he gave an involuntary start. The employe who operated the cable was ugly, surly looking, and had precisely the features of the mysterious apparition of the Irish village!

"Moved by an instinctive impulse, the Ambassador drew back; he retraced his steps, uttering some words of excuse, and, on the pretext that he had forgotten something, asked them to take up those who had gone on before, without waiting for him; he then went to the hotel office to make inquiries as to the person who had caused his very natural emotion. But he did not have time. At that moment a terrible crash was heard, mingled with cries of anguish. The lift, reaching a certain height, had dropped suddenly to the bottom of the shaft, crushing or mutilating those within it.

"The accident is historic, and its precise date could be easily verified. The mysterious employe was killed with those whom he was taking up. His origin could not be traced. He was, it was said, an extra helper, a substitute, a vagrant, whom they had temporarily engaged. Lord Dufferin never knew any more about it, and he vainly sought to explain by what sorcery the hand of destiny had saved him from peril by lifting, in so mysterious a way, a corner of the veil that is over that part of eternity which we call the future."

This strange account, inexplicable by any known laws of nature, must be supplemented by the really extraordinary story which follows. It is again a symbolic, supernormal warning of an accident, in the form of a bizarre dream related by Monsieur Bozzano:

"The observer and narrator was a certain Mr. Brighten. He tells us that in 1861 one of his friends, Mr. James Clackburn, having acquired a steamboat for river navigation, asked him to go on an excursion with him. They left Norwich, and after their first day's trip on the river stopped for the night at Yarmouth, a short distance from the mouth of the river; they attached the boat to a nearby vessel by means of cords fastened to the bow and stern. After that, at about 9:30, they withdrew to their respective cabins. Mr. Brighten writes:

"'I may have slept for some hours when my dream began. I fancied that I opened my eyes and that I saw, through the ceiling of the cabin, two shadowy phantoms hovering in the air near the funnel! They seemed absorbed in lively conversation, and pointed now to the mouth of the river, now to the ropes which held the vessel. At length they separated, gesticulating and winking, as though they had agreed upon a plan of action.

"'Still suspended in the air, one of them went to the bow and the other to the stern, both holding their forefingers extended, with which they touched the ropes simultaneously; these flamed as though they had been touched by hot irons. The vessel, unattached, was borne along, drifting; it passed beneath the suspension bridge, and the Yarmouth bridge.

"'All this time the two phantoms, still hovering in the air above the boat, emitted strange musical sounds. I wished to wake my companion, because I well knew that, if the current carried us to the mouth of the river, we should inevitably be wrecked as we passed through the rocks; and in the dream I strove to shake off the incubus which oppressed me, but in vain. We still went on; my eyes discerned every object in our course; we passed Southdown, then the village of Gorleston, and at length we reached the last curve of the river, where the water rushes precipitately over the rocks and mingles with the sea.

"'In a short time we were borne on by these whirlpools, and I saw that the boat was beginning to sink. The musical sounds emitted by the two phantoms then changed to terrifying howls of triumph. The water reached my chin; there was a rattling in my throat; I was drowning.

"'This was my dream—or, rather, my nightmare—which awakened me violently. I leaped from my bunk and went toward the door, which I broke down with one blow. I found myself awake, in my nightclothes, beneath a serene, moonlit night sky. Instinctively I looked toward the rope at the stern, and saw with terror that just at that moment it had broken. I turned toward the hook on the nearby ship, close to our bow, and saw beside me my companion, who had come running at the sound of the shattered door, and was telling me of the other rope, which was gone.

"'We both clung desperately to the hooks with our hands, heedless of our skin, which was bleeding, and we called for help. Men from the nearby vessel came without delay, in time to get new ropes for us."

"Invisible forces," comments Flammarion, "and even invisible beings, are about us. * * * Do we not note from time to time, in the course of human events, certain events, at once unforeseen and logical, which would seem to indicate the existence of an inherent justice? Is it forbidden to admit the influence of invisible beings, who direct affairs? The ant does not see the foot that crushed it."

Here is a typical manifestation at the death moment, a story whose dramatic quality is undeniable. It was sent to Monsieur de Vesme in December, 1919, by the physician of its heroine.

"In February, 1904, Monsieur B——, aged 31, became engaged to Mademoiselle D——. These two young people loved each other. Family differences soon jeopardized their plans, and assumed such importance that the marriage, which was to have taken place in the middle of May, was broken off on the fourth of that month.

"Heartbroken, the two young people parted, and began to travel, that they might try to lessen their sorrow. Mademoiselle thought daily of her fiance, whom she hoped to be able to marry some day, when family difficulties should have ceased to exist. In September, 1904, she received a letter from her former fiance. It was the last which reached her.

"In December, 1905, she learned that, yielding to the entreaties of his family, he had married. She herself, for her part, married on July 6, 1906, and went to live with her husband in the environs of Bordeaux.

"In March, 1907, the young woman was alone, her husband being on a trip. One night (it was March 17) she had gone to bed as usual. She awakened abruptly, about 2 o'clock in the morning; she heard her given name called three times, close to her, it seemed. It appeared that this given name had been uttered behind the door which was beside her bed, and gave on a hallway.

"She rose, opened the door, believing her husband had come back unexpectedly, and was greatly astonished to see no one. Asking herself who could have called her, she went to wake her chambermaid, who was sleeping in an adjoining room. The maid had heard nothing. Both of them dressed, went over the whole house, and found nothing. They ended by going back to bed.

"After some time Madame D—— dozed off. But again she heard her given name uttered, in a voice full of anguish. Greatly agitated, she leaped from her bed precipitately, called her chambermaid and told her: 'This time it's impossible that you didn't hear it; someone called out twice, "Jeanne, Jeanne!"' The servant answered that she had heard nothing; that, since she had not been asleep, she would certainly have heard if someone had called. Both, intensely curious, explored the whole house once more, and found nothing. Madame D—— went back to bed a second time, sent her maid away, and, not being able to sleep again, remained in a state of mind that may be easily understood.

"Half an hour later she heard herself called for the third time, in a tone still more anguished than on the two preceding occasions. She spent the rest of the night in great agitation.

"Some days afterward one of her relatives arrived from Noyon, where her former fiance lived, and told her that the latter had died of galloping consumption on the night of March 17-18. His end had been particularly tragic. In the course of his death agony he had several times called his former fiancee—'Jeanne!'—as he was expiring in his wife's arms."

A Rabbi's Anecdotes About Jews

THE simplicity and the humanity of all folklore stories characterize the humorous tales which Rabbi Jacob Richman has assembled about his own race, a third selection from which appears on this page. Rabbi Richman is head of the Hebrew School at Asbury Park, N. J., a Russian-born authority on the Talmud and member of the staff of Hadoar, the Hebrew daily newspaper.

The Silent Debate.

THIS is a story of the Middle Ages. Just when and where it happened cannot be ascertained. But it is characteristic of the life of the Jews centuries ago; their precarious existence and perilous surroundings.

An Emperor having heard of the superior intelligence of the Jewish race issued an order directing his Jewish subjects to select one of their number to debate with his majesty through the medium of gestures. Should the disputant fail to comprehend the import of the imperial gestures he would get a hundred lashes. If no one appeared to debate with the wise monarch a cumbersome tax would be imposed on all the Jews of the kingdom.

The people of the unhappy race were in deep despair. Not one of them was desirous of undertaking such a hazardous task. When it seemed certain that they would have to pay burdensome taxes a Jewish blacksmith volunteered to save his people by meeting the King in silent controversy.

The debate attracted wide attention. Wealth and royalty, master and serf, men, women and children from all corners of the realm flocked to the appointed place.

As the Emperor arrived at the platform in the public square where his humble opponent was tremblingly waiting, a prolonged and thunderous cheer broke forth, with loud cries of "Long live the King!" and "Down with the Jews!" When silence was restored the mighty ruler gazed with scorn upon his lowly opponent. His shabby clothes, unseemly boots and coarse black hands formed a striking contrast to the glittering and gaudy apparel of his royal antagonist. Then:

The sovereign raised his forefinger. The brave Israelite, in reply, pointed his forefinger toward the ground. The Emperor then held out two fingers, and his humble subject, with the confidence of an expert debater, held out one finger. Then the monarch dramatically stretched out his hand, with fingers spread, and the sturdy smith clenched a fist in the face of his royal opponent. The Emperor then, apparently satisfied, extracted a bottle of red wine from his pocket; whereupon the robust laborer brought forth a large cheese.

At the end the ruler announced that his opponent had stood the test admirably. When asked by his Ministers for an interpretation of the mystic signs interchanged, his majesty vouchsafed the following:

"My first question was, 'Is it true that you Jews are like the stars of heaven?' which I implied by raising my finger toward the sky; and the answer of my worthy opponent was, 'No, they are like the sands of the earth, everybody treading on them,' which he signified by pointing one finger toward the ground.

"By showing two fingers I meant to assert that there were two Gods, one of good and one of evil, which my antagonist contested by exhibiting one finger, symbolizing one God.

"'You are not a nation,' I further contended by stretching forth my hand with fingers spread, illustrating how the Jews were scattered all over the world. 'But they are united,' countered my invincible foe by making a fist.

"'Your sins are as red as wine,' I reproached by producing a bottle of that beverage. 'They are as white as cheese,' refuted the Jewish champion by flaunting his cheese at me."

The blacksmith's interpretation of the mighty contest was as follows:

"The King hinted with an upward movement of the finger that he was going to string me up, and in return I sent him to hell.

"He then threatened to gouge both my eyes, which he expressed by showing me two fingers, and I graciously told him it would be 'an eye for an eye,' which I made very clear to him by showing one finger.

"Then his benign majesty expressed a desire to slap my face, which intention he signified by stretching forth his hand with his fingers spread, ready for action, to which I humbly replied that I'd break his neck with my powerful fist. When his highness saw that I stood my ground he graciously offered me a drink of wine, and I reciprocated his kind invitation by offering my cheese to him."

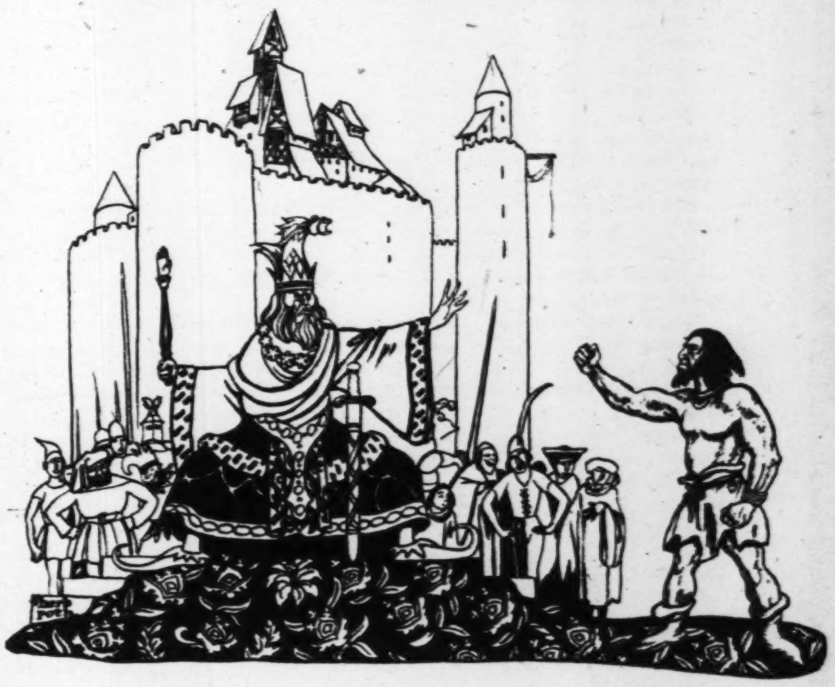
Why Mention Platitudes?

In Lithuania there is a class of Jews who do not know a "zooras matbeio"—that is to say, they cannot tell one coin from the other. The phrase is not used in any derogatory sense. On the contrary, it is the most glowing tribute the devout Israelites of that Russian province can pay one. It means that the person in question takes no interest in and knows nothing of worldly affairs—a man who has an utter contempt for the material things in life. Such a one concentrates his life to the study of the Torah and the practice of its sublime principles. The wife, in addition to raising her children and caring for the house, conducts the business and supports the family, while the scholarly husband spends his days in "beis midrosh," or synagogue, poring over the tomes of the Talmud.

Invariably the Jewish woman considers it a rare and precious privilege to have such a pious and godly husband. The belief that in the world beyond she will get an equal share in her husband's reward is a constant source of gratification to the toiling housewife, who can in return offer her husband mere earthly and transient comfort.

In a small Lithuanian town of Dubiness there lived and toiled an "eishes chayil," a virtuous and capable woman, who supported a saintly husband and a large family by conducting a miniature department store.

Once a regiment of Cossacks was to pass the town and a big rush was expected by the local merchants. It would be a hard task for the industrious lady to handle the expected volume of business alone and she asked her husband to come for a few hours a day to the store. It was a great sacrifice for the holy man to give up eternal benefit for mere earthly gain. Yet he felt it his duty to oblige his loyal wife, and he reluctantly consented to come to her emporium during the stay of the Cossack regiment.



On his first visit to the store the holy man seated himself in a corner and gazed abstractedly in the distance.

The store at that time was crowded and the Cossacks were helping themselves generously to various and sundry articles that were lying around on the counters. The proprietor's husband looked and said not a word.

"Kalmen!" pleaded the distracted woman. "Don't you see that the Cossacks are robbing the store?"

The saintly man looked at his helpmeet rather curiously and smiled benignly.

"Silly woman that you are!" chuckled the sage. "You have discovered America! If you would tell me that the Chief Rabbi of Kovno is a thief, 'noo,' that would be a revelation. But 'The Cossacks are robbing the store!' what's new about it? We know very well that a Cossack is a thief."

By Simple Deduction.

Reb Berl Charif was in the habit of placing his spectacles in the "gemoro," or volume of the Talmud, which he would always close before leaving the synagogue. It served the double purpose of safeguarding the spectacles and of marking his place in the book.

Once, however, he deviated from this practice and merely moved his glasses up his forehead. Returning to his studies, he naturally looked for them in the customary repository and to his surprise and discomfiture they were not there.

The venerable sage was puzzled by the disappearance of his glasses. He could not possibly continue his studies without them.

"Who on earth could have taken my spectacles?" he soliloquized in the Talmudic sing-song, stroking his long, patriarchal beard and striding nervously across the synagogue. "To say that they were taken by a man who needs eyeglasses is most unlikely. For a man who needs eyeglasses undoubtedly has ones of his own. To say, on the other hand, that they were taken by one who needs no eyeglasses is equally illogical. For what benefit could such a person derive from studying them?

"We must, therefore, deduce that they were taken by a person who does need and does have eyeglasses. Now the question arises: Why should such a person take somebody else's glasses? But the response thereto is very simple. Perhaps that individual pushed his spectacles up his forehead and forgot all about it, and not finding his own, took mine.

"Now, since we have arrived at this conclusion, why not go a step further and say that I myself have done so?"

He touched his forehead and found them perched right there.

"Why, surely, here they are!" exclaimed the sage, astonished at the force and cogency of his own reasoning. He removed the spectacles from his forehead and viewed them with genuine interest.

"After all," he remarked, "it's good to have a forehead. I could never have found the glasses otherwise."

'Better' Does Not Mean 'Good Enough.'

It is the duty of every Jew to purchase an esrog (citron) for the feast of Succoth (Tabernacles). An esrog is required to be perfect in appearance. Any spot or speck of a noticeable size is enough cause to disqualify it from being used for ritual purposes.

They are imported either from Palestine or Greece and the prices paid for them range from $2 to [illegible] and $20.

The esrogim business is quite a large industry, requiring considerable capital.

A certain merchant who had invested heavily in this ritual fruit found the entire consignment sent him from Greece to be defective, all having spots and specks, some large enough to disqualify the sacred fruit. Prospective customers who were handed an esrog with some defect naturally went to the rabbi for an opinion. Being true to his calling, the rabbi invariably told his constituents the truth.

The esrogim merchant came to the "nov" and took issue with him on this matter. "Rabbi," said the distressed man appealingly, "you will totally ruin me. I've invested every cent I had to accommodate my fellow Jews and now I'm threatened with ruin. Is this my reward?"

"I'll tell you what to do," counseled the kind-hearted sage. "Henceforth give your patrons two esrogim at a time and when they come for an opinion I'll simply state which I think is the better of the two."

Thus the opinion of the rabbi did not interfere with the sale of the ritual fruit and the esrogim merchant was saved from bankruptcy.

Not Expensive for the Guest.

After much persuasion the wealthy member of the congregation finally agreed to invite the itinerant preacher to his house over Saturday.

The comfortable, richly furnished rooms and the well-fed, carefree faces of the host's family bore unmistakable evidence of opulence and prosperity, and the stranger came in for a good, hearty meal.

After saying grace over a loaf of white bread and distributing thin slices thereof to his guest and to his household, the parsimonious pater familias continued his meal on pumpernickel. The guest, however, seemed to have taken a strong liking to the white bread, which he attacked in great gusto. With phenomenal rapidity he was consuming one slice after another, to the horror and discomfiture of his host. It looked as though he would consume the entire supply of the precious pabulum. Host and hostess were staring at the stranger and at each other with amazement, winking their eyes and shrugging their shoulders at the prodigious gastronomic capacity of the preacher. Realizing that mere passive silence would not stem the visitor's onslaught, the master finally observed: "You know, Mr. Maggid, that white bread here is very expensive?"

The ravenous orator stuffed a large chunk of the costly edible into his mouth.

"Is that so?" he remarked thickly. "Is that so? But let me tell you it's worth it."

Divining His Son's Career.

Anxious to divine what the future calling of his heir would be, the father, at the instance of the local rabbi, placed before his son, a little urchin of about two years, three objects—money, a Bible and a bottle of wine. Should the youngster grab the money, the solicitous father was told, it would indicate a business career; should he grasp the Bible it would predict a rabbinic career, while if he should show a predilection for the beverage he would surely become a drunkard.

The baby, however, as soon as he drew near enough to his father's omens, imbibed the wine, deposited the money in his pocket and, taking the Bible under his arm, rushed quickly out of the room.

"Now," prognosticated the father with certainty, "now I know he'll be a politician; he grabs everything he can."

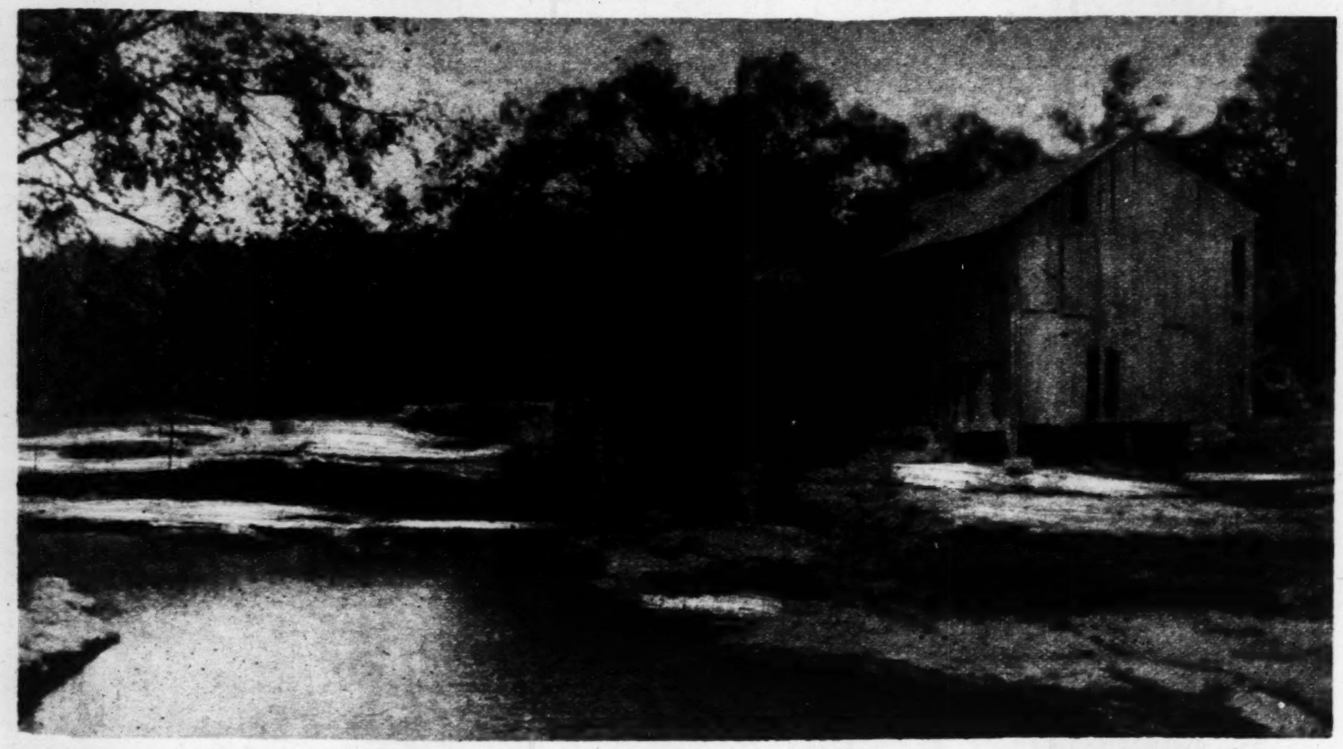
This Missouri Mill Has Been at Work for Ninety Years

Built in 1832, the stone burrs have ground away steadily since then, except when owner was in the Confederate Army—During the Civil War the mill was used to make corn meal for Union soldiers, and tradition says a woman spy for the South was executed near there by guerillas, after she had saved her lover, a Union officer — Water-driven plant is now owned by the third generation of the same family ::



The old mill at Dallas, Mo., as it appears today.

UNDER the branches of gnarled, old forest trees on Indian Creek, Western Missouri, stands what is said to be the oldest mill in the Middle West, still operating with its original machinery. The quaint structure, with warped and twisted sideboards of black walnut, is sturdy yet upon its foundation of solid rock in the creek bed near Dallas, 12 miles from Kansas City.

Since 1832, except for four years while its owner fought in the Confederate army, the hum of the mill's time-worn grinding burrs has sounded day and night.

Today, motorists drive out to the scene and spend the afternoon in the atmosphere of an age gone by.

James Fitzhugh, one of the early pioneers, pushed into Western Missouri in 1832 and selected the spot for his mill. With an ax and such other tools as were available, he chopped down trees and got out the lumber for building. There was no reason why he shouldn't choose the finest trees. The water wheel was built of selected straight-grain hickory. All the studding, including heavy joists, was made of carefully chosen oak. Black walnut, the kind that now would be used for a grand piano, gave material for the sideboards. The builder used no nails, but fastened his pieces together with hickory pegs.

In that construction lies the secret of the building's strength after the passage of so long a time. It is true that a shingle roof now covers the hand-hewn clapboards of the past,. but the shingles are there only to check the leaks and not because the clapboards had so decayed that it was necessary to replace them.

After operating his mill for many years the builder sold it to Anthony B. Watts, half a century ago. Stubbins Watts, son of Anthony, had worked there for 24 years, and he continued to aid his father in running it. Then Anthony died and Stubbins became the miller on Indian Creek. Last March Stubbins died, and his son, Edgar B. Watts, who was reared in the shadow of its eaves, became the miller. The present owner is 50 years old.

Throughout the 90 years, Indian Creek has worn out four water wheels. A fifth, of more modern steel construction, now is in use, but the grinding burrs are still as they were in the early days.

One of the pairs of grinding burrs, commonly called millstones, was brought from France 50 years ago. The other pair, in constant service for 74 years, was brought from Vermont. Each millstone is four feet across.

In spite of competition from the great mills with their steam plants and motors and improved machinery, the Dallas mill still operates at a profit. It grinds out five bushels of cornmeal and as many bushels of white wheat flour every hour. One set of burrs is used for corn, the other for wheat. Besides, there is a corn sheller and a corn crusher.

Above the mill, a niche was cut in the solid rock for the entrance of water into the mill race. Underneath the floor, the passing water turns the wheel and comes out on the other side, flowing back into the creek. That is all the power, but it is sure and dependable.

Old customers still patronize the mill, desiring its output in preference to that of the big, modern plants. Some who have moved away to various other states, even to California, send to Watts for cornmeal produced at the antique grist mill. It takes a Missourian to know the rich taste of genuine corn "pone" made from such meal.

Tradition has spun many a web of romance about the weatherbeaten old structure.

When the Civil War broke out, Stubbins Watts shut down his mill, locked the doors and joined the Confederate army. A few months later Union troops came into the district and finally an order was promulgated which forced all Southern sympathizers to depart and marked their property for confiscation. Throughout those turbulent times the mill at Dallas was spared from destruction because of its usefulness. Many a sack of meal was ground there for the Northern troops, while its owner was serving as a soldier for the South.

It was in those years, says tradition, that a love affair developed between a young Northern Lieutenant and a beautiful Southern girl, with the grist mill for a background. There the lovers met—it was their trysting place.

Although intensely loyal to her cause, the girl had a true affection for her lover. His love for her was noble, and his confidence unshaken. Other Union officers suspected her of carrying information to a band of guerillas, and of having thus caused the deaths of several Union soldiers. Some officers, envious of the Lieutenant's success, whispered it about that he might be the source of her information.

Such suspicions finally resulted in three Union officers spying on the lovers.

One night when the Lieutenant went to spend an hour with his sweetheart at the mill, the spies were outside, listening intently. The girl knew that he was suspected of gathering information for the Confederate cause and kept on her guard against surveillance by her lover's enemies. One of the trio outside happened to step on a stick, she heard the crack and felt certain there were Union officers outside.

Unknown to her lover, the girl really was aiding regular Confederate soldiers and guerillas by gathering information about the Union forces, their movements, plans, etc.

That very night she had with her a letter directing her to get certain information concerning the Union troops. Fearing that the spies had heard their conversation and were bent on getting evidence to convict her lover of treason, despite his loyalty to the North, she instantly devised a plan to save him.

Clasping her arms about his neck she softly whispered words of love. Then she made him promise that he would thank her in a loud, businesslike tone for the objects she was about to hand him. This conversation they carried on in whispers. Then in a clearly audible voice she said:

"Concealed on my person, dear, are some documents that you desire. They will give you all the information that you need. If you will withdraw for a moment, I will produce them and from then on my destiny will be in your hands. Without your love I would not care to live."

Much mystified, the Lieutenant withdrew, as she had requested. A few moments later she asked him to return to her.

"Here are the documents," spoke a clear, feminine voice.

He took them, saying in an official tone:

"Thank you."

Then the watchers broke in, lighted their lanterns and put both the girl and the Lieutenant under arrest.

The senior officer, a Major, took possession of the documents, which were in a large envelope, sealed with wax. Opening the envelope, he began to read. The contents were instructions from a guerilla leader and from several regular Confederate officers, telling the girl to get and send them certain military information. The documentary evidence was sufficient to convict her as a spy.

The horror-stricken young Lieutenant found himself being congratulated on the ingenuity in his lovemaking which induced a spy to surrender her orders to him. And he was immediately released from his arrest. On the other side of the envelope, by the rays of the lantern, the Major wrote a notation of the circumstances under which the document had been obtained.

The group started toward the headquarters of the Union troops. Heavy flashes of lightning stabbed the sky, portending a heavy rain.

The roadway led through some heavy timber. About a mile from the trysting place—the old mill—the party heard a rustling in the bushes and then fifty rifle barrels were pointed out through the brush at them, after which came the gruff command to surrender.

Once again the heart of the lover went out to the man of her choice.

To the shadowy leader who stepped forward the girl gave the guerilla countersign and asked passage for the four men. Startled, the Union Major had dropped the envelope just as a brilliant flash of lightning illuminated the forest. The guerillas saw the letter fall, but said nothing.

The officers walked on, to safety, while the girl remained behind. Twenty minutes later the Union officers heard a volley of shots near where they had been halted. Back at camp, throughout the long night, the young Lieutenant wept silently on his bunk.

A reconnoitering party the next morning found the body of the girl riddled with bullets. Pinned upon it was the envelope upon which the Union Major had made his notations. Under these notations on the envelope was scrawled the word, "Traitor." The old tradition also says that the Lieutenant lost his reason after the war, and haunted the forest thereabouts for several years.

This is one of the stories about the mill at Dallas. Another had for its heroine the daughter of an Indian who lived nearby some 10 years prior to the Civil War. A chief had sought her hand in marriage and offered a goodly amount of money, ponies and other Indian property to the father. The girl hoped that her parent would consent. Desiring to please the visiting chief, she obtained some meal from the mill and baked him a good dinner of corn "pone." The suitor was pleased with the dish and, believing that she had ground the meal herself, he doubled his offer and was successful.

After marriage, when the chief had taken her twenty miles south to his own territory, he learned that she could not make such meal.

He commanded her to try, and built a small mill like the one at Dallas, and when she failed he became very abusive. His harsh treatment of the girl caused strife between the two tribes, which resulted in a tribal feud. The trouble was settled when 20 braves went to the mill and bought a large supply of meal.

Many of the corn "pone" hoecakes that fed the James boys were made from meal ground at the Dallas mill. The parents of Jesse and Frank James obtained meal there quite frequently, although they did not live in the immediate vicinity.

The present miller does not buy new machinery because, he says, he does not need it. Indian Creek is still the cheapest source of power, notwithstanding modern inventions, he says. His mother, widow of Stubbins Watts, is a direct descendant of Daniel Boone, and lives at the family homestead near the mill.

The Man Who Talked

by RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

SURELY is it not necessary to describe E. Sanford Jamison. Well-known enough he was as the active president of one of New York's larger public service corporations. He is one of the men who are said to think in millions while other men are thinking in hundreds. Still young, he wears a bow tie blithely; plays enough polo and tennis, and does enough motor-boating home down the sound to be brown and fit and have a waist line not yet conspicuously convex. He may be 45, but that is no reason why he should not make love to a ripe lass of 23 and win her if he can.

She was Dolly Cavour, claiming, they say, descent from the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa. Anyway, she had red hair, called lovely by everyone, and, all in all, was a particularly fresh, complete and wholesome personality. No one could gainsay it who ever saw her come in for a hunt breakfast after a ride over the West downs of an autumn morning. And E. Sanford Jamison, who could say no with all the tart finality of the two-fisted he-American Napoleon of business, could never have said no to her.

They used to say at the Country Club that she was marked to say yes to him. He not only had force, but also finesse; he was not only a sledge-hammer man, he was also the possessor of that valuable thing known as a fine Italian hand. Every now and then there is a business man who thinks at times in terms of fine, high intrigue. The Jamisons have a long tradition of gentlemanly manners and fat wills; they still stand well after a century of American life upon the social top step, and they are cagy.

Somehow it never was suggested to Sanford to be cagy with Dolly. The thing came to him as an utter surprise.

* * * * * *

House party at the Bevans'. Gay dinner. Flash of diamonds, white necks, white shirt fronts.

Music on the terrace, where the twenty danced wildly. The garden, lined with cedars towering like cypress trees in an old Roman garden. The moon. The mist over the low sea. A whiff of delicate perfume, and Dolly by his side, with the garden path crunching sweetly under her silver slippers.

He threw his cigarette into the lovely pool, where it hissed as it dropped into the image of her white silk, her white neck and arms, the white aura about her lovely red hair. "Well," said he, with a sigh, and walked around the concrete curb of the water garden to stand above her. He appeared to have reached a decision.

"Hello, San," she said, in a cheerful, friendly way.

"Romance," he said.

She looked into the face of the moon and he thought he saw tenderness in her eyes.

"Quit looking at him and look at me," he said.

"Of course," she replied, in a low tone. "Of the two, you are the better looking man.

"And the moon is defunct."

She did not laugh nor move when he bent down and kissed her. Because she remained so silent and motionless, he wondered.

"You were not offended?"

"Well, I rather save my kisses," she answered. "Not that I haven't—but now I rather save them for the man I'm going to marry."

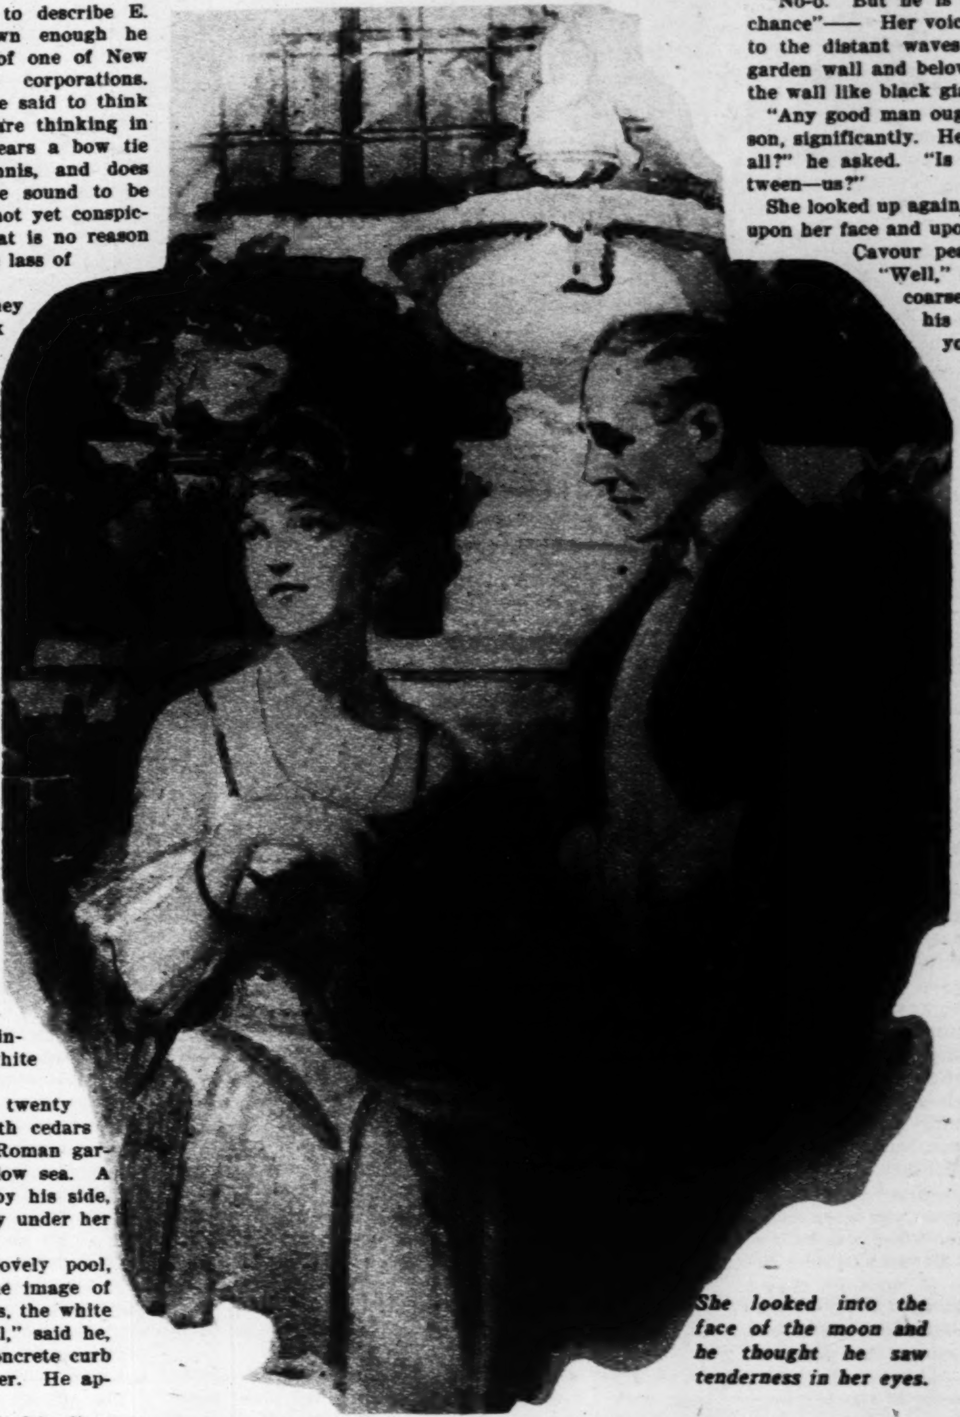
"You are going to marry me," he said, and no one could have told whether he asked a question or had passed sentence on her.

"No, San, dear fellow," she said, taking both his hands and pulling herself up to her feet, "I'm not going to marry you. In many ways I wish I were. You are a pretty good bachelor, as bachelors go. There are not many who play on an international polo team while they are still in college and then go downtown in New York and do what you have done while you are still young. The Cavours are rather proud of their ancestry, but yours is as good."

"And"——

"I was going on to say that you also have restraint in what you drink and do not think disproportionately of the other sex. It is good to find that in you, San, but don't tell anybody I said so, because in these days I should be thought a prude."

Jamison, who was used to exercising power of personality on boards of directors, was nonplussed. He felt himself a little torpedoed and sinking by the bows. Dolly Cavour was talking on in her skilled, diverting way while the bats swept like evil omens across the moon and the orchestra became a little plaintive and wistful in a pause between the jangles of the jazz. The great E. Sanford Jamison felt that if he was not entitled to a triumph he was at least entitled to a tragedy. It was not to be turned into a mere light tete-a-tete.



She looked into the face of the moon and he thought he saw tenderness in her eyes.

He took her soft wrist. "Do you understand?" he asked.

"Yes," she said. "But, San, there's no use—certainly not until"——

She looked down at the water lilies, pale as the light illuminating their half-closed petals.

"Somebody else?"

Dolly was nervous now; she felt along the outstretched hand of a flowering shrub heavy with the scent of blooms, and broke it off as if to divert any possible cruelty from her old friend to some less sensitive thing: "Yes, San."

"I'm an old friend," he said, urging reasons for confidences. His voice chattered as if he were cold, just as the old champion's voice chatters when he wakes from the knockout which has robbed him of his title.

"You are," she admitted, almost fervently. "But somehow, San, the one thing I wonder about in you is your love of success."

"You mean that I will do anything to win?"

"Yes, perhaps even cruel things."

"You love success yourself, Dolly."

"Almost better than anything in the world," she said. "That is why I am in doubt about the other—the other'"——

"The other man. Who is he? He loves you, does he?" Jamison spoke fiercely.

"Oh, yes, he loves me. He says he does. He does, San, he does. I'll tell you. It is Owen Bowme."

Jamison uttered an exclamation. It was unintelligible, but it expressed complete stupefaction. A little later he asked: "You mean the man who is here—the man—— Why, I've only met him once or twice. From the West? That Bowme—who sat beside Leila Vernon and barely said a word to her?"

"Who would—who would who had any sense?" Miss Cavour replied, tartly. "She has only beautiful hair and lips."

But Jamison was still trying to find himself. "A young Western lawyer," he said. "Duluth, wasn't it? No distinction"——

"Not yet."

"No great success? He is not known widely."

"No-o. But he is not 35. I think—if he had a chance"—— Her voice died away so that both listened to the distant waves on the beach below the low garden wall and below the rocks stretched out beyond the wall like black giants sprawling on the shore.

"Any good man ought to have a chance," said Jamison, significantly. He drew in a long breath. "Is that all?" he asked. "Is it only Bowme who stands between—us?"

She looked up again, so that the moon's light was full upon her face and upon the heavy string of the famous Cavour pearls upon her neck.

"Well," said Sanford, with a curious coarse, bulldog look settling around his fine mouth and chin, "anything you want, Dolly, you shall have." The king had spoken.

"Let us go back," he said again. "Let us go. They are playing my favorite thing, and my hostess always dances at least once with me."

They climbed the terrace steps and wandered between the oleanders in their green tubs into the light of the little lanterns where the punch bowl gleamed and the players of the orchestra tested their instruments softly and close to their leaning heads.

"There you are, Dolly!" said her uncle, who was still a good beau.

Jamison walked across the polished tiles, imported by the Bevans family from Spain. A curious little smile was curling his lip.

Owen Bowme, who watched this smile approach, might possibly be thought by those who are critical to be a little too chunky of figure. There was something a little thickset, as they say, both in his face and in his body, and it spoke, perhaps, of some stalwart pioneer and agricultural ancestry which had tried Minnesota when the Indians still pitched tepees on the Mississippi's far bank. He had climbed up alone; with something of the same spirit of venture which took his forbears away from the East, he had returned to New York to pry his way into the practice of law in the midst of a wolfish and unfamiliar community.

Jamison noted him well now—his face rather grave, but still lit by the expectancy of untouched youth; his honest and rather mischievous blue eyes; his hair, already turning gray; his competent hands. Well, these were not ordinarily the kind of hands into which a prize like Miss Cavour would fall. It usually took a great deal of earnestness, humor and honesty to make up to girls in her set for even the faint suggestion of awkwardness surrounding young men of Owen Bowme's type.

Jamison was quite aware that his coming up to Bowme would be an occasion for the ambition of the younger man to give, at least, a little leap. Any young lawyer might have aviated; Jamison had his place, and it was now the whisper of the street that he was to be made president of a large bank combine. Even Sanford's nod across the tables of the Midday Club had become worth something.

"Hello, Mr. Bowme," he said. "I hardly had a word with you before dinner, and now that we dance with our perfectos there was not a chance for us to chat."

He spoke as if he had attended the dinner merely to make the other man's acquaintance. "Have a bit of the punch."

"No, thanks."

Jamison sized up his man. He listened to his discourse with a pointed paragraph on the latest Supreme Court decision.

Bowme's voice! After all, if he had obvious distinction, it was in his voice. Its timbre was deep; it was even in itself convincing. Had Bowme said gravely, "Black is white," no end of persons would have believed it to their dying day. It was never necessary for this young man to speak with vehemence; all his words, even those softly spoken, were vibrant with a peculiar fervor and honesty and finality. It was that deep-throated voice. There is only one equal to it in the United States Senate, and it has been called the biggest vote getter in the country.

Jamison smiled again. "Look here, Mr. Bowme," he said, almost deferentially. "Perhaps you can help me."

"Yes, Mr. Jamison."

"Rather confidential."

"I understand."

— One of the Best Stories by the U. S. Ambassador to Italy

"The story of the combination of trust companies and the four banks is well founded, Bowme. I'm to head the new institution. The responsibility is tremendous, particularly at this critical time in world finance, and I'm looking for men."

Bowme laughed in a pleased tone. "Not for me?" he asked quickly, sharp, intelligent, alert.

Jamison walked across to the little tabaret where the cigars were and cast one scrutinizing glance toward Dolly Cavour, under the Chinese lanterns, her white silk, her white flesh, her white pearls expressing something of eternity, just as her hair, red and shimmering, suggested something of the ardent, vital, living present. He came back with the open box of maravillas in hand, holding it out ingratiatingly to the younger man. It was a little like one who shakes a box of oats under the nose of a fugitive horse while concealing a bridle in the other hand.

"You said I might not be looking for you, Bowme," he said. "Well, I am. It's at your risk. If you want to come along, say at twenty-five thousand a year, I'll give you one of the vice president jobs. As you know, we'll have vice presidents enough so that none of them will ever have bowing acquaintance with all the others, but there will be a job for you."

"And what?" asked the young Westerner, rather tense, for no doubt he was thinking that this meant also Dolly Cavour in the end.

"My idea is rather new," said Sanford Jamison, slowly. "The truth of the matter is that banking heretofore has always turned its back on public opinion. Rather, let me say, it has forgotten that the people are the ultimate source of assets and investment, and have been allowed to distrust their banks just as if banks were enemies of the people."

"Fundamentally, that is the truth," Bowme said, reflecting, as if to be sure that his admission would stand squarely, with all four legs upon the floor of his conscience.

"Briefly, then," said Jamison, tapping his cigar in time to the music and emphasizing the steps of the gay dancers and their flick and flash of patent leathers and little feet in gold and yellow, green and silver—"briefly, then, I'd rather like to have you come with us as the voice of the bank."

Bowme wet his lips. "I'm for that," he said, decisively.

"Very kind," Jamison said. "You will make a great success. I'm motoring over to my own place on the Point now. Good night."

He stopped for a moment by Dolly Cavour. "There is nothing immediate about this?" he asked. "I can't perform my promise in a moment."

She appeared a little vexed and a little curious and meditative about her own vexation; finally she smiled. "You're a dear," she said, lightly. "There is nothing immediate. He knows. We have spoken of it. He is to make his mark first. If you help, San, it will be very —white of you."

He smiled again, and said: "After all, you, too, love success."

And with that he found his chauffeur and went in his car, purring in an eight-cylinder way off among the pines.

* * * * * * * *

No one could doubt the growth of Owen Bowme as it followed that evening. From the obscurity of the Nearly-Theres he entered the fraternity of the Arriveds. When it was expected that the Bankers' Association of the United States was to hear E. Sanford Jamison at its annual meeting, Jamison was said to be quite ill. To speak for him and in his stead came one Owen Bowme. Oh, he was a vice president of the institution, eh? So that was it? Well, well! And listen to him. The after-dinner speech was usually so dull, or if not dull, was so trivial. Not Bowme's. It was much too good a performance. It showed keen knowledge of the world's financial problems.

The guests of the big convention banquet agreed that it was the speech of the evening. The press associations carried almost every word of it. A weekly financial review printed a picture of Owen Bowme and mentioned the great trust company with which he was now associated; it said that he had "hit the nail on the head." Even Dolly Cavour read with a thrill the account of that speech with her coffee served in a dainty set in her luxurious bed. She felt in touch with virile American manhood. And he was hers—if she wanted him—this good-looking Bowme from the West.

"I know men," said Sanford Jamison at the board meeting. "I picked Owen Bowme!"

The Rotary Club of Buffalo, N. Y., the Chamber of Commerce of some big place in Massachusetts, a convention meeting in Washington, D. C., where the President of the United States was to be the guest, and, all in all, some twenty-five other dinners, banquets and meetings asked that Owen Bowme be sent if, of course, the great Sanford Jamison himself could not come to address them.

"Really," said Jamison, with apparent sincerity, "the man has a wonderful advocate's skill; more than that, he has a wonderful voice. After all, I think I know men."

Bowme himself showed remarkable poise as a meteor blazing across the world of conventions, banquets and annual meetings.

Dolly Cavour thought so. She read with a friendliness almost amounting to a kind of maternal pride, the morning papers' accounts of Owen's words. Sitting up in her high Italian palace bedstead, with her coffee growing cold on her lap, she devoured the reports of what the man who had spoken so persuasively to her had said on such and such a financial subject at such and such a time to such and such a gathering of masters of finance and business. If the conscientiousness of Bowme's analyses of foreign exchange, the effect of tariffs and other economic walls, and so on and so on, made her scowl as if somehow she was willing to admit with shame the inadequacy of her understanding, nevertheless she found herself able to engage with a thrill in the intellectual flights taken by her cold-storage and deferred lover.

"It is quite wonderful, Owen, how you can make banking seem like some tremendous self-sacrifice," she said to him.

"I knew my man," said Jamison. "He can put a soul into business."

The board of directors of the "institution," as the officers like to call it, speaking in an italicized manner, began to see the value of "putting a soul" into the midst of their activity. It gave a comfortable sense of great good-heartedness and required no effort on their part. Owen Bowme was doing it for them.

He had become the grand gesture of the bank, and the board increased his stipend by a nonchalantly appropriated ten thousand.

* * * * * * * *

At the Reading-Huntley's ball in the middle of the winter season, E. Sanford Jamison, glorious as always in evening dress, bent over Dolly, with her plate of dainties summoned from the far corners of the epicurean world. "My dear girl," he was saying to her round little shoulder, "I do not see Owen Bowme with you tonight."

"No. He is a little fagged. He wrote me a note."

There must have been something ardent in the note, for Dolly for a moment cast her glance downward.

"So those were your mother's diamonds," Jamison said, with one of his characteristic diversions from his own line of thought—a line of thought which one suspected always ran its own course without diversion of any kind.

"Yes."

"It would not do for you to marry a poor or unsuccessful man," he said, laughing. "You are much too—what shall I say?—rare, precious, daintily regal."

"Nonsense! You are too old a friend to flatter me. And besides, though I suspect you are a tiny bit right, San, I want you to know that I'd rather like to picture myself as brave and worthy enough to be above worldliness—certainly in cases of love."

"I often wonder whether you have really ever loved anyone," he said, in the form of a leading question.

She ran her fan, of rare feathers, through her half-closed fingers. She did not answer, and the evasion appeared to be a clear admission that perhaps the banker was right.

"Some day something will stir me," she asserted. "I am sure of that."

"Of course," he said, smiling sardonically. "It would be interesting to know just what emotion will lead you along the path of the awakened heart."

There was an awkward pause.

"Needless to tell you that Owen Bowme is a great success," he said. "I told you I would do what I could to help. For I love you, Dolly. Don't be alarmed. I'm not getting sentimental. On the contrary, I was going to say that, after all, my part was nothing. Bowme has made his own way magnificently!"

He told her solemnly all that he must have guessed Bowme had told her—of the latter's brilliant rocketing as an oracle of the banquet. He listed the virtues of Bowme—sincerity, voice, ability to collect and digest facts, his subtlety as an advocate, his wisdom in restraint of statement.

"And yet," said Jamison, "there has only been the test of a year. Do you think he has quite proved that he is the permanently successful man you deserve for a mate?"

"No," she said. "But I have faith. And if you are worried, San, that I may do anything precipitate, I'll tell you as an old, old friend that he understands well enough that there will not even be any announcement under two years."

"Wise," said Jamison. "Like you, Dolly—wise! Yours is the vital nature of Venus, but yours also is the poise of Minerva!"

* * * * *

She felt the wisdom of that goddess, perhaps, when a month later she received the long letter—the longest Owen had ever written her. The postmark was Duluth; he had gone back to see his mother.

"I have played hooky from my job and will get four days of change," he wrote. "If the truth is told, I had to cancel seven engagements to do it, and this leads me to tell you that I never supposed the world held so many persons who wanted to hear any one man talk—particularly me. There is something intoxicating about it, so that it makes life a bit unreal—and wonderful. * * * Owen Bowme is a name I see so often! I have a strange sensation that I have never seen that man and do not know him.

"Sometimes my own voice does not sound to me as if it were mine. * * * I go to Atlantic City to the big railroad convention on Thursday, then back where I can see you and we can have one of our walks. * * * After all, I feel always a strange sense of emptiness of life. But I can write no more; a book entitled 'Railroad Operating Costs' is open before me, threatening my mind with tables of comparative statistics. My job is to make them quite romantic, and I have no heart for it. There is only one romantic thing, dear one, in my world."

Dolly looked in the proper morning newspaper for the report of that convention in Atlantic City. It occupied a column and a half, most of it given over to a speech by a Congressman, of whom she had never heard, the author of some piece of railroad legislation the name of which was Greek to her. At the bottom of the report it said: "Owen Bowme of New York and W. D. F. Murray of the British Ministry also spoke." Her smooth forehead knit in perplexity.

She asked E. Sanford Jamison, who came over to her and Jane Scolton when they were having tea at the Ritz after Mrs. Wardwarth's bridge, whether he had heard Powme's Atlantic City address.

"The best thing he has ever done!" was the banker's comment. "Of course, a great many of those present had heard Owen before this winter, but it was splendid—excellent!"

Dolly Cavour preferred to walk home alone in the cold, thinking. The sharp air deepened the color in her cheeks, but it also cleared her mind and deepened the color of her opinion.

Some time in March Jamison was dictating a telegram to Miss Shaw, his perennial stenographer, whose hair was white even at 30:

"Regret exceedingly that previous engagements prevent my speaking at banquet of your association on April second. My regards."

"You never speak?" said Miss Shaw, lightly, over her thin lips.

"Never."

He took up the letter from the president of the Hardware Manufacturers' Association and read the paragraph beginning: "We feel that Mr. Bowme is already too well appreciated by our members, who, of course, have listened with great pleasure to his words on many occasions, to urge now that he be placed upon our list of speakers, which is already too long. But, my dear Mr. Jamison, if you could find it possible"——

Jamison looked about at the chaste marble wainscoting of the president's room and threw the letter into the inlaid mahogany file basket.

"Never," said he. "Bowme has been a great success."

"Oh, Mr. Jamison, you do know men!" said Miss Shaw on that occasion. Her face was stony. It had learned to be.

In April the board of directors held their meeting and old Canford burst forth. He is a peppery, aged martinet, whose old-fashioned, conservative bank still holds its own. His face is the face of dyspepsia.

"What's this increase in the overhead expense?" he snarled. "It ought to be pared off instead of this damnable distention."

Jamison said, patiently: "We would be glad of suggestions, sir."

The old man caught the satirical import of the president's words and the flavor of challenge. He sprang to the fray. "Well, I'll make one," he barked. "Here's thirty-two thousand a year for Owen Bowme. Owen Bowme? Owen Bowme? I'm sick of the name, and so is everyone else. It's got so a man can't go to dinner without hearing the outpourings of a man who never did a thing in his life. I'd rather have the toastmaster call on one of the waiters for a change. The world is full of talk. There is a passion for talk. It's all talk and no action. That's the trouble with the world—talk, talk, talk, words, words, words. So bring on Owen Bowme. I'm tired of him, everyone else is tired of him; if you happen to be absent, you get what he said in a pamphlet that costs money to print and is read by no one. Owen Bowme is like the Anvil Chorus from 'Il Trovatore'—he's been played too much."

Canford gave a last breath for a snort.

"I'm inclined to agree," Palmer of the Occidental Ship and Trading Co. said, quietly.

"Very well, gentlemen," Jamison said. "I rather suspected that this would be your opinion in the end." He added under his breath: "I think I know men."

* * * * * * * *

It was not altogether a mere coincidence that Margery Bevans and her invalid husband gave a week-end party at the villa on the Long Island shore. The warmth of an early spring had its effect. There would be a moon. Furthermore, San Jamison had baldly suggested it; he had said: "Do you remember that other—it was quite wonderful!"

The night of the dinner a great dark cloud had hovered threateningly over the sunset, and Margery Bevans had said they would have to feed inside. But the wind dropped, the thread of the cloud fell over the edge of the West, and while the candles burned above the white linen, the sparkling glass and the pinks and greens of her famous hors d'oeuvres and the white and pink hands of the ladies, the moonlight fell in a gentle white veil over the tall cedars and the white marble and dark greens of the garden.

Dolly Cavour, always whimsical, wandered off alone, after the cigarettes were lit, down the gravel path. Jamison volunteered to tell her that they were all going to dance again, and went after her with Margery Bevans' voice following, as she called: "Dolly has a poetess hidden in her. Tell her to suppress it tonight. Six in the morning is the test for poetesses!"

He found Miss Cavour leaning on the rough granite wall at the far end of the garden, looking out over the mysterious, luminous sea. "Dolly."

"Hello, San."

"I've come back."

"Come back?"

'Yes, I'm the same old lover. Kept still all these months, but it's no different."

"Don't talk nonsense, San."

If he had listened intently, he might have sensed a menace in a new note in her voice; instead he was eager to talk. "Bowme has had his chance," he said. "You know that."

"Yes—and I know the outcome." She shook her head, and the glorious red of her hair took the moon's light for a nick of time.

"It is not exactly the thing for you, is it? I'm afraid he has talked himself to death."

She was silent.

"I want you to marry me, dear," he went on, leaning nearer to her meditative head. "There isn't much I cannot give you."

"You really propose that I"——

"Yes."

"Well, San, we are alone. Get ready, San. We are quite alone."

He looked up a little frightened. Miss Cavour was pointing to the sound of other steps coming down the path.

"I've only a moment," she said. "I suppose this is Owen coming. I asked him. He wanted to tell me, I suppose, that he has failed—failed miserably, dropped to the bottom, caught all that means utter discouragement—that he is even ridiculous, cheap—a common, undistinguished failure, plus absurdity; that he has, as you say, talked himself to death. I've only a moment to speak to you." She was breathing fast.

"Yes, dear."

"Well, San, you knew. You said you'd give me what I wanted in him. You knew all the time what the end would be. That was the kind of love you had for me—nothing but a selfish, intriguing wish for possession."

Her lips closed tightly before she asked: "And now that you have wrecked my hope, do you know what you can do?"

Jamison drew himself up. "Be careful what you say, Dolly."

"You understand me perfectly."

He walked quietly away, treading a little softly, as if to make a covert escape, and she turned again to gaze out over the mysterious sea.

* * * * * * * *

A few minutes later it was plain enough to Margery Bevans, who stood with Jamison on the edge of the terrace, that a woman of Dolly Cavour's intelligence must have intended that anyone who was looking should see.

The moon was quite bright still, though it had dropped near enough the horizon to be losing something of its white chastity in a blush. It outlined everything in the garden. It outlined Dolly Cavour.

She had moved one of her slender, graceful arms out and taken Owen Bowme's chin in the palm of her hand and raised it upward. It gave the impression of one who lifts a broken spirit. She must have known that anyone who looked could see, or perhaps it was nothing to her that she might be observed when she put herself with such complete abandon into Owen Bowme's arms.

"Well!" said Margery Bevans, in a voice disclosing a touch of embarrassment. "It appears—settled."

Jamison was staring with all the complete surprise of immaturity. For a moment he felt young and untutored indeed. If the wrath of impotence and defeat was in him, he concealed it as he turned away and allowed the yellow light of the lanterns to fall on his face. "Yes," he said, pulling his words. "Settled. Something must have awakened the things that slept somewhere in Dolly Cavour. I thought I knew"—

"Men," supplied Margery Bevans, who has much of insight. "But, my dear San, I fear you know very little about women." (Copyright.)

AMERICANS TO AID RUSSIAN SCIENTISTS WITH LITERATURE

AN AMERICAN Committee to Aid Russian Scientists With Scientific Literature has been formed to supply Russian men of science with the results of American scientific work accomplished since 1914.

The committee consists of Dr. Vernon Kellogg, secretary of the National Research Council, chairman; Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the Bureau of Entomology, Department of Agriculture; Dr. David White, chief geologist, U. S. Geological Survey, and Dr. Raphael Zon, chief of forest investigations, U. S. Forest Service. It has arranged with the American Relief Administration to receive contributions of scientific literature at New York and transport them to Russia.

The American committee is a voluntary and temporary organization of scientific men and it has no money for the purchase of scientific books, periodicals or papers. It has therefore called upon publishers, societies and individual authors to contribute copies of their publications to scientific institutions through their organization.

Through many sources appeals are coming from Russian botanists, zoologists, chemists, physicists, geologists, engineers and others for the recent literature in their respective fields. The craving of these men for contact with the rest of the scientific world is very great.

The committee desires chiefly to obtain scientific books, scientific periodicals, authors' reprints, publications of Government and state scientific bureaus, scientific institutions and university presses which are of an original scientific character or contain technical information, and which have appeared since 1914.

There is in Russia a fairly large number of scientific institutions. It is out of the question at the present time to undertake to supply adequately all those institutions with literature, but the committee hopes to provide at least six copies of each publication, since it feels that this number may meet at least the more urgent needs of the Russian centers of scientific endeavor at Moscow, Petrograd, Kazan, Kiev, Odessa, and a few other principal university cities.

WHY AIRPLANE RIDE HAS CURED SPEECH DEFECTS

ALL the genuine cures of speech defects which have been made by sending patients on airplane flights probably could have been brought about through psycho-analysis, declare scientists at Washington, D. C.

Dr. Charles H. McEnerney, executive officer of the United States Public Health Service, and the first physician successfully to treat speech disorders by regularly prescribed airplane flights, says that the cases he has treated in this way are those which previously he had definitely diagnosed as hysteria and was perfectly certain that what was required was to make the patient forget himself. The object of the air trip was to scare him so as to overcome the inhibition which prevented his talking.

Dr. C. E. Seashore, head of the division of psychology of the National Research Council, says that this matter of shocking the nervous system into a normal condition is entirely possible, but that the psychologist could do the same thing by the use of hypnotism or merely through ordinary suggestion.

"No mere riding tamely along in a passenger plane on an even keel is likely to cause a person to regain his talking powers," Dr. McEnerney says. "When the patient feels himself being taken up 12,000 or 14,000 feet or more, and then suddenly the machine does a nose dive or a loop-the-loop, the sufferer from hysteria is likely to forget his other troubles in the presence of danger.

"I selected the airplane for my work because it was the most convenient means at hand. The same thing might have been accomplished by tieing the patient to the railroad track. The novelty, surprise or scare are the main features of the cure. Aviators could not be helped because they would be used to the air thrills.

"There may also be some beneficial effect from the high altitude. It is generally recognized in the treatment of throat trouble that high, dry atmosphere is advantageous. The upper air is rare, germless and pure, and aviators claim that they feel much better when they are aloft.

"When I take a patient airplaning, I accent the possibility of the rare gases of the upper atmosphere helping him. They may, you know. As far as we know definitely, however, the airplane flight makes a man talk by scaring him, and it might also render a talking man speechless in the same way."

Scaring a man to speech is the doctor's application of mother's home remedy of curing hiccups by frightening her child.

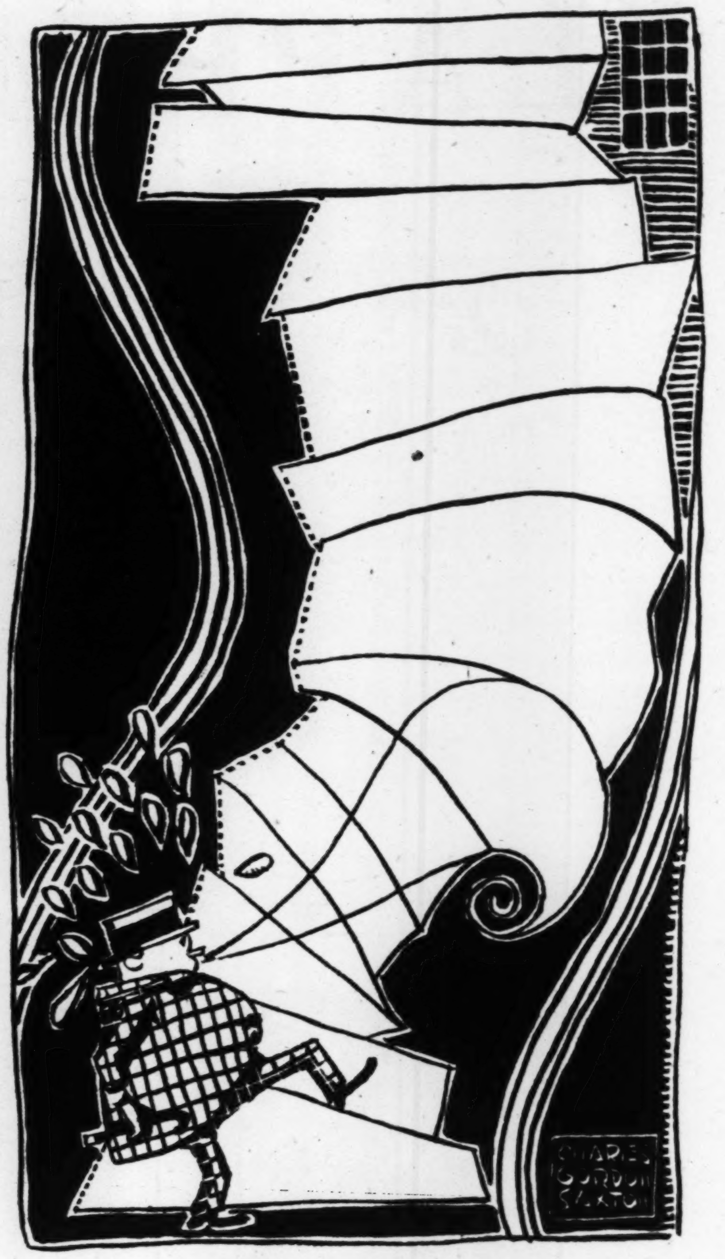
The Vitalic Sniff

This new exercise is expected to scrap the elevators when everybody has learned how to mount stairs in comfort—Now a sniff and then a step will make the climber "full of pep" —After the technic of sniffing has been learned the finishing touches are put on by the vitalic sway ::

MAYOR HYLAN.



HERE is a new form of physical development exercise which has an odd quality The more you sniff at it the more good it does you.

Police departments in several cities are considering taking it up. A start already has been made in New York, where Mayor Hylan recently demonstrated the efficacy of the "Vitalic Sniff" by marching five miles at the head of the annual police parade and mounting the reviewing stand at the end without the slightest indication of fatigue.

"Can you climb ten flights of stairs rapidly without suffering lung fatigue or becoming short-winded?

"No, you cannot.

"Then can you climb five flights of stairs?

"You still answer in the negative.

"Even at three flights you shake your head.

"But Vitalic Breathing will make stair-climbing a pleasure and not a wearying strain."

That is the challenge thrown out by Thomas R. Gaines in his new "Vitalic Breathing" (Reilly & Lee), a book "dedicated to humanity," which outlines a novel and extremely simple method of preserving vigor, vim and perfect trim. The Vitalic Sniff and the Body-building Blow, practiced by the properly trained abdomen, chest and nose—mouth breathing is forbidden—aim to make upstanding, sunny-spirited men of us all. This has already been done, asserts Mr. Gaines, for Mayor Hylan and Police Commissioner Enright, who have completed their course of exercises on the roof of the Rodin Studios.

The Rodin Studios is a sixteen-story apartment house. Mr. Gaines and his pupils do not use the elevators. They apply the Vitalic Method while mounting the stairs. And anyone can do it, as no apparatus is required.

"A bodily infirmity," writes this physical culturist, "most often makes its presence known in the lack of ability to climb a hill or a flight of stairs. If you have to breath through your mouth while mounting, or if you are winded after a few minutes of it, you are not breathing properly, or you have not cultivated proper endurance by the daily use of Vitalic Breathing.

"It is my firm belief, founded on observation and tests by my pupils, that daily stair-climbing is an exercise that will remake the body unless one is suffering from tuberculosis or heart disease."

Here is a boon to housewives who suffer most from their daily task of stair climbing. To mount a dozen flights quickly, with a minimum of lung fatigue and without becoming short-winded or distressed, follow these directions:

"As you place your right foot on the first step, sniff in a short, jerky breath and hold it; as you place your left foot on the second step, take a second such sniff. As you place your right foot on the third step, forcibly exhale both breaths. Then immediately, at the fourth step, duplicate the procedure, and continue to breathe that way until you have reached the top. You will be astonished at how little lung fatigue you will experience.

"Do not forget to keep the mouth tightly closed while climbing—always use the nose for exhaling and inhaling. Endeavor at all times to inhale while the weight of the body is supported on one foot."

It will be seen from the above that Vitalic Breathing is simplicity itself and can be applied to all kinds of exercise besides that of stair climbing. The technique of hill-climbing is essentially the same as the method explained above. Swimming is the only form of movement in which Mr. Gaines allows mouth-breathing, or "gulping."

For walking and running, which are, after all, Nature's perfect exercise, Mr. Gaines has worked out complete tables for the alternating short sniffs and exhalations. They follow:

"These combinations of Vitalistic Breathing," writes Mr. Gaines, "have been thoroughly tested and will suit the great majority of people. Practice the combination best fitted to your breathing apparatus."

For those who find this method valuable and who wish to practice it still further, there follow a few special body-building exercises such as this:

THE VITALIC SWAY—Directions: Stand perfectly erect, with the heels about 15 inches apart. Bend the body and the head over as far as possible to the left side. Resist a tendency to lean backward or forward by keeping the head in line with the legs. As you proceed to bend the body, raise the right arm as high as possible well above your head and over to the left, touch your left leg as far down as possible with the left hand and raise the heel of the right foot off the ground (Figure 1). Then reverse the same motions to the right side (Figure 2). The knees must not be bent. In all there are four motions simultaneously executed: Bending the body, stroking the leg, raising the arm and lifting the heel (Figure 3).

"This is the best all-around stretching exercise I know of," says Mr. Gaines. "Much benefit will follow its practice two or three minutes daily. It stretches, stimulates and strengthens the entire body."

To use the Vitalic Sway as an exercise in mental concentration proceed as follows: As you bend the body to the left side and raise your right arm you call out loudly, "One." As you bend over to the right side and raise the left arm, you call, "A." Swinging back to the left side you call, "Two," and then to the right you call, "B," and so on until the entire alphabet is called off. Remember that the right hand represents figures and the left hand the letters of the alphabet. When you have mastered calling numbers and letters correctly, then proceed to the next stage, calling the alphabet backward. The first motion while raising the right hand call, "One," the second motion, while raising the left hand, call, "Z," and so on until you finish the alphabet at "A." Then proceed to the third stage, calling the alphabet backwards and forwards. Thus, as you raise the right arm and bend to the left, call, "One;" as you bend to the right, call, "A," then to the left, call, "Two," then to the right, call, "Z," then to the left, call, "Three," then to the right, call, "B," then to the left, call, "Four," then to the right, call "Y," and so on until the alphabet is counted and called correctly. In this fashion you are exercising your body and improving your memory.

BREATHING DIRECTIONS—Sniff in twice while throwing the arms to the right side, then forcibly exhale while returning arms to the left side. Breathe through the nose only. When using this exercise for concentration purposes breathe in the ordinary fashion, as you are using the mouth for speaking.

Thomas R. Gaines presents his own personal case as the prime illustration of the things that Vitalic Breathing can do for a man. At the close of his service with the United States army in the Spanish-American War, his measurements were as follows:

Height, 5 feet 9 1-2 inches.
Weight, 115 pounds.
Chest contracted, 30 inches.
Chest expanded, 31 1-2 inches.
Health and vitality in a most impaired state.

In 1920, after 22 years of practice with his new method, he measured:

Height, 5 feet 11 1-2 inches.
Weight, 185 pounds.
Chest contracted, 36 1-2 inches.
Chest expanded, 43 1-2 inches.
Health and vitality in a supreme condition.

This transformation was effected by an application of the principle of Vitalic Sniff to every phase of the man's physical life, including sleeping and eating. His regained vigor of mind and body has enabled him to achieve a position as executive chief of the largest department of a commercial establishment doing an annual business of $10,000,000.

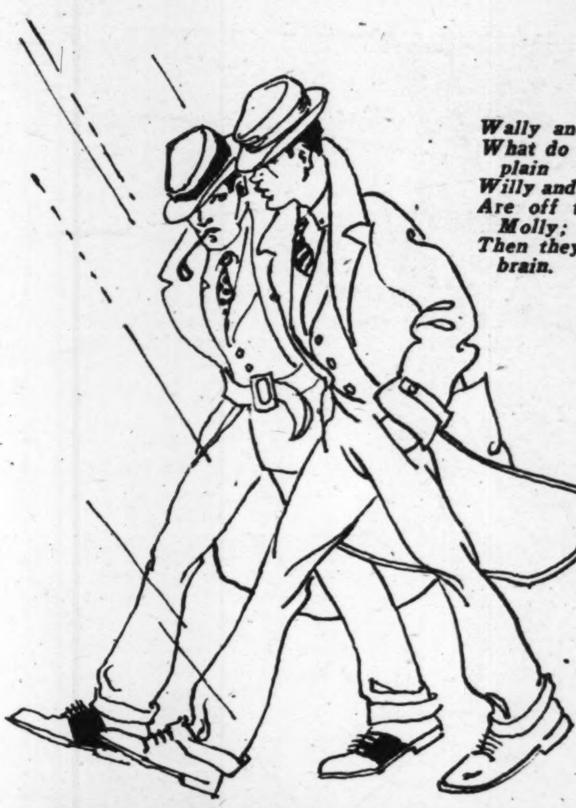
Full instructions for following this brilliant example are to be found in Mr. Gaines' book, together with a glossary of anatomical terms which informs the reader, among other things, that "nasal" means "of or pertaining to the nose," and that the abdominal organs are "those organs located in the abdomen."

FLAPPERS

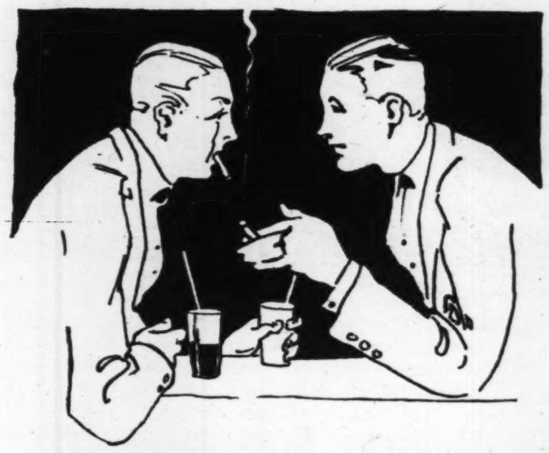
THE FEMALE OF THE SPECIES HAS A STURDY RIVAL NOW

HERE, ladies and gentlemen, you see before you the fruits of protest. Cast your eyes down this page of drawings and note the attitudes of the various youths scattered thereon. They make up a part of what is known notoriously as the younger generation. As such, they are destroying traditions, breaking through the barriers of environment, cultivating new views and shocking the world in general. They wear clothes men never have dared to wear before. They have revolutionized and almost done away with dancing. It is even rumored that they have invented new swear words. Those who don't drink tea drink liquor.

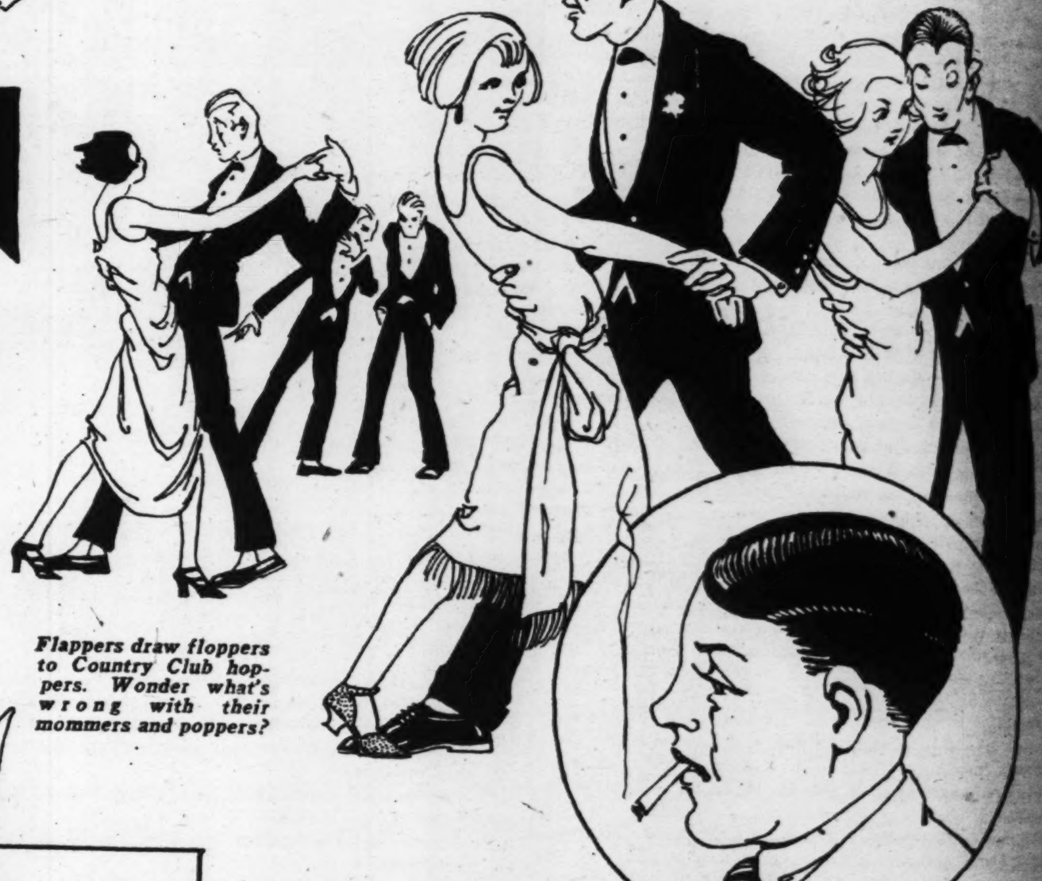
In helping his flapper sister protest against civilization, the flopper, or he-flapper, is unconsciously emulating her. Watch him as he walks down the street with a feather tucked snugly in his hatband. Note the long flapper stride. Witness the golf stockings and scarfs. Look at the literature he reads, the cigarette holder he uses. Then peek into the tea shops he frequents. It is said that the latest style of dancing is performed with the woman leading the man. Tobacconists report a greater sale of perfumed cigarettes and are putting out a daintier grade of pipes for the flopper to use. The girls are keeping address books and the poor men have no rest from the telephone all day.



Wally and Willy are out in the rain.
What do they care? for the fact's very plain
Willy and Wally, these he-flappers jolly,
Are off to a tea-talk with Milly and Molly;
Then they'll have water-and-tea on the brain.

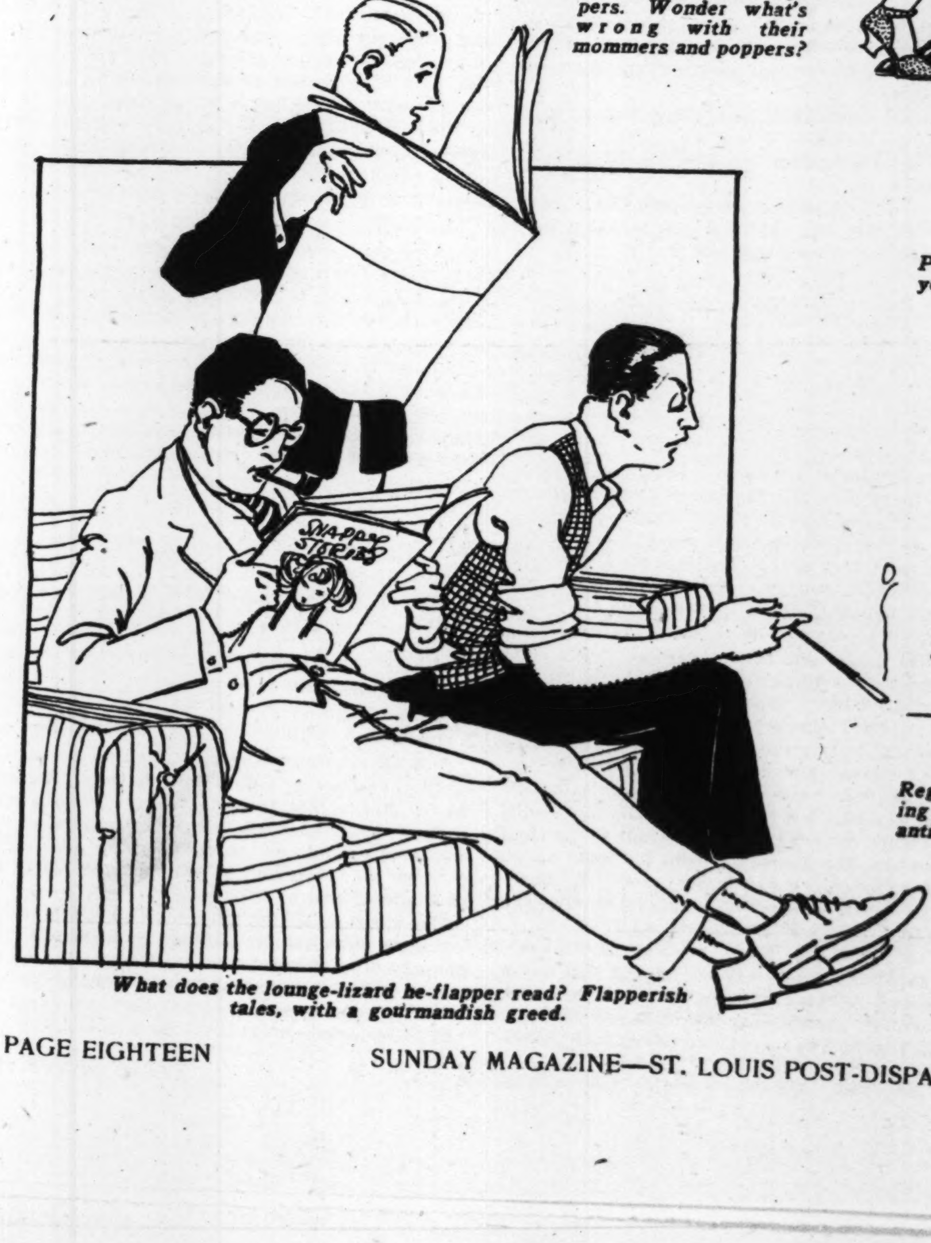


Archie and Artie are happy and hearty,
Having a soft-drink-and-cigarette party.

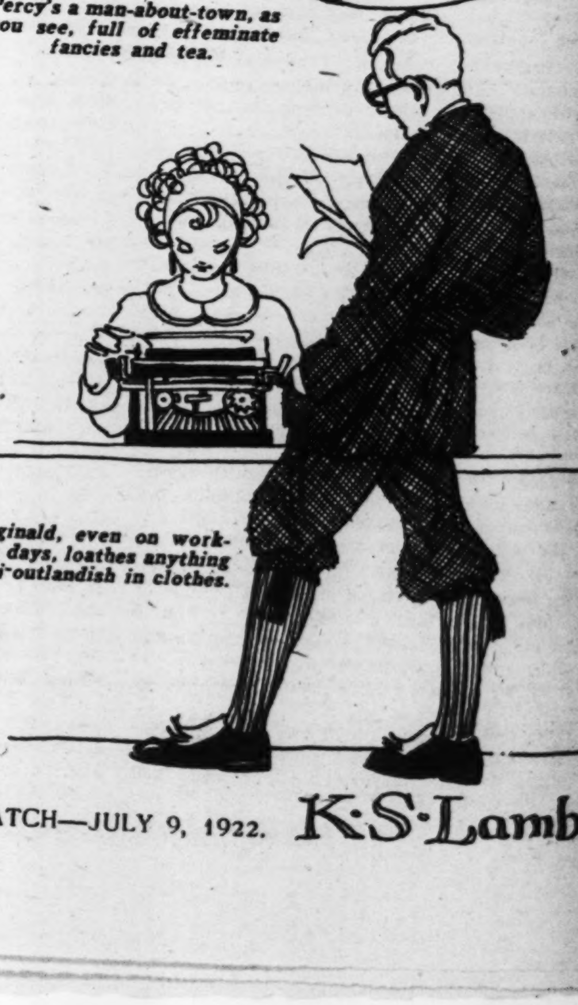


Flappers draw floppers to Country Club hoppers. Wonder what's wrong with their mommers and poppers?

Percy's a man-about-town, as you see, full of effeminate fancies and tea.



What does the lounge-lizard he-flapper read? Flapperish tales, with a gourmandish greed.



Reginald, even on working days, loathes anything anti-outlandish in clothes.

DR. WALTER FRANKLIN PRINCE, chief research officer for the American Society for Psychical Research, who laid the Antigonish "ghost," is making interesting revelations of the methods which he uses in running down and exposing fake slate writers, spirit pho- graphers and tricky materializing mediums and tracking spoofy spooks to their lairs.

He pays his respects to a famous fictional detec- in this way, in an article in the current issue of Scientific American:

"The great method of detection which combines h and completes every other is inspection of all details, their analysis and classification and final- their synthesis—putting them together much as puts together the pieces of a dissected picture. Sherlock Holmes method is impossible—outside novels. With Holmes a peculiar cigar ash was a tain indication of the burglar's taste in cigars, reas in life it might have been the first time that ever happened to smoke that brand. With Holmes pipe charred on the left side made it certain that possessor was a left-handed man, but in life a icular right-handed man might have the idiosyn- y of lighting his pipe with that side presented to gas flame. Men, in fact, are not automata and in similar effects may come from a dozen causes. by the collection, analysis, classification and final bination of details, so that each finds its appro- ate place, psychic fraud or delusion can usually be ught to light and demonstrated."

Other duties of a psychic investigator as outlined Dr. Prince are to test whether the effect actually ieved can be achieved under the circumstances imed; to re-enact what you think the person did then see if the result is similar; to consider what der the circumstances a person of that psycho- gical makeup would have been likely to do and to pare with the marks actually in the case studied.

In his article Dr. Prince says that careful study of personal characteristics of mediums, including ir handwriting, has often led him to the conclusion t the alleged "spirit" was in reality the medium king with fraudulent intent.

He gives this account of his detection of a slate- iting fraud:

"A few years ago a lawyer residing in a city of the te of New York and who had for years experi- nted with a slate-writing medium, produced a book strated with the scripts of 50 or more purported rits. In this book he declared that these scripts in y instances were recognized by him as having the racteristics of the actual life writing of his rela- es and friends whom the communicant spirits imed to be. If this similarity existed, it could be ted by well-known methods; and the investigator ing made handwriting one of his studies for many rs, requested the privilege of carrying out such s. Properly enough, the lawyer required a dem- stration of the investigator's ability in this line of rk; and one of the tests proposed and accepted was proof, in detail, that the lawyer himself had not itten the scripts. The lawyer's writing and the it messages were given a two hours' examination the results put before the lawyer. On the law- 's own admission, more knowledge was adduced the peculiarities of his writing than he himself had ned in 40 years. Other tests were met with equal isfaction; the lawyer was satisfied with the in- tigator's ability to proceed, and furnished all nec- ry material.

"Since this particular medium is so outstanding figure, it was thought worth while to make the in- tigation an exhaustive one. Briefly summarized, se are the results:

"In no case did the spirit script correspond with life script of the purported writer, and in every multiplied reasons were given for this judgment.

"Common characteristics were found to run through entire series of 'spirit' scripts, and this asser- was not only made, but amply demonstrated, so t any tyro could easily test it for himself. One t of this test was to use a random set of 100 life ipts and to ascertain the percentages by which several characteristics appeared in this series of ually different scripts.

"With some difficulty, samples of the medium's n writing were procured and the same char- teristics were demonstrated to be found therein. On basis of the percentages according to which six selected characteristics of the 'spirit' scripts were found in the letters of the hundred group, it was demonstrated that a finding of simply these six peculiarities in the medium's own writing had less than one chance in 200,000 of happening by mere coincidence.

"In addition, certain other tests were employed, such as the finding of mannerisms of speech running through the purported spirit writing to a degree far beyond what could happen by chance. Also a peculiar tendency on the part of the spirits, with different sitters, to draw forget-me-nots. And the finding, upon slates sent to the American Society for Psychical Research, of four almost identical infantile drawings representing two men engaged in fisticuffs, one a tall man with traces of a beard and wearing a tall hat, the other a short man with traces of long hair, whose derby hat had fallen from his head. These drawings were made by different 'spirits,' for different sitters, at different dates, ranging eleven years apart. All this seems to imply that the four artists belonged to one family if they did not reside under one hat."

A brother of this American slate writer is a "spirit photographer" in England. Recounting his experiences and methods in running down this alleged medium of the camera, Dr. Prince writes:

"This man, for the benefit of a wealthy sitter, produced many hundreds of photographs purporting to be those of a clergyman who died some years ago. This spirit is represented as doing all sorts of things—dancing, walking, gesticulating, playing the piano or violin, viewing the wonders of the Yosemite Valley, parading in the robes of a Bishop, etc., etc. Almost infinite variety occurs—except in relation to the head, which never varies an eighth of an inch from two angles, precisely those of the two photographs of the clergyman owned by the sitter. The head itself varies only in particulars which could easily be the result of manipulation, and which palpably show the effects of manipulation, such as bleaching, retouching, paring away a portion of the hair on the forehead, and so on. Probably from a reluctance to show a spirit wearing spectacles, generally those useful articles are erased. Sometimes this is done imperfectly, so as to show portions of the bows; or if completely, necessarily so as to destroy a portion of the eye and show a curious white line on the temple and a corresponding notch in the hair where the bow had been.

"Some feeble attempt was made to defend these photographs on the claim that the spirit was influenced by his memory of the life photographs, but he certainly could not have remembered himself indulging in a dance that was not invented until after his death, nor as occupying a suit of George Washington, recognizable from a famous painting, nor as having his head attached now to a short, thick body and again to a long, thin one. Of course, these peculiar effects were the result of attaching the head to bodies with which it never belonged, and in some cases the line of junction was left apparent. In many of the photographs there was double or triple lighting, resulting from one or two figures being introduced into a scene without regard to consistency in this respect. There were photographs of the 'temple' in which the clergyman is supposed now to be preaching in paradise, and which corresponded exactly with one of the buildings of the Panama-Pacific Exposition—even to the Grecian fringe of nude figures.

"Another building, supposed to be associated with him in his present abode, also corresponds to one of the exposition buildings and the reflected lights in the streets outside show that it was a rainy night in heaven when it was taken.

"In connection with the same series an example may be given of what appeared on the face of it to be a convincing testimony, but which was riddled by analysis. A certain person sat to this photographer and afterwards received by mail a photograph which she pronounced to be her own and the exact replica of one that had been taken of her some years previously, but which had been unfortunately destroyed. Of course, this misfortune made it impossible to make a direct comparison, but it still chanced that the lady's accuracy could be tested. For in a second letter she stated that another remarkable fact was that the later photograph showed her wearing the garb of a religious order which she had thought of joining, but which garb she had in fact never worn. When the photograph was examined it was found that the garb constituted the whole picture with the exception of a very small part of the features taken in profile. Her picture was actually taken by the spirit photographer; and the outline of her forehead, nose and mouth probably have not changed much in a few years. As nothing else in the later picture, by her own second statement, is to be found in the earlier one, the marvel as announced in her first letter seems quite to have disappeared; there could have been no difficulty in cutting out a small portion of her profile portrait and introducing it into the hood of the vestment."

These two pictures adorned "spirit messages" delivered at different times eleven years apart, to different people, by different "spirits." The only thing that was the same was the medium—and the curious picture of the tall man and short man fighting.

New Beauty In 30 Minutes Through Amazing Clay Discovery

Science Is Giving New Complexions for Old This Marvelous Quick Way

WOULDN'T you like to exchange the complexion you now have for one of clear, fresh beauty? You can—through the discovery of a remarkable new kind of clay.

Science has found that when certain elements are combined in certain proportions, the result is a smooth, cream-like clay with unusual potency. When it is applied to the face every bit of dust, dirt and dead skin, no matter how deeply imbedded in the pores, is forced to let go—is drawn out and lifted away just as though millions of tiny magnets were at work. Gently, firmly the pores are cleansed, the blackheads and blemishes are absorbed, and when the clay is removed the complexion is found to be as clear and smooth as a child's.

Is it some new kind of magic? Is there some mysterious power in this new cream-like, perfumed clay? What can it be that so quickly gives new beauty to the complexion?

How Hidden Beauty Is Unmasked

Science explains it all very simply. The skin is provided by nature with millions of tiny pores with which to expel acids and impurities. When bits of dead skin and dust clog the pores—as they do every day—the impurities cannot escape. They remain in the pores. Impurities form in the clogged pores, and soon the face "breaks out" in pimples and blackheads.

Washing, creaming and other ordinary methods cannot clear the stifled pores—cannot remove the tiny masses of accumulation beneath the surface of the skin. The true beauty of the complexion is simply covered up, buried. Before it can be brought to the surface again the blackheads and pimpleheads must be removed, the stifled pores cleared of impurities.

Domino Complexion Clay, the new scientific discovery, absorbs blackheads and pimpleheads as a blotter absorbs a drop of ink. It is applied to the face just as an ordinary cream would be applied. In a few moments it dries and hardens into a fragrant mask, and as it hardens you feel the tiny pores breathing, relaxing, freeing themselves of the stifling impurities. It is like feeling the new beauty coming!

The remarkable Clay works on every inch of the face. Not a pore can escape, not a bit of dead skin or dust can remain. As Domino Complexion Clay hardens into a mask on your face, all blemishes, skin poisons and impurities are absorbed in it — and when you remove the clay mask, at the end of thirty minutes, a complexion of clear, fresh, radiant beauty will be found underneath!

FORTY MINUTES!

A clay of such amazing powers no less than a dozen imitations have sprung into being; applied in a moment; starts its work in ten more minutes; and—

—In forty minutes, wiped away, the clay has forced the clarity and color of youth to any human skin on which it is applied. A new triumph of dermatology

A New Skin in 40 Minutes with this Astounding Beauty Clay!

How a Pleasure Trip to Sunny Wales Uncovered a Secret of Mother Earth's That Forever Ends Any Woman's Need for a Complexion Beautifier

By MARTHA RYERSON

I HAVE brought to America the greatest news women ever heard about the skin. From Wales where I spent a month without seeing a single bad complexion! I went there with a complexion that had been my despair since childhood. One afternoon I left it in the hills; exchanged it for one of absolute purity and undoubtable natural color.

Except that I can now let you prove it for yourself, I would never tell the story — a story my own father found it hard to believe!

Hardest of all to believe is this; the trantormation took just forty minutes! Here are the facts:

About the first thing one notices in this southern English province, is the uniformly beautiful complexions. The lowliest maid—and her mother, too—has a radiantly beautiful skin. Mine, lacking lustre and color, with impurities nothing seemed to eradicate or even hide, was horribly conspicuous.

It was a happy thought that took a most unhappy girl on a long walk through the hills one afternoon. I had stopped at the apothecary's to replenish my cosmetic—to find it was unknown. They did not have even a cold cream. The irony of it! In a land where beauty of face was in evidence at every turn—the women used no beautifiers! Do you wonder I "took to the hills?" I didn't want to see another peaches-and-creamy complexion that day. But I did.

At a house where I paused for a drink from the spring, I stepped back in surprise when the young woman straightened-up to greet me. Her face was covered with mud. I recognized the peculiar gray clay of that section; very fine, sleek, smooth clay it was. Seeing my surprise, the girl smiled and said, "Madam does not clay?" I admitted I did not!

I Decide to "Clay"

In a moment, she wet the clay which had dried on her face and neck, wiped it away, and stood in all the glory of a perfect complexion. I think I shall never again envy another as I did that stolid maiden of the hills. Her features were not pretty; they did not need to be. For no woman ever will have a more gorgeous skin. She explained that this amazing clay treatment did it. The natives made a weekly habit of "claying" the skin, quite as one cares regularly for the hair.

I was easily persuaded to try it. Had I not done ridiculous things in beauty parlors where many could see my plight? We tucked a towel over my blouse, and from the spring's bed she took the soft, soothing clay and applied it.

As we sat and talked, the clay dried. Soon I experienced the most delightful tingling in every facial pore; the impurities were being literally pulled out. Half an hour more, and we removed the clay mask. Hopeful, but still skeptical, I followed into the tiny house to glimpse myself in a mirror.

My blemishes were gone!

I fairly glowed with color that spread down the neck to the shoulders. My cheeks were so downy soft, I felt them a hundred times on the way home. Father's surprised look when I entered the rooms of the little inn that evening was the most genuine compliment a woman ever received. In a basket I had two crocks of the precious clay. I thought father's questions would never end; where did I find it; could I take him to the spot; what was its action, and reaction, and lots else I didn't know. Father is a chemist.

Suddenly it dawned on me. He wanted to unearth the secret of that clay's amazing properties, and take it to America! For two weeks we staid on; he worked all day at his "mud pies" as I called them. Back home at last in Chicago, he worked many weeks more. He experimented on me, and on all my girl friends. At last, he scientifically produced clay identical with that Welsh clay in its miraculous effects—only ten times more smooth and pure.

Anyone May Now Have This Wonderful Clay

News of the wonders performed by this clay has brought thousands of requests for it. Women everywhere (and men too, by the way) are now supplied Forty Minute Clay. The laboratory where it is compounded sends it direct to the user. A jar is five dollars, but I have yet to hear of anyone who did not regard it worth several times that amount. For mind, in over six hundred test cases, it did not once fail. It seems to work on all ages, and regardless of how pimpled, clogged or dull the skin may be.

The application is readily made by anybody, and the changes brought about in less than an hour will cause open-mouthed astonishment. I know.

When I see a woman now, with a coarse-textured skin that mars the whole effect of her otherwise dainty care of self, it is all I can do to refrain from speaking of this natural, perfectly simple way to bring a skin and color such as Nature meant us to have—and has given us the way to have.

Keep your skin pores clean, open, tingling with life! My father has made you a remarkable offer below. Read carefully:

FREE DISTRIBUTION OF $5⁰⁰ JARS

(Only One Jar to a Family)

The general public is entitled to benefit by a discovery of this importance. So, for a limited time we will distribute regular, full-size $5.00 jars of Forty Minute Clay without profit—at only the actual cost, which is $1.87.

You may have your first jar for only this bare cost of getting it in your hands! The expenses of compounding, refining, analyzing, sterilizing, packing, printed announcements, and shipping in large quantity has been figured down to $1.87 per jar, plus postage.

Even the small laboratory cost price of $1.87 for ingredients, shipping, etc., is not really a payment; rather, a deposit that we will promptly return if you are not unreservedly satisfied that this miracle clay is all we claim.

Send no money now. Pay postman the net laboratory charges of $1.87 plus postage, when he brings your jar. Or, if unlikely to be home at mail time, enclose $2.00 and jar will arrive postpaid, with the same money-back guarantee.

I can assure any man or woman who will try this miracle of Nature's own chemical laboratory a re-made skin.
